I Peter Deiana in proper person, refuse from this day forward to be bullied, threatened and treated with such a disgusting disregard to my civil and constitutional rights by your office, the family court system as a whole and the attorneys that continuously get well compensated for openly helping their clients that have the financial means to hire these dirtbags commit serious offenses; criminal offenses and hide them from prosecution under the cover of the family courts. Now this isn't true for all litigants; It stands true if you are of the female sex you very easily can get away with serious serious criminal offenses, offenses that carry felony d and worse charges! In my particular cases (plural) the justice system we know as family courts has failed me twice. completely ruined my life to where i've contemplated taking my own life. both these women have committed serious criminal offenses against myself your office and the courts. I have more than enough proof; I have presented my obligation of proof in the first case with Rebecca Deiana, Stiltz, and whatever she has changed her name to now, Hinkle I believe. Multiple jurisdictions multiple courts multiple child support offices multiple counties and states and always the legal system fails to take responsibility and do what they are obligated to do.... RIGHT THE WRONGS AND PUNISH THE CRIMINALS> It has been shown to me over and over again that the judges that have been elected to their benches fail us as men over and over and over again because it is much easier for them to continue their careers under the cover of "the norm and acceptable" then to take a stand and risk the persecution by their piers then to believe that the things that I and i'm sure 1000's o other men have accused these women of doing; THAT IN FACT THESE WOMEN ARE VERY CAPABLE OF COMMITTING THESE GROSS AND COMPLETE LACKING OF REMORSE AND MORAL STANDARDS IF ANY STANDARDS AT ALL!!! Somebody needs to take a stand and change your spineless practices and start prosecuting these women and judges and attorneys that are ruining; completely ruining countless lives day in and day out and at day end never giving them another thought as the add to our homeless, add to our drug addiction epidemic, add to the horrible rise in suicides and worse of all add the number of children that grow up without a father, when the father wanted nothing more than to be a father to that child and the growing number of our youth that are suffering from mental instability issues handed down from you officials showing total disregard to the long term consequences of your actions. When did we stop caring about what was right and wrong and right in front of our faces and start ruining lives because this book says here says such and such is the only scenario possible and this party should always be given no doubt to the statements being true. Over the last six to seven months I have studied so much on family law and scenarios that are documented as case study and opinions and turned into the bible on how to deal with certain offenses, to the point that nobody has to think nobody has to use common sense just open the book and the book will cast a shadow on the offending party and on with the ruining of lives we go. so much studying it literally made me sick to see how many regulations and statues as case studies and laws where written and published being completely sexiest and against the man from beginning to end. That is what got us here today, it started a movement by these women that should be stripped of their parental rights for doing these acts toward and directly affecting the innocent children the family courts says they act in the best interest of. Completely not A TRUE STATEMENT ON THE COURTS PART. iF i CAN TAKE THE N.R.S THAT EXPRESSES HOW THE SYSTEM SHOULD COME TO THEIR CONCLUSION ON THE BEST INTEREST OF CHILD, AND I can with out a doubt that these women especially Ashley have violated ever one of the regulating factors of these guidelines and ultimately gets ignored and swept aside by rebuttals of complete lies false allegations and perjury and all out fraud. Well I am going to be making that stand myself!!! I WILL NOT GO ALONG WITH EITHER COURT ORDER OF SUPPORT FROM THIS DAY FORWARD. Instead I will be continuing this front against both parties, the courts and the lawyers at fault for letting these behaviors and actions continue on without consequence but with out a doubt is ruining countless amounts of lives day in and day out. This needs to change. I have written a great number of emails to a great number of agencies and offices about the specifics of my current case or onset of false allegations, false police reports, crimes against my person and crimes against public, perjury, fraud upon the courts, fraudulently presenting herself as a victim of specific domestic violence acts that she Ashley, actually committed against myself in the direct presence of my children, child abduction and serious onset of alienation.Alienation of affection; a multiple year onslot of alienation delivered by my wifes mother directly and personally. And more, all provable, most are very obvious. obvious and very provable case of multi state criminal conspiracy involving a minimum of 5 individuals which includes but not limited to false testimonies/willingness to provide false testimonies, to do with false criminal allegations to gain imprisonment of myself and judgements in my wife's favor. including my wife's attorney, her brother her mother her father her friend and our babysitter Jamie Houston resident of enterprise, southern highlands in southern las vegas and runs a day care that is past legal capacity on most days in reference to license, employees, space and number of children. Her brother Rob Mcclelland resides in albuquerque new mexico, Mother and father Kathi and Bob McClelland from Tucumcari, new mexico and own 2 pharmacys and is currently under their second serious investigation by the pharmacy board for illegal practices and distributions of controlled and dangerous drugs. It should be known I am a main witness and have provided a great deal of evidence in this case with the pharmacy board of new mexico and these people know this to be true and I propose a threat to their fraudulent and illegal lifestyle. Attorney is Gary Zernich and is very privy to all this information and knows it to be true and has taken a personal interest toward destroying my character and continues to help his client in her hidden and illegal agendas. Now know all these statements to be very true and that I do hold evidence and proof to all accusations i have made in this statement and all others I have written and will continuously write and distribute thru out until Justice; true justice prevails. And I will take this to the upper courts and will continue to insist somebody of authority stands up and takes charge and these individuals are rightfully charged and prosecuted with the criminal charges they deserve and my children are reunited with me and my civil, personal and constitutional rights are no longer being violated. I will not tolerate being illegally and fraudulently being stripped of my rights to a father/child relationship for 6-7 months now; completely denied over 600 attempts at visitation will also being abused under the cover of the family courts. And I definitely will not fund these women's fraudulent and illegal activities with $1600.00 a month in judgements against me. I havent made $1600.00 a month in at least the last 3 months!!!! and recently find myself unemployed. Even though my wifes reward from success in her agendas against me is becoming a million aire (no longer cut off from family money and inheratances by her mother) I will have no argument to taking care of my responsibilities but not under these circumstances. I will prevail in complete reversals in both cases. If you feel that it proves a point or somehow helps or fixes anything by putting me in jail, then so be it. I will add wrongful imprisonment to the fight and will immediately continue my fights for justice against the unbelievable actions of these women the second and every time I am released.

Thank you in advance,
Pete Deiana
[redacted]

I am writing every news channel in town asking, pleading and begging each and every station to please check into airing and investigate the unfair and corrupt going on at Las Vegas' family courts... especially my current case which is completely riddled with lies, multiple counts of fraud and at different levels,' Ashley Deiana represented by Gary Zernich attorney and fraudulently as it gets Susie Lewis victim Advocate vs Peter Deiana, judge assigned Denise L. Gentile case D-15-509839-D

Child abduction and parental alienation. My wife has concealed my kids from me for going on 7 months now. In order to try to cover up her wrong doings she has hired an attorney who I know knows of her true intentions and illegal actions, which makes him in the wrong by every means. There are regulations he has to follow that would hold him himself liable for charges along side of his clients if not followed and he still continues to aid her in her illegal actions. Once in family court the women's word is gold. For about 7 months instead of concentrating on a divorce and custody case I've had to put all my attention toward fighting false allegations, false police reports, keep from being wrongfully imprisoned, restraining and protective orders obtained under false pretensions, false reports or domestic violence on my behalf (there was but was her that attacked and assaulted me with closed fists in the presence of our children), and her fraudulently playing the role of a battered women's victim and receiving and openly accepting benefits set aside to aid actual battered women along with placing my kids into this role as well. I have no money to fight this but am doing my best studying every waking hr not at work and filing what i can. I have put in 2 applications to continue without paying filing fees and both have been ignored and the courts so far have overdrawn my account for $300.00 that i don have extra to replenish that account. My wife has endless funds available; the main reason all this happened is because her mother cut her off financially and rewrote wills cutting her from any and all family money's and inheritances unless she left me. They have millions of dollar's. This all has caused great damage to me professionally, mentally, physically, sociably, and has greatly threatened and damaged my relationship with my children along with my character. And being in family courts I have no avenues to take, every authority I try to file charges with says no it is family courts problem. We'll family courts are letting her get away with practically murder!! Most illegally actions along with the previously forgotten to mention criminal conspiracy involving at least 5 others all hold a charge yield a felony D count. And my hands are tied, it would seem that because she's a women in the family court system, she is granted immunity from her illegal activity. These going on are very wrong in every-way; moral, constitutionally, violates civil and constitutional rights, father's rights and ethically with 2 innocent children caught in the middle. The main objective her and her conspirators are trying to achieve is 1: cover up the fact that she is and always has been the aggressor not the victim, she committed a violent assault on her husband in the presence of our children while the husband/father was trying to remove himself and retreat from the confrontation that she so willingly turned combative. noted that husband did not

American Health Care: Health Spending and the Federal Budge

May 23, 2018

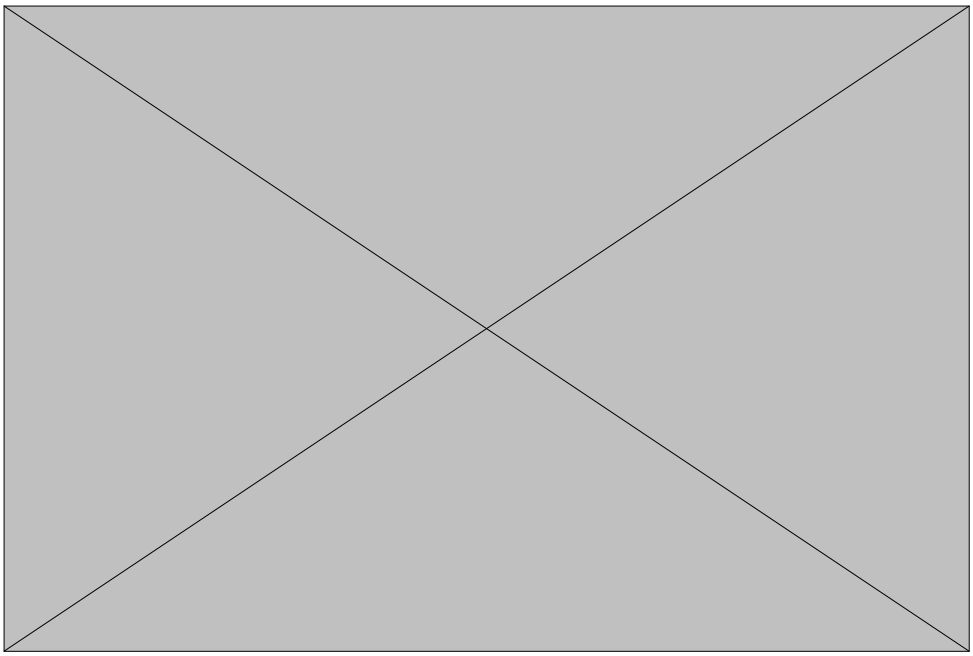
Read the paper.

Last week, the Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget published a primer on federal health spending. Y paper on our website here or below:

The United States spends more on health care than any other country in the world, and a large share of that s from the federal government.

In 2017, the United States spent about $3.5 trillion, or 18 percent of GDP, on health expenditures – more th average among developed countries.

Of that $3.5 trillion, $1.5 trillion, is directly or indirectly financed by the federal government. In other words, government dedicates resources of nearly 8 percent of the economy toward health care. By 2028, we estima will rise to $2.9 trillion, or 9.7 percent of the economy. Over time, these costs will continue to grow and consum share of federal resources.



Over the long term, the rising cost of federal health care spending is clearly unsustainable. Without a course result will be program insolvency, crowding out of important public priorities, and a growing federal

Given how central health care spending is to the federal budget, it is important to understand how that spendi and how it will grow. This paper will provide background on major health care programs in the federal budget. series called the American Health Care initiative, a joint collaboration of the Committee for a Responsible Fed the Concerned Actuaries Group.

The Rise of Federal Health Spending

Federal health spending has grown significantly over the past several decades and is projected to grow ir Spending on the major federal health programs – Medicare, Medicaid, the Children's Health Insurance Progra the health insurance exchange subsidies created under the Affordable Care Act – has increased from 0.8 p economy in 1970 to 3.1 percent by 2000 and 5.4 percent in 2017 (total federal resources dedicated to healt include tax benefits as well, total about 8 percent of the economy). In dollar terms, major federal health spenc by 230 percent since 2000, while economy-wide prices have only risen 40 percent, and the economy has onl percent. This growth is due to both automatic growth in enrollees and health care costs as well as health care the form of the Medicare prescription drug program and the Affordable Care Act.

As the population ages and per-capita health care costs rise, nearly all forecasters expect federal health car continue to grow. Based on Congressional Budget Office (CBO) projections and our own extrapolations, majo spending will rise from 5.4 percent of GDP in 2017 to 6.8 percent in 2028 and 8.4 percent by 204

Meanwhile, health care will consume a larger share of the budget over time. In 1970, major health programs r percent of the budget. That share increased to 20 percent by 2000 and 28 percent by 2017. By 2028, one-th dollars not spent on interest will go toward health spending, and by 2040, nearly 40 percent will. Even these e account for the erosion of the tax base resulting from the tax exclusion for employer-sponsored health ir

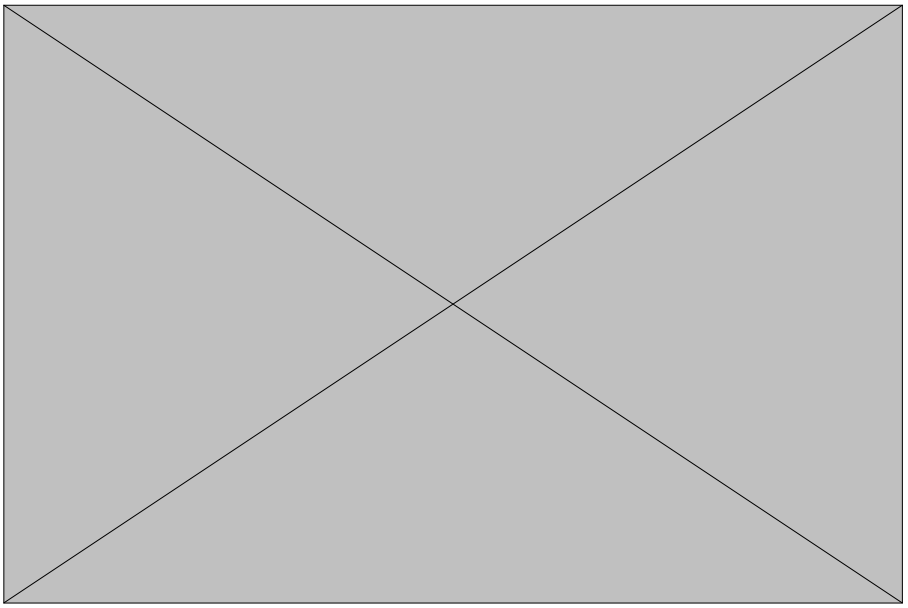
In other words, the rising cost of health care is crowding out almost everything else.



Where Does the Money Go?

Most federal health care resources go toward financing four items: Medicare, Medicaid, the tax exclusion f sponsored health insurance, and the exchange subsidies established under the Affordable Care Act. Thes programs are discussed below.

Medicare

Medicare is the largest federal health care program, serving 58 million elderly and disabled people at a gross billion in 2017 and a cost net of premiums of $591 billion. Medicare consists of three programs: Part A cover inpatient care, Part B covers physician and outpatient care, and Part D covers prescription drugs. Part A is fun a payroll tax while Parts B and D are funded through a combination of premiums and general revenue. Medica may enroll in some or all of these parts or in private insurance known as “Medicare Advantage” while still rec federal subsidy.

Medicare costs are expected to rise rapidly in the coming years. In dollars, net costs are projected to more th the next decade to $1.3 trillion in 2028. This growth is due to both the aging of the population – the number o will rise from 58 million to 77 million – and growth in per-capita health spending – cost per beneficiary is proj from $10,200 to $16,400. Both factors will continue to grow beyond the end of the decade.

Medicaid and CHIP

Medicaid is a state-run and jointly-financed health insurance program serving lower-income residents – inc making up to 138 percent of the poverty level in states that expanded Medicaid under the Affordable Care A provides benefits for both acute and long-term care, covering nearly 100 million people over the course of Children’s Health Insurance Program (CHIP) is a similarly structured program that covers almost 10 million ch year.

The federal government pays for 50 to 75 percent of base Medicaid costs, depending on the state, and 90 per the expansion population. On average, the federal government provides about 65 percent of total funding for M percent for CHIP, though CHIP’s share will fall to 65 percent by 2021. The two programs cost $391 billion in projected to cost $670 billion by 2028.

Exchange Subsidies and Other Spending

Other spending on health insurance or health care totaled $167 billion in 2017. This category includes subsidi purchased on the exchanges ($48 billion), veterans’ health care provided through the Department of Veteran billion), and health care for active-duty military and their dependents ($49 billion).

The exchange subsidies are projected to nearly double over the next decade due to large premium increases and general health care cost growth in later years. Both military health care and veterans’ health care are d programs, meaning that they are appropriated each year rather than allowed to function automatically and constrained by overall caps on discretionary spending. We estimate that these three areas will increase to a $250 billion by 2028.

The Employer-Sponsored Health Insurance Exclusion and Other Tax Benefits

The tax code also provides several subsidies for health care and insurance. By far the largest is the exclusio provided insurance, which the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) estimates to have cost about $340 bi estimated 156 million people, a majority of the non-elderly population, receive coverage through their or th employer. The exclusion is indirectly limited by the 40 percent “Cadillac” tax on high-cost insurance plans, but go into effect until 2022 and has already had its start date delayed twice. Though the total number of peop employer-sponsored insurance is expected to fall slightly over the next decade, the cost of the subsidy will inc $650 billion by 2028 as health care costs rise (or higher if the Cadillac tax is repealed or further dela

Other tax subsidies totaled about $25 billion in 2017 and will grow to nearly $55 billion by 2028. The largest o is the medical expense deduction, available only to taxpayers who itemize their deductions and have medical exceed 7.5 percent of their income (or 10 percent after 2018). The cost of this deduction was $10 billion in 2 increase to $20 billion by 2028. Other subsidies include the premium deduction for the self-employed ($8 billi billion in 2028), the deduction for contributions to Medical or Health Savings Accounts ($8 billion in 2017, $20 and tax-free distributions from retirement plans to pay for premiums (less than $1 billion per yea

Rising Health Costs Threaten Trust Fund Solvency and Fiscal Sustainability

Rising health care costs represent a threat to both the Medicare program and the federal budget more

Medicare Part A is funded through the Hospital Insurance (HI) trust fund, which is financed primarily with a 2.9 tax, split between employers and employees (an additional 0.9 percent high-income surtax and partial taxa Security benefits provide additional funds). Currently, Medicare Part A costs and revenues are roughly equal growing more quickly. As a result, CBO projects the Medicare Trust fund will be depleted by 2026, and the Me project insolvency by 2029.

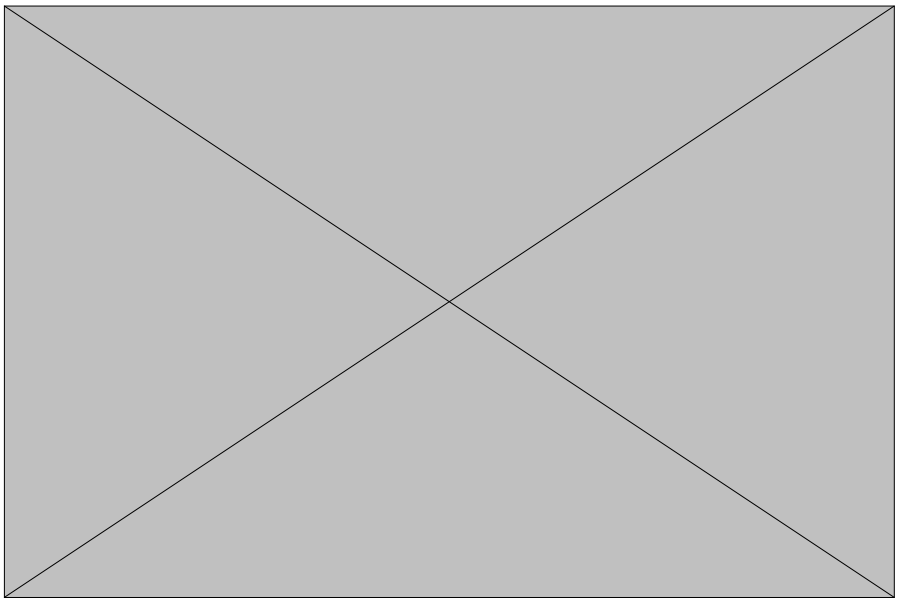
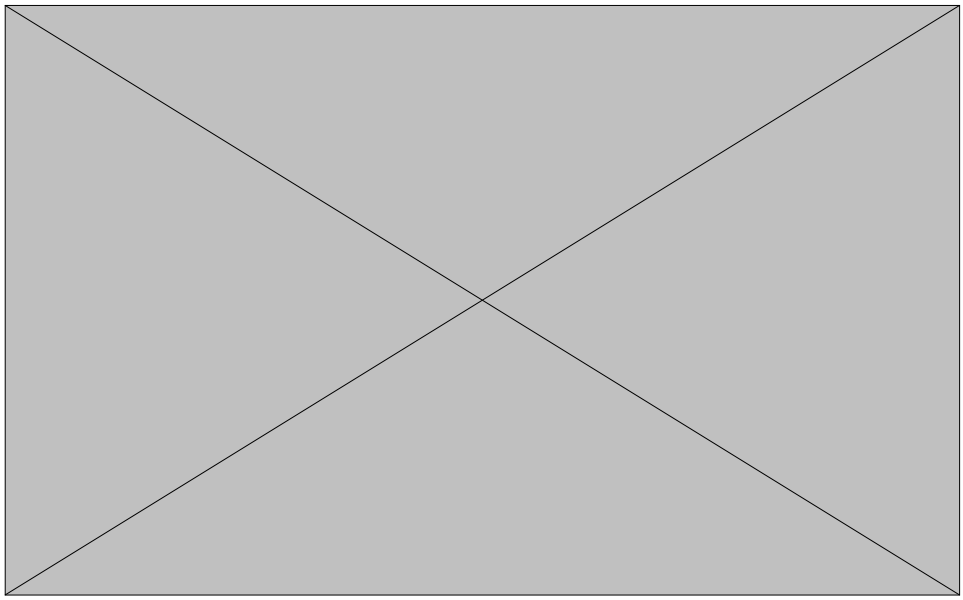
Ensuring Medicare solvency will require closing a gap in excess of $100 billion per year by the end of the deca 0.64 percent of payroll over 75 years. That's the equivalent of immediately increasing revenue by 16 percer spending by 14 percent.



Failure to address the costs of Medicare Part A will ultimately mean a 10 to 15 percent benefit cut, as benefit trust fund revenue. Other federal health programs have no similar constraint. Instead, rising health care cost increased federal borrowing and are a key contributor to the unsustainable rise of the federal del

In fact, absent rising health care costs debt would roughly stabilize as share of the economy. Under current la debt held by the public would rise from about 77 percent of GDP today to 96 percent by 2028 and 125 perce most major health care spending were held constant as a share of GDP after 2018 and HI trust fund spending line with revenue, debt would peak at about 90 percent of GDP in 2028 and fall slightly to 87 percent b

Had federal health care costs remained stable since 2010, debt would total 85 percent of GDP by 2028 and 1 percent by 2040.



Conclusion

Health care spending is already a large part of the federal budget and is projected to grow further over the Medicare, Medicaid, CHIP, military health care, individual insurance, and health tax preferences for employ insurance already totaled 7.9 percent of GDP in 2017 and will grow to 9.7 percent by 2028. This growth ha implications for the budget, as health spending will become a larger share of budget and at least partially driv debt projected in the future. Controlling health spending should be a central part of the agenda to get federa control.

Robert & Alice,

Washington Republicans are out with their latest TV ads attacking Steve. This time, they're misleading voters about Steve's record on education.

Here's the bottom line — there's only one candidate in this race with a viable plan to fix our struggling schools. His name is Steve Sisolak.

Watch our TV ad to learn about Steve's education plan, then help us get it on the air by chipping in $5 or more!

Steve put students first when he served on the Board of Regents, and when he's governor he'll work hard to reduce overcrowding, give teachers a raise, and get students the resources they need to learn.

Watch Steve's ad to hear his plan, then chip in so we can get the message out to as many voters as possible!

Thanks,

Robert & Alice —

National Republicans are all in for Adam Laxalt. They know this race is a dead heat, so they’re pulling out all the stops for Trump’s endorsed candidate.

That’s why Mike Pence is in town today to raise money hand over fist for Laxalt.

With just 60 days left before the election, we need everyone to step up right now. Please chip in $5 or whatever you can today.

Adam Laxalt cares more about Trump and his cronies than he does the people of this state. His record as an official here proves that.

Now, Pence and Trump’s allies are returning the favor to get an ally in the governor’s mansion. So we’ve got to keep up with all this money pouring in.

This race is a “toss-up,” and we need your help to fight back against Laxalt, Pence, & Trump. Donate $5 to Steve Sisolak today.

Thanks,

Team Sisolak

"We have lost the war on cancer."

In 1940s one person in twenty would get cancer.
In the 1970s it was one out of every sixteen people.
In the 1990s it dropped to one person out of ten.
Today, one person out of three gets cancer in the course of their life.

And all because of this THIS TINY PLANT we've excluded from our diet.

Your doctor doesn't know about it and if you think the modern cancer approach works...think again.

Oncologists are the only doctors who profit from the treatment they prescribe with as much as 2/3 of their income coming from chemotherapy drugs.

Which work half the time, if you're lucky.

But one man did know about this plant and many other plants he used for decades to treat and cure thousands of Americans.

To always being prepared,

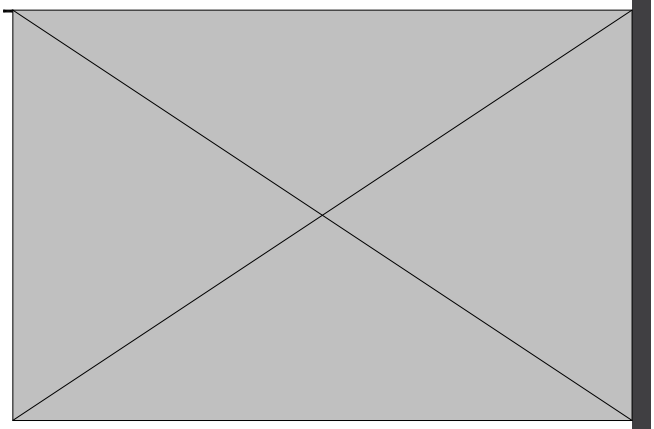
Subject: [Marketing Mail] UNLV School of Medicine: About the Intersessions Program

Issue 82- Feb. 22, 2017

Making the Rounds with Founding Dean Dr. Barbara Atkinson

Friends and colleagues,



Mark Gaudagnoli working with faculty to develop a new course for medical students called Intersessions

Amidst the relentless demands of medical school, one of the unique experiences the UNLV School of Medicine has built into the curriculum is the Intersessions program. The Intersessions are eight, weeklong courses that give students a mental and physical break from the rigors of the core medical school curriculum.

Learning all the anatomy, physiology, pathology, pharmacology, etc. needed to become a physician is an important and daunting task. If a student has not mastered the material presented in the previous curriculum module, they will have a week to review, learn, and retake the examination related to it.

Intersessions give students a different way to learn material presented in the preceding weeks and provide an avenue to explore topics not often presented in medical school.

Mark Guadagnoli, PhD, Director of Learning and Performance, whose background is in performance improvement, leads the team working on the Intersessions and describes them as "a celebration of personal and professional growth, designed to broaden the students' perspectives with challenge and application."

Intersessions

Each week has a theme and addresses a wide variety of topics, including anthropology, bioethics, entrepreneurship, the history of medicine, hospitality, humanism, global health, law, nutrition, psychology, cutting-edge science, and more. Here are a few of the themes:

- Medicine with an Edge: Military, wilderness, performance, and emergency medicine
- You 2.0: Optimizing your personal and professional life
- Back to the Future: Medicine past, present and future
- WOW: A proactive strategy to personal health and wellness
- Social Challenges: Addiction, human trafficking, homelessness, mental health and nutrition
- Do the Right Thing: Ethics and adversity in medicine
- Sex, Drugs and Rock and Roll: Festival medicine, hospitality and culinary Presentations will be set up like TED talks, which are short dynamic presentations geared toward presenting information as succinctly as possible. After each presentation, time is allowed for actual learning application and hands-on experience.

Medicine with an Edge Week

To give you a better idea of an Intersession week here is a draft schedule for Medicine with an Edge.

Each Intersession taps community experts, such as Dale Carrison, MD, chair of emergency medicine at the University Medical Center (UMC), who will lead the discussion on Special Ops and Wilderness Medicine. Dr. Carrison brings years of experience to share with UNLV School of Medicine students in the field of emergency medicine. He also is a physician for Metro's SWAT team, and medical director for Burning Man, the Electric Daisy Carnival and the Las Vegas Motor Speedway. Other speakers include Lt. Colonel Brian DelMonaco, MD, United States Air Force, who is a special operations physician; Matt Horbal, MD, UMC, who specializes in the unique aspects of wilderness medicine; Emergency Physician Jordana Haber-Hazan, MD, UMC; and Annie Weisman, PhD, Director of Wellness and Integrative Medicine and Mark Guadagnoli.

The Intersessions also will help the students learn how to stay healthy, both physically and mentally, which are essential to becoming a physician. We think in the long run this type of learning will help our students achieve their full potential as physicians.

Best wishes,

Barbara

Now that he has been indicted Jon wants to know whether you are planning to return the money he donated to your campaign.
Feel free to call me if you want to chat, I wanted to email you this so you had the PDF.

INVESTMENT COMPANY EXECUTIVES INDICTED FOR $1.5 BILLION PONZI SCHEME

WASHINGTON – The president and chief executive officer and two former Asia-based executives of a Las Vegas investment company were indicted today for their roles in an alleged $1.5 billion Ponzi scheme.

Assistant Attorney General Leslie R. Caldwell of the Justice Department's Criminal Division, U.S. Attorney Daniel G. Bogden of the District of Nevada and Special Agent in Charge Laura A. Bucheit of the FBI's Las Vegas Division made the announcement.

"The defendants allegedly preyed on thousands of unsuspecting Japanese victims to enrich themselves by operating a billion-plus dollar Ponzi scheme," said Assistant Attorney General Caldwell. "This prosecution shows that the Criminal Division will pursue not only those who victimize American citizens, but also those who use the U.S. as a home base to defraud victims abroad."

"Investment fraud and other financial fraud cases are a high priority for the U.S. Attorney's Office in Nevada," said U.S. Attorney Bogden. "These defendants are accused of using a Nevada corporation to conduct their $1.5 billion fraud scheme and falsely telling thousands of overseas victims that their investments would be safely held and managed by an independent, third-party escrow agent in Nevada. Fraudulent ruses and schemes perpetrated by Nevadans using Nevada corporations and entities will continue to be addressed by this office."

"These indictments are a reminder of the FBI's determination to identify, investigate and bring to justice those who are committing financial crimes against innocent consumers," said

Special Agent in Charge Bucheit. "We are appreciative of the continued support we receive from our international, federal, state and local law enforcement partners."

Edwin Fujinaga, 68, of Las Vegas; Junzo Suzuki, 66, of Tokyo; and Paul Suzuki, 36, of Tokyo, were charged in an indictment with eight counts of mail fraud and nine counts of wire fraud. Fujinaga also is charged with three counts of money laundering. The indictment seeks from all three defendants forfeiture of the proceeds from the alleged crimes.

Fujinaga was the president and CEO of Las Vegas-based MRI International Inc. (MRI). Junzo Suzuki previously was MRI's executive vice president for Asia Pacific, and Paul Suzuki previously was the company's general manager for Japan operations. MRI purportedly specialized in "factoring," whereby the company purchased accounts receivable from medical providers at a discount, and then attempted to recover the entire amount, or at least more than the discounted amount, from the debtor.

According to allegations in the indictment, from at least 2009 to 2013, Fujinaga and the Suzukis fraudulently solicited investments from thousands of Japanese residents, and MRI currently owes investors over $1.5 billion. Specifically, the indictment alleges that Fujinaga and the Suzukis promised investors a series of interest payments that would accrue over the life of the investment and that would be paid out along with the face value of the investment at the conclusion of the investments' duration. The defendants allegedly solicited investments by, among other things, promising investors that their investments would be used only for the purchase of medical accounts receivable (MARS) and by representing that investors funds would be managed and safeguarded by an independent third-party escrow company.

The indictment further alleges that MRI operated as a Ponzi scheme, wherein the defendants used new investors' money to pay prior investors' maturing investments. According to the indictment, the defendants also allegedly used investors' funds for purposes other than the purchase of MARS, including paying themselves sales commissions, subsidizing gambling habits, funding personal travel by private jet, and other personal expenses.

The charges contained in an indictment are merely accusations. A defendant is presumed innocent until and unless proven guilty.

This case is being investigated by the FBI's Las Vegas Division. Significant assistance was provided by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, the Criminal Division's Office of International Affairs and Japanese authorities. This case is being prosecuted by Assistant Chief Albert B. Stieglitz Jr. and Trial Attorney Melissa Aoyagi of the Criminal Division's Fraud Section and First Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven W. Myhre of the District of Nevada.

2. Final CBN of the year: RANDY GREER!

May 31 at 7:51 AM

Gentlemen,
What a year it's been for the Christian Businessmen's Network – now in its FOURTEENTH year of ministry! And what better way to conclude our ministry year than to welcome Pastor RANDY GREER of Trinity Life Center as our special guest on Thursday, June 8!

Randy is a gifted preacher/teacher who also has a unique perspective on ministry. When other churches made the decision to relocate from economically disadvantaged areas of Las Vegas, Randy chose to not just stay in one of those areas – in the case of Trinity, between St. Louis and East Sahara in what is considered "Old Vegas" – but to thrive there. Randy's church impacts the "lost and least of these" in ways many churches can't, and on June 8th he will share how we in business can impact people in the same way.

As always, we will meet at the beautiful Canyon Gate Country Club (West Sahara between Durango and Fort Apache) beginning at 11:45 (please arrive early if possible). The cost of a delicious buffet lunch is just $20, and I urge you to RSVP right now to Bonnie Helms (helmsnlv@cox.net or 702.821.5777) and pay online at our secure Square site: https://squareup.com/sto re/ christian-businessmen-network- west/item/cbn-lunch

I look forward to seeing you ONE WEEK FROM TOMORROW (Thursday, June 8) at 11:45 am for Pastor RANDY GREER. See you then!

In Christ,
Robin

Making The Rounds With Founding Dean Dr. Barbara Atkinson

Making the Rounds with Founding Dean Dr. Barbara Atkinson

I went to Philadelphia last week for the last face-to-face meeting of President Barack Obama's Presidential Commission for the Study of Bioethical Issues (Bioethics Commission). The commission discusses current ethical issues in science and medicine and provides guidance to the president, as needed.

The current commission, of which I'm a member, was created in 2009 and held its first meeting in 2010. During their term in office, each president appoints an advisory group such as ours, and similar bioethics commissions have been in place since Congress appointed the first one in 1974.

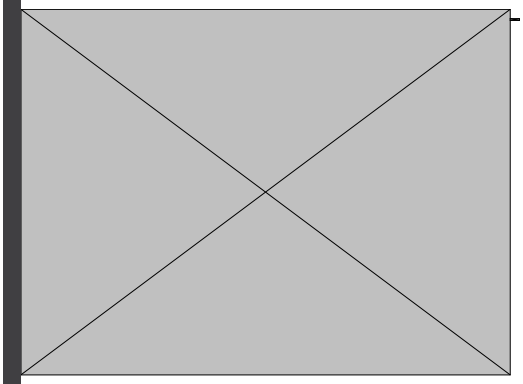
The commission is chaired by University of Pennsylvania president Amy Gutmann, PhD Vice Chair is James Wagner, PhD, who until recently was the president of Emory University. President Gutmann is an international expert in bioethics and political and public ethics. President Wagner is an engineer.

Other members include myself; Anita Allen, JD, PhD, and Nita Farahany, JD, PhD, both lawyers who specialize in bioethics; Raju Kucheriapati, a genetics researcher; Nelson Michael, MD, PhD, director of the Army HIV research program; Daniel Sulmasy, MD, a physician bioethicist; Christine Grady, RN, PhD, chief of bioethics at NIH Clinical Center; and Stephen Hauser, MD, a neurologist.

We spent our last meeting reflecting on our work over the past six years to provide history and guidance for the next presidential commission. I have learned a lot about many emerging topics that will shape the future of our profession. For example, our first assignment was a hot topic that came up suddenly in May 2010 when J. Craig Venter, MD, announced that his institute had created "new life." The president asked us to evaluate this finding – and the new field of synthetic biology – and make recommendations that would maximize the potential of the field and minimize associated risks.

The J. Craig Venter Institute had taken the genetic DNA code of one of the simplest bacteria in existence. They then used a DNA synthesizer to make a matching DNA chain from its chemical components. When this chain was put into a cell of a different species of bacteria with its own DNA removed, the cell converted to the new bacterial type and reproduced.

The Commission found the scientists actually did not create "new life." Instead we found that the scientists used a synthetic DNA construction of an already occurring bacterial genome. The manufactured genome, when placed into the cell of a different bacteria took over all the cellular processes and started to replicate a new bacteria in the cellular material of a different species. While this was an important research step that continues to hold great promise, it wasn't exactly producing new life.



Over the past six years, we covered 10 projects and wrote summaries and recommendations on each of them. Several were direct requests from the president, such as synthetic biology. We also discussed if and how the anthrax vaccine could be tested on children so that we would be ready if a bioterrorism event occurred, and we reviewed a research study funded by the U.S. Public Health Service in the 1940s that involved human subjects.

As our committee met for the final time, we had a great discussion on possible topics for future bioethics commissions. A few topics that have been discussed are end-of-life care, pain management, and health disparities. Others of importance include the FDA approval process and the balance between assuring safety and speed of getting drugs onto the market.

One of the most important things we did was involve public deliberation. We listened to experts in the field, read extensively, and provided recommendations based on public input. Each meeting had speaker experts, supplemented by public comments and questions. We provided a video live stream of all of the meetings. Staff did an amazing job of synthesizing all the work. We then published our recommendations, which were practical and concrete based on our findings. The Commission did reach consensus on each topic, often after much substantial discussion. I thoroughly enjoyed working with this esteemed group of colleagues, and with the staff. It was a very rewarding experience that I look forward to sharing with our students, staff and community.

Best wishes,

Barbara

INVESTMENT COMPANY EXECUTIVES INDICTED FOR $1.5 BILLION PONZI SCHEME

WASHINGTON – The president and chief executive officer and two former Asia-based executives of a Las Vegas investment company were indicted today for their roles in an alleged $1.5 billion Ponzi scheme.

Assistant Attorney General Leslie R. Caldwell of the Justice Department's Criminal Division, U.S. Attorney Daniel G. Bogden of the District of Nevada and Special Agent in Charge Laura A. Bucheit of the FBI's Las Vegas Division made the announcement.

"The defendants allegedly preyed on thousands of unsuspecting Japanese victims to enrich themselves by operating a billion-plus dollar Ponzi scheme," said Assistant Attorney General Caldwell. "This prosecution shows that the Criminal Division will pursue not only those who victimize American citizens, but also those who use the U.S. as a home base to defraud victims abroad."

"Investment fraud and other financial fraud cases are a high priority for the U.S. Attorney's Office in Nevada," said U.S. Attorney Bogden. "These defendants are accused of using a Nevada corporation to conduct their $1.5 billion fraud scheme and falsely telling thousands of overseas victims that their investments would be safely held and managed by an independent, third-party escrow agent in Nevada. Fraudulent ruses and schemes perpetrated by Nevadans using Nevada corporations and entities will continue to be addressed by this office."

"These indictments are a reminder of the FBI's determination to identify, investigate and bring to justice those who are committing financial crimes against innocent consumers," said Special Agent in Charge Bucheit. "We are appreciative of the continued support we receive from our international, federal, state and local law enforcement partners."

Edwin Fujinaga, 68, of Las Vegas; Junzo Suzuki, 66, of Tokyo; and Paul Suzuki, 36, of Tokyo, were charged in an indictment with eight counts of mail fraud and nine counts of wire fraud. Fujinaga also is charged with three counts of money laundering. The indictment seeks from all three defendants forfeiture of the proceeds from the alleged crimes.

Fujinaga was the president and CEO of Las Vegas-based MRI International Inc. (MRI).

Junzo Suzuki previously was MRI's executive vice president for Asia Pacific, and Paul Suzuki previously was the company's general manager for Japan operations. MRI purportedly specialized in "factoring," whereby the company purchased accounts receivable from medical providers at a discount, and then attempted to recover the entire amount, or at least more than the discounted amount, from the debtor.

According to allegations in the indictment, from at least 2009 to 2013, Fujinaga and the Suzukis fraudulently solicited investments from thousands of Japanese residents, and MRI currently owes investors over $1.5 billion. Specifically, the indictment alleges that Fujinaga and the Suzukis promised investors a series of interest payments that would accrue over the life of the investment and that would be paid out along with the face value of the investment at the conclusion of the investments' duration. The defendants allegedly solicited investments by, among other things, promising investors that their investments would be used only for the purchase of medical accounts receivable (MARS) and by representing that investors funds would be managed and safeguarded by an independent third-party escrow company.

The indictment further alleges that MRI operated as a Ponzi scheme, wherein the defendants used new investors' money to pay prior investors' maturing investments. According to the indictment, the defendants also allegedly used investors' funds for purposes other than the purchase of MARS, including paying themselves sales commissions, subsidizing gambling habits, funding personal travel by private jet, and other personal expenses.

The charges contained in an indictment are merely accusations. A defendant is presumed innocent until and unless proven guilty.

This case is being investigated by the FBI's Las Vegas Division. Significant assistance was provided by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, the Criminal Division's Office of International Affairs and Japanese authorities. This case is being prosecuted by Assistant Chief Albert B. Stieglitz Jr. and Trial Attorney Melissa Aoyagi of the Criminal Division's Fraud Section and First Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven W. Myhre of the District of Nevada.

Subject: FW: news release - Police Fatality Public Fact-finding Review of Tashi Brown's Death to be Held on Sept. 24

Please see this update from the DA's Office. The date of this hearing has changed…

Police Fatality Public Fact-finding Review of Tashi Brown's Death to be Held on Sept. 24

The Police Fatality Public Fact-finding Review to look into the circumstances surrounding the death of Tashi Brown will be held at 9 a.m. on Sept. 24, in Commission Chambers at the Clark County Government Center at 500 S. Grand Central Parkway in downtown Las Vegas.

The review of Brown's death will be presided over by Hearing Officer Craig Drummond. Eric Jorgensen will serve as ombudsman for the review, and Chief Deputy District Attorney Marc DiGiacomo will represent the District Attorney's Office in this proceeding. Brown died during a confrontation with law enforcement in May.

This review was initially set for Sept. 11.

The review will be aired live on Clark County Television (CCTV) and streamed live at www.ClarkCountyNV.gov and www.YouTube.com/ClarkCountyNV.

A fact-finding review is held when a police-involved death occurs and the District Attorney's Office preliminarily determines that no criminal prosecution of the officer or officers involved is appropriate. Presiding officers and ombudsmen are selected by the county manager from lists approved by the County Commission. The ombudsman represents the public and the deceased's family during the review.

During a review, representatives from the District Attorney's Office present witnesses and make a presentation of the essential facts surrounding the police-involved death. After the prosecutors finish their presentation, the presiding officer and ombudsman may also ask questions.

The procedure for questioning witnesses is informal and intended to provide the public with relevant information about the use of force. Members of the public observing the review may submit proposed written questions to the presiding officer on forms available at the review. The presiding officer may ask the proposed questions, revise them or decline to ask them if he deems them “redundant, irrelevant or an abuse of the review process,” according to County ordinance. At the end of the review, no formal determination about the manner or cause of death is rendered.

CCTV will carry the entirety of the proceeding. CCTV is available in the Las Vegas area on Channel 4/1004 on Cox cable and on CenturyLink on Channels 4 and 1004, as well as in Laughlin on Channel 14 via Suddenlink. Live streaming of CCTV programming is available at www.ClarkCountyNV.gov and www.YouTube.com/ClarkCountyNV. CCTV is also available in Boulder City on Channel 4 and in Moapa Valley on Digital Channel 50.3.

Editor’s note: CCTV will air the review live and you are welcome to use our signal. Like Commission meetings, reporters, photographers and videographers will be able to come and go as they please. If any television outlet wishes to string cable into the review so that they may carry any of them live, please alert Dan Kulin, at (702) 455-5534, (702) 376-3764, or DKulin@ClarkCountynv.gov, in advance so that we can discuss requirements. Any outlets wishing to lay cable in order to carry the proceeding live will need to ensure that the cable is laid prior to the 9 a.m. start of the review in order to avoid disruptions.

EXPERT ANALYSIS

After US V. Texas, Immigration Reform Is Up In The Air

In the coming weeks, the parties involved in United States v. Texas will decide how to proceed with the case. The two most likely scenarios are either to seek rehearing at the U.S. Supreme Court or to go back to the district court for a hearing on the merits of the case. Whichever option is selected, it seems unlikely that President Barack Obama's immigration policies will be revived, says Karen-Lee Pollak at Bell Nunnally & Martin LLP.

All of us are touched by chronic disease. Conditions, such as diabetes, arthritis, and Alzheimer's, affect our own health and that of family members, friends, co-workers, and neighbors. Chronic disease is the number one cause of death and disability, and is central to rising health care costs.

Chronic conditions challenge us in terms of lives lost, cut short and diminished; economic hardship for individuals, families and government; reduced productivity in the workplace, and inefficiency and frustration across the health care ecosystem. The toll is high and growing.

Legislators and other public officials are ideally positioned to interpret the rising tide of chronic illness and the leverage a growing body of evidence, strategies, and models to improve public health policies, programs, and practices. The National Foundation for Women Legislators highlighted this issue and potential solution strategies at its recent conference in Minneapolis, where the findings and recommendations of the Partnership to Fight Chronic Disease (PFCD) were shared.

2018 Annual Conference

Omni Shoreham ~ Washington, D.C.

November 13-17

Honda is a safety leader in the auto industry, and at this year's annual conference, Ember Brillhart, Honda's Manager of State Relations discussed policy measures states could take to improve motor vehicle safety.

For policy makers who want to make our roads safer, Ember discussed Honda's legislative efforts aimed at stopping the proliferation of counterfeit airbags. Airbags are critical safety equipment, credited with saving over one million lives since their inception. Ineffective counterfeits are flooding the market and are being sold online to unscrupulous repair shops who install these products in the vehicles of unknowing consumers. Honda is working closely with federal authorities to keep these products out of the marketplace, but counterfeiters are exploiting holes in federal and state laws to avoid prosecution. Honda has worked with stakeholders to enact model legislation in 15 states to close this loophole.

Ember also discussed the ongoing Takata inflator recall, an unprecedented recall affecting approximately 34 million vehicles, and 19 automakers' airbags. Honda is going to great lengths to notify consumers about this recall including making over 100 million individual outreach attempts via telephone, email, direct mailing, text messaging and door to door canvasing. Honda also recently created a Public Service Announcement (PSA) encouraging affected drivers to check the status of their vehicle and have any defective airbag inflator remedied free of charge at any Honda dealership immediately, that we encourage you to share with your constituents. For more information about these efforts please visit For more information about these efforts please visit www.hondaairbaginfo.com or contact Ember Brillhart at ember_brillhart@hna.honda.com or (202) 661-4400.

Trump Administration Designates New Acting Director of National Drug Control Policy

Washington, D.C. – Yesterday, the Trump Administration designated Richard Baum to serve as Acting Director of National Drug Control Policy until a permanent Director is nominated and confirmed by the Senate.

Acting Director Baum has served in a variety roles at the Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP) for two decades and through four presidential administrations. He has a broad range of experience on domestic and international drug control policy issues, including leading the development of key strategic documents such as the National Drug Control Strategy. Most recently, as Chief of the International Division at ONDCP, he was a part of the United States Delegation to the meeting of the United Nations' Commission on Narcotic Drugs in Vienna, Austria.

Acting Director Baum is replacing Kemp Chester, who was appointed as Acting Director on Inauguration Day. During his tenure, Acting Director Chester advanced the Administration's drug policy priorities, which include promoting prevention and treatment for substance abuse while stopping the trafficking of illicit drugs. Mr. Chester, a retired Colonel in the U.S. Army, will return to his previous role as the Associate Director for the National Heroin Coordination Group at ONDCP, which leads the U.S. Government's response to the threat of illicit opioids.

"I am deeply honored to have been designated by President Trump to serve as Acting Director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy," Mr. Baum said. "In my two decades of service at ONDCP, I've seen the heart-breaking suffering caused by illegal drugs, as well as the incredible work of dedicated individuals working to address drug abuse and its consequences. I look forward to continuing that work."

Continued...Where is the 300 million dollars that Meyer Lansky supposedly had when he died? Where did this 300 million dollars come from? Untangling the web... Researching Santo Trafficante Jr. and the origination of the French Connection associated to the heroin trade from Turkey to France to Canada and to the United States... Who placed Fidel Castro in power in Cuba? Did this originate from Turkey as well? The same people + Thelma Sheer Schwartz Lansky and George (Schwartz) Soros... Going back to the 1960's and 1970's...

In researching Santo Trafficante Jr. referencing the wikipedia, the French Connection comes up. Let's look more closely at the undertow of this French Connection to the American Mafia Commission and involvement in Cuba. Is this the ratline that brought down the Americans in Cuba and on the eastcoast of the United States? Was JFK while President of the United States who was described as being seen with briefcases by secret service agents at the White House actually couriering for this French Connection via association to Joe Kennedy his father? Is this the French Connection to Jackie Lee Bouvier Kennedy and of her father Black Jack Bouvier? Is this what is being described and referenced in the last chapter of the book "The Darkside of Camelot," by Seymour Hersh? The French Connection of French fascists? Is that what this is all about? Is this the George (Schwartz) Soros connection to the nazis still today and that he is still selling out Jews to the Nazis via this French Connection ratline of fascists? Just as he did in World II to the German Nazis? Does he play both sides of the political spectrum? He's pro communist too? Did he place Fidel Castro in Cuba as their leader and president? His opposition is the American mafia and the Jewish mafia still today?

Is this the 300 million dollars associated to Meyer Lansky? Is this where it comes from?

Is or was there an association of the French Connection to Santos Trafficante? Or to Meyer Lansky? Who was the head of the French Connection in Turkey? Did this all stem from Turkey? All the propaganda and cover up and the pinning of the blame of missing money to someone in a country that leads us to Turkey? Is this where the missing money ended up? Is George (Schwartz) Soros this French Connection head in Turkey? Part of this French fascist regime? Would any federal wires and bank routing numbers go directly to any of George Schwartz Soros's accounts if a private forensic accounting was done? To his foundations? Does he have any active Swiss bank accounts that Meyer Lansky may have laundered for him? Was this a trap laid out for Meyer Lansky in Puerto Rico when the American mob fled Cuba with their own money? On 8/23/1960? Account number 600823-003 at the Bank of Puerto Rico? The Heidi Meyer eastcoast offshore account? I wonder if this would ring any bells for George (Schwartz) Soros and his cohorts?

The French Connection was a scheme through which heroin was smuggled from Turkey to France and then to the United States through Canada. The operation reached its peak in the late 1960s and early 1970s, and was responsible for providing the vast majority of the heroin used in the United States. The operation was headed by Corsican criminals Paul Carbone (and his associate François Spirito) and Antoine Guérini, and also involved Auguste Ricord, Paul Mondoloni and Salvatore Greco.[citation needed] Most of the operation's starting capital came from assets that Ricord had stolen during World War II when he worked for Henri Lafont, one of the heads of the Carlingue (French Gestapo) during the German occupation in World War II.[citation needed]

From the 1930s to the 1950s

Illegal heroin labs were first discovered near Marseille, France, in 1937. These labs were run by Corsican gang leader Paul Carbone. For years, the Corsican underworld had been involved in the manufacturing and trafficking of heroin, primarily to the United States.[1] It was this heroin network that eventually became known as "the French Connection".

The Corsican Gang was protected by the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) and the SDECE after World War II in exchange for working to prevent French Communists from bringing the Old Port of Marseille under their control.[2]

Historically, the raw material for most of the heroin consumed in the United States came from Indochina, then Turkey. Turkish farmers were licensed to grow opium poppies for sale to legal drug companies, but many sold their excess to the underworld market, where it was manufactured into heroin and transported to the United States. The morphine paste was refined in Corsican laboratories in Marseille, one of the busiest ports in the western Mediterranean Sea. The Marseille heroin was reputed for its quality.

Marseille served as a perfect shipping point for all types of illegal goods, including the excess opium that Turkish farmers cultivated for profit. The convenience of the port at Marseille and the frequent arrival of ships from opium-producing countries made it easy to smuggle the morphine base to Marseille from the Far East or the Near East. The French underground would then ship large quantities of heroin from Marseille to New York City.

The first significant post-World War II seizure was made in New York on February 5, 1947, when seven pounds (3 kg) of heroin were seized from a Corsican sailor disembarking from a vessel that had just arrived from France.

It soon became clear that the French underground was increasing not only its participation in the illegal trade of opium, but also its expertise and efficiency in heroin trafficking. On March 17, 1947, 28 pounds (13 kg) of heroin were found on the French liner, St. Tropez. On January 7, 1949, more than 50 pounds (22.75 kg) of opium and heroin were seized on the French ship, Batista.

After Paul Carbone's death, the Guérini clan was the ruling dynasty of the Unione Corse and had systematically organized the smuggling of opium from Turkey and other Middle Eastern countries. The Guérini clan was led by Marseilles mob boss Antoine Guérini and his brothers, Barthelemy, Francois and Pascal.[citation needed]

The first major French Connection case occurred in 1960. In June, an informant told a drug agent in Lebanon that Mauricio Rosal, the Guatemalan Ambassador to Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, was smuggling morphine base from Beirut, Lebanon to Marseille. Narcotics agents had been seizing about 200 pounds (90 kg) of heroin in a typical year, but intelligence showed that the Corsican traffickers were smuggling in 200 pounds (90 kg) every other week. Rosal alone, in one year, had used his diplomatic status to bring in about 440 pounds (200 kg).

The Federal Bureau of Narcotics's 1960 annual report estimated that from 2,600 to 5,000 pounds (1,200 to 2,300 kg) of heroin were coming into the United States annually from France. The French traffickers continued to exploit the demand for their illegal product, and by 1969, they were supplying the United States with 80 to 90 percent of its heroin.

Because of this increasing volume, heroin became readily available throughout the United States. In an effort to limit the source, US officials went to Turkey to negotiate the phasing out of opium production. Initially, the Turkish government agreed to limit their opium production starting with the 1968 crop.

At the end of the 1960s, after Robert Blemant's assassination by Antoine Guerini, a gang war sparked in Marseille, caused by competition over casino revenues. Blemant's associate, Marcel Francisci, continued the war over the next years.

Jean Jehan

Former New York City Police Department Narcotics Bureau detective Sonny Grosso has stated that the kingpin of the French Connection heroin ring during the 1950s into the 1960s was Corsican Jean Jehan.[3] Although Jehan arranged the famous 1962 deal gone wrong of 64 pounds of "pure" heroin, he was never arrested for his involvement in international heroin smuggling. According to Grosso, all warrants for the arrest of Jehan were left open. For years thereafter, Jehan was reported to be seen arranging and operating drug activities at will throughout Europe. According to William Friedkin, director of the 1971 film The French Connection, Jehan had been a member of the French Resistance to Nazi Occupation during World War II and, because of that, French law enforcement officials refused to arrest him. Friedkin was told that Jehan died peacefully of old age at his home in Corsica.[4]

The 1970s and the dismantling of the French Connection

Following five subsequent years of concessions, combined with international cooperation, the Turkish government finally agreed in 1971 to a complete ban on the growing of Turkish opium, effective June 29, 1971. During these protracted negotiations, law enforcement personnel went into action. One of the major roundups began on January 4, 1972, when agents from the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs (BNDD) and French authorities seized 110 pounds (50 kg) of heroin at the Paris airport. Subsequently, traffickers Jean-Baptiste Croce and Joseph Mari were arrested in Marseille. One such French seizure from the French Connection in 1973 netted 210 pounds (95 kg) of heroin worth $38 million.

In February 1972, French traffickers offered a United States Army sergeant $96,000 (equivalent to $575,007 in 2018) to smuggle 240 pounds (109 kg) of heroin into the United States. He informed his superior who in turn notified the BNDD. As a result of this investigation, five men in New York and two in Paris were arrested with 264 pounds (120 kg) of heroin, which had a street value of $50 million. In a 14-month period, starting in February 1972, six major illicit heroin laboratories were seized and dismantled in the suburbs of Marseille by French national narcotics police in collaboration with U.S. drug agents. On February 29, 1972, French authorities seized the shrimp boat, Caprice des Temps, as it put to sea near Marseille heading towards Miami. It was carrying 915 pounds (415 kg) of heroin. Drug arrests in France skyrocketed from 57 in 1970 to 3,016 in 1972. Also broken up as part of this investigation was the crew of Vincent Papa, whose members included Anthony Loria Sr. and Virgil

Alessi. The well-organized gang was responsible for distributing close to a million dollars worth of heroin up and down the East Coast of the United States during the early 1970s, which in turn led to a major New York Police Department (NYPD) corruption scheme. The scope and depth of this scheme are still not known, but officials suspect it involved corrupt NYPD officers who allowed Papa, Alessi, and Loria access to the NYPD property/evidence storage room, where hundreds of kilograms of heroin lay seized from the now-infamous French Connection bust, and from which the men would help themselves and replace missing heroin with flour and cornstarch to avoid detection.[5][6]

The substitution was discovered only when officers noticed insects eating all the bags of "heroin". By that point an estimated street value of approximately $70 million worth of heroin had already been taken. The racket was brought to light and arrests were made. Certain plotters received jail sentences, including Papa, who was later murdered in federal prison in Atlanta, Georgia.

Ultimately, the Guérini clan was exterminated during internecine wars within the French underworld. In 1971, Marcel Francisci was accused by police forces in the U.S. Bureau of Narcotics of being involved in the trafficking of heroin between Marseilles and New York City.[7] On 16 January 1982, Marcel Francisci was shot to death as he was entering his car in the parking lot of the building where he lived in Paris, France.[7]

Tampa's underworld

Tampa crime started with Charlie Wall who, in the 1920s, controlled a number of gambling rackets and corrupt government officials. Wall controlled Tampa from the neighborhood known as Ybor City, he employed Italians, Cubans and men of other ethnicities into his organization. Charlie Wall's only competition was Tampa's earliest Mafia boss Ignacio Antinori.[1]

Antinori gang

The first Italian gang in the Tampa Bay area was created by Ignacio Antinori in 1925. Antinori a Sicilian-born immigrant became a well-known drug kingpin and the Italian crime boss of Tampa in the late 1920s. A smaller Italian gang in the area was controlled by Santo Trafficante Sr., who had lived in Tampa since the age of 18. Trafficante had already set up Bolita games throughout the city and was a very powerful man. Antinori took notice of Santo Trafficante and invited him into his organization and together they expanded the Bolita games across the state. By the 1930s Ignacio Antinori and Charlie Wall were in a bloody war for ten years, which would later be known as "Era of Blood". Wall's closest associate, Evaristo "Tito" Rubio, was shot on his porch on March 8, 1938. The war ended in the 1940s with Ignacio Antinori being shot and killed with a sawn-off shotgun. Both Wall's and Antinori's organizations were weakened leaving Santo Trafficante as one of the last and most powerful bosses in Tampa.[1]

Trafficante Sr. era

Santo Trafficante Sr. had now taken over a majority of the city and started to teach his son Santo Trafficante Jr. how to run the city. In Trafficante Sr.'s adult life he only portrayed himself as a successful Tampa cigar factory owner.[2] Santo was being watched closely by police and made Salvatore "Red" Italiano the acting boss. With the untimely Kefauver hearings and Charlie Wall testifying in 1950, both Trafficantes fled to Cuba. He always wanted to make it big in Cuban casinos and dispatched his son, Santo, Jr., to Havana in 1946 to help operate a mob owned casino. The Tampa mob made a lot of money in Cuba, but never achieved its ambition of making the island part of its own territory. After the hearings ended the Trafficantes returned to Tampa to find out that Italiano had just fled to Mexico leaving Jimmy Lumia the biggest mobster in the city. Santo had Lumia killed after finding out he was bad mouthing him while he was in Cuba and he took over again. In 1953 Santo Jr. survived a shooting. The family suspected it was Charlie Wall and they had him killed in 1955. Trafficante remained the boss of Tampa until he died of natural causes in 1954.[1][3]

Trafficante Jr. era

Santo Trafficante, Jr. succeeded his father as the boss of Tampa and ruled his family with an iron fist.[3] Despite numerous stunted ambitions, he was regarded as one of the most powerful mob bosses of the American Mafia. Santo Jr. was born in the United States on Nov. 15, 1914 and was one of five sons of Mafia boss Santo Trafficante. He maintained close working ties with the Lucchese crime family and the Bonanno crime family from New York City. Santo Jr. worked closely with Lucchese family boss Tommy Lucchese, who was a friend of his father, and a man who helped train him in the 1940s.[4]

Santo Jr. was known to have been deeply involved in the CIA efforts to involve the underworld in assassination attempts on Fidel Castro.[3] Under pressure of a court order granting him immunity from prosecution, but threatening him with contempt if he refused to talk, Trafficante admitted to a Congressional committee in 1975 that he had in the early 1960s recruited other mobsters to assassinate Castro.[citation needed] "It was like World War II" he told the committee. "They told me to go to the draft board and sign up."[citation needed] In 1978, Trafficante was called to testify before members of the United States House Select Committee on Assassinations investigating possible links between Lee Harvey Oswald and anti-Castro Cubans, including the theory that Castro had President John F. Kennedy killed in retaliation for the CIA's attempts to assassinate Castro.[5]

Santo, Jr. never spent a day in jail, and he died of natural causes in 1987.[6]

LoScalzo era

In 1987 Vincent LoScalzo became boss of the Trafficante family and Florida became open territory. The Five Families of New York City could work in any city in the state. LoScalzo's new family was smaller because many of the older mobsters were dead or retired.[7] He has interests in gambling, prostitution, narcotics, union racketeering, hijacking and fencing stolen goods. He controls a few bars, lounges, restaurants, night clubs and liquor stores all over the state of Florida. Loscalzo has ties to California, New Jersey, and New York as well as being connected to the Sicilian Mafia. On July 1, 1989 LoScalzo was indicted on racketeering charges that included grand theft, the charges were later dropped and then reinstated. LoScalzo plead no contest on October 7, 1997 and received three months of probation. In 1992, LoScalzo was arrested at the Tampa International Airport for carrying a loaded .38-caliber pistol in his brief case. The weapon showed up on the x-ray scanner. He was convicted for the charge in 1999 and was sentenced to 60 days in jail.[7]

South Florida operations

Santo Jr. started the family's south Florida crew in the early 1980s, he put Steven Bruno Raffa in charge. Bruno ran the crew with associates and freelancers after the death of Santo Jr. Raffa maintained a good relationship with LoScalzo, the new boss of the family and Genovese mobster John Mamone. In 2000 nineteen members of the crew were arrested and Raffa committed suicide.[8][9]

North Florida Operations

The Trafficante Family expanded their reach into North Florida cities like Orlando and Jacksonville during the late 1980s. The North Florida operations were run by the Maglianos & Granados. The activities of this crew included money laundering, racketeering, narcotics distribution, and illegal gambling. In May 2015, 13 people in Jacksonville were indicted by the Federal government on money laundering charges.[10]

Current Status

On November 25, 2007, Vincent LoScalzo is now 70 years old a semi-retired mobster and a "regular Joe" said Scott Deitche, author of Cigar City Mafia. The old family membership has died and the Tampa Mob has fallen in the shadows of the NYC mobs.[11]

Gambinos in Tampa

Recently statements have spread across Florida that John A. "Junior" Gotti, son of the late Gambino crime family boss John Gotti, has been running organized crime in Tampa since his release from prison in 2005. Gotti is allegedly a captain in the Gambino family. On August 5, 2008 Gotti was indicted on charges of racketeering, kidnapping, conspiracy to commit murder and drug trafficking. He and five others were indicted by a Florida grand jury.[12]

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY FOR THE MANAGEMENT AUDIT OF THE LAS VEGAS METROPOLITAN POLICE DEPARTMENT

We have completed the management audit of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department (Metro) as commissioned by the City Council of the City of Las Vegas. This Executive Summary presents our major findings, and the main body of the final report which follows provides our detailed evaluation of Metro. This report, Volume I, contains principal findings and recommendations. Volume II, which has been submitted under separate cover, contains detailed data describing the organization and operations of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department which was employed to develop the study findings presented in this report.

STUDY OBJECTIVES

Because of the magnitude of the City's expenditure for law enforcement services, the Las Vegas City Council believed that it would be appropriate to conduct an analysis of the current organization, staffing, operations, services, and costs of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department (Metro) to ensure that the Department is progressively and cost-effectively operated, and that the City is receiving services commensurate with its contribution to support Metro operations. The City's principal objectives in commissioning the study were as follows:

- Is Metro currently operated in a cost-effective fashion including determining if: (1) Current management and administrative organization is cost-effective? (2) Available staff resources are deployed to maximize use of sworn personnel in direct service law enforcement functions? (3) Use of non-sworn personnel has been employed to maximize the effectiveness of sworn staff resources? and (4) Resources employed through the contract are cost-effectively utilized by Metro?

- Are current law enforcement services provided to the City of Las Vegas consistent with demand generated from the City, and are services planned, deployed, and delivered to meet the different demands of the different neighborhoods and commercial areas of the City?

- Finally, can and should steps be taken to more clearly define performance and service expectations under the contract which can be measured and employed on a continuing basis to address accountability and cost share concerns of the City?

HOW THE STUDY WAS CONDUCTED

As originally proposed to the City, the project was to be conducted in two distinct phases as follows:

- The first phase was to consist of detailed and extensive interviews and other data collection activities to thoroughly document the organization, operations, programs, and services of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department. Upon conclusion of the first phase, the consulting team was to evaluate data initially collected to identify the following:

  - Determine those areas in which Metro is performing cost effectively and consistent with progressive law enforcement agency practice in the United States.

  - Identify potential cost effectiveness issues and improvement opportunities.

  At the conclusion of the first phase, the consulting team was to develop a list or preliminary findings related to the overall cost-effectiveness of the Metro operation and outline major cost effectiveness issues for more detailed, follow-up analysis.

- The second phase was to consist of detailed analysis of significant cost effectiveness issues and improvement opportunities.

The first phase absorbed about half of the budget for the management audit project. Given first phase findings, we do not believe that further expenditure of City resources on conducting and completing a second phase as originally intended is warranted. We believe the pages which follow will answer the City's initial questions about Metro in regard to cost-effectiveness and service quality without additional analysis and fully expending resources allocated to support the management audit project.

Our principal findings follow.

MAJOR FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

The main body of the report presents a unit by unit evaluation of Metro and its programs and services. Volume Two provides the detailed information on the organization, services, and workload of Metro which was employed as the basis for evaluating the cost - effectiveness of the Department. Our principal findings are as follows:

- The Department Should Be Rated Highly From the Leadership and Strategic Thinking Perspective. Based on widespread interviews throughout the organization, we have found that the Department is being managed to encourage strategic thinking and planning and developing and implementing new ways to provide law enforcement services to all components of its service area. There is a strong thread of leadership from top management down through and including Deputy Chiefs, Captains, Lieutenants, and Sergeants. In addition:

  - The leadership, strategic thinking, and visioning process is excellent and occurs at all levels of the organization.

  - Managers throughout the organization, including both sworn and civilian, appear to be of excellent quality. The department seems to know how to select good people for its important management jobs, and those selected have a "can do" and "we can do better" mindset. This is not typical of the law enforcement agencies we have worked with over the last ten years.

- There are No Indications that the Department is "Top Heavy" and Management and Supervisory Staffing Patterns are Streamlined Compared to Other Large Law Enforcement Agencies Across the United States. While there are a few issues associated with the potential to consider civilianizing several sworn management positions, these are minor in the context of the overall management and supervisory organization and staffing plan. Indeed, when compared to other large law enforcement agencies across the United States, Metro is relatively leanly staffed from the management and supervisory staffing perspective. Consider the following:

  - The Volume Two, the Profile describes the responsibilities and assignments of the more than 2,300 sworn and civilian staff. Of this total, about 13.3 % (sworn and civilian) of the Department's total positions are comprised of managerial and supervisory positions.

- This compares to the "typical" larger law enforcement agency across the United States as follows:

Factor	Las Vegas Metro	Industry Pattern for Large Policing Agencies
Percent of Sworn Staff in Management and Supervisory Positions (Sheriff/Chief through Sergeant)	16.5 %	20% to 24 %
Percent of Sworn Staff in Management Positions (Sheriff/Chief Through Lieutenant)	4.9 %	6 % to 8 %
Percent of Sworn Staff in Supervisory (Sergeant) Positions	11.6 %	14 % to 16 %
Average Span of Control of Managers and Supervisors (sworn staff only).	1:5	1:4

- With the exception of the few issues raised in the main body of this report, our review of current operations confirms the finding that the Department is logically organized; relatively leanly staffed from the management and supervisory staffing perspective; and is overall, cost-effectively organized in terms of management and supervisory staffing.

- The Department has also done well in using civilian managers in areas where the experience and background of sworn command officers is not required, and sworn managers assigned to such areas spend most of their time learning things they cannot use to any significant degree in their next command position.

- Concurrently, The Department Has Made Major Progress in Utilizing Civilian Staff to Handle Responsibilities Which Do Not Require the Training, Experience, and Cost of Sworn Personnel. Metro has made extensive use of civilian personnel to free sworn staff for duties which require their training and experience. Consider the following:

CLV001104

- As shown in the next table, only about 5.4 % of sworn staff from Captain through line officer are assigned to administrative and support activities in the Department.

Function	Percent of Total Sworn Positions Assigned
Administration and Support	1.9 %
Training	2.5 %
Recruiting and Selection	1.0 %
TOTAL	5.4 %

These assignments include such functions as Internal Affairs, the Academy, and recruiting functions (such as Outreach) which need to be staffed by sworn officers.

- Based on a position by position review of these assignments, with the exception of several management positions in the technical and support services area, sworn staff in support and administrative functions are fully justified and there are few opportunities to civilianize additional positions to which sworn officers are currently assigned.

- Concurrently, about 36 % of the Department's total personnel complement consists of non-sworn, civilian staff. While comparisons in this area are difficult because of the different nature of large departments across the United States (e.g. Metro has a crime laboratory function while some other large departments do not; Metro includes the Work Card unit which most other large departments do not have), this is well above the 25 % non-sworn staff composition which is typical of other large, progressive law enforcement agencies which have emphasized civilianization.

- Direct Law Enforcement Operations Are Relatively Tightly Staffed and Available Resources Are Productively Employed. Because of the high degree of civilianization, nearly 95 % of the sworn staff resources currently assigned to Metro are assigned to direct law enforcement services including basic investigations, patrol, and special enforcement or pro-active services. Our evaluation results in the following findings:

  - Resources allocated to pro-active, special enforcement activities and services are relatively modest compared to many other large law enforcement agencies and are effectively deployed to address community-wide problems.

Currently, about 12 % of sworn personnel are assigned to pro-active or special enforcement functions such as intelligence, vice and narcotics, and gang investigation and enforcement. This compares to a range of about 15 % to 20 % in other large law enforcement agencies. Again, while comparative information are insufficient to support a conclusion that special enforcement/pro-active staff resources in Metro are appropriately assigned and utilized, current resource allocation and staffing need to be considered in light of the following:

.. It is not unusual for modern law enforcement agencies to staff and deploy special pro-active units to address specific community protection problems which cannot be adequately addressed by the traditional patrol and investigative service operations.

.. However, we have found in our work with other law enforcement agencies that special enforcement units in some instances:

-- Are often organized and staffed at the expense of the basic law enforcement service functions of patrol and investigations.

-- Often become self-perpetuating, continuing on once their primary purpose has been largely met. This is often because of the high visibility of these units and their related public relations value; and sworn staff interest in serving in special enforcement activities.

Review of the mission, function, and results achieved by the special enforcement units of Metro indicates that none of the issues noted above are evident. Indeed, the special enforcement units in the Department have been established and are deployed to address law enforcement needs which are service area wide or regional in nature; complement rather than duplicate the pro-active efforts which take place at the Area Command level in Patrol; and are managed and measured based on results achieved. Review of output data indicates that the Department's special enforcement units are producing significant results as measured by arrests compared to resources committed.

- Available data indicate that the Department's investigative service units have extremely high workloads and are leanly staffed in comparison to investigative service demand. Investigative services are comprised of units which conduct follow-up investigations of offenses reported to the police or developed by patrol or other field units. They differ from pro-active units which generate cases based on targeting specific offenders or crime problems. To date, a valid workload based formula for determining investigative staffing needs has not been developed anywhere in the United States. As a result, we have typically employed a variety of indicators to evaluate investigative staffing which combines comparisons; review of investigator caseloads compared to standard ranges we have developed over the years of evaluating law enforcement agencies of all sizes; and review of basic investigative case management techniques and approaches. Application of each of these measures indicates that workloads in Metro are high compared to staffing levels and based on interviews, investigative supervisors are employing modern case management techniques.

  We are confident that any additional analysis such as desk audits with individual investigators would determine that most core investigative units are understaffed compared to workload.

- Traffic Enforcement Units are Performing at High Levels Compared to Output Standards. Principal findings supporting this statement are as follows:

  .. Motor officer citation output (estimated at 1.1 citation per net working hour or an average of about 11 citations per working shift) is well above industry norms for productive traffic enforcement units (8 to 10 citations per 10 hour work shift).

  .. The enforcement effort is consistent with effective practice and community oriented policing philosophy.

  .. The Accident Investigation Unit is staffed consistent with caseload including fatal and hit and run accidents.

- Patrol Operations are Managed and Deployed Consistent with Progressive Practice. Patrol operations and services can be evaluated from a number of perspectives including: (1) Basic evaluation of staffing compared to workload; and (2) Extent to which patrol operations are designed, managed, and deployed to achieve clearly articulated policing goals.

  Policing Philosophy and Patrol Management. Across the United States, community oriented policing has and is receiving much attention from law enforcement agencies and the public. As the concept has become popular, a number of different approaches have been developed and implemented by large, medium, and small policing agencies across the United States. While some have been effective and others have achieved little, there is no consistent pattern involving which approach is most effective or the "best practice". There are, however, some basic principles which underlie community oriented policing and its variations and they are as follows:

  - Tailor policing approaches to the unique problems of the community to include adopting different approaches for dealing with sub-areas of the community.

  - Address not only community problems which are direct law enforcement/public safety issues but also quality of life problems which can trigger public safety and law enforcement problems.

  - Leverage other public and private resources to address identified problems to complement policing resources.

  - Establish a clear chain of accountability for achieving measurable results from top management down through and including the line patrol officer.

  Patrol, as the major, first line community law enforcement capability, is a critical component of any community policing and results oriented policing program. Our analysis indicates that Metro and the Patrol Services Bureau is performing effectively in regard to each of the major principles listed above. Consider the following:

  - A goal, objective, and target setting process which will shift the focus for planning and measuring the effectiveness of patrol operations is currently underway. This approach, which is in the process of being implemented, will facilitate identification of the top three crimes and the majority quality of life issues in each area.

CLV001108

The area commanders are expected to develop strategies and employ the resources assigned to them, as well as identify the need for support by other specialized enforcement resources available from elsewhere in Metro, to achieve reduction (preliminarily targeted at 5 %) in the top three criminal problems as well as improve quality of life issues unique to their area command. This should be viewed as an extremely progressive practice compared to most other medium or large enforcement agencies.

- It is clear that each Area Command has and is being managed to develop and sustain different policing approaches. These approaches reflect the specific needs of the neighborhoods and communities which comprise their respective service areas. This includes:

  .. Having the flexibility to deploy assigned personnel resources differently, including allocating staff resources to neighborhood level special enforcement, community liaison, and other functions critical to developing and implementing community oriented policing approaches.

  .. The new goal setting and performance accountability approach previously described can only be expected to enhance Area Command performance in addressing different public safety and law enforcement problems at the neighborhood level.

  .. Interviews indicate that there is a clear commitment at the management and Area Command level to community oriented and results oriented policing approach.

- Because of the rapid growth of the community and the significant number of new officers being absorbed by the patrol force, it is impractical to expect the Department to fully implement community oriented policing at the line patrol officer level. While officers are expected to and encouraged to develop relationships with residents and businesses in their assigned patrol areas and identify problems which need to be addressed, call for service demand and officer experience will make it impractical to fully implement a program under which every officer develops specific policing plans for his or her patrol area and either individually, or in conjunction with other line patrol officers, accomplished pro-active activities to implement those plans. The current approach of dedicating some patrol staff to community liaison roles and targeted enforcement and problem solving should be recognized as an effective way to proceed.

Patrol Deployment, Staffing and Utilization. Data evaluated during the study clearly indicate that the Metro and the Patrol Service Bureau approaches patrol deployment consistent with effective workload and staff utilization based practices. For example:

- Differences in service demand and community generated workload are employed as the basis for allocating staff resources to the area commands.

- Each area command deploys resources differently, again reflecting differences in call for service and other workload demand. This includes different "overlap" days (when patrol on-duty resources "peak" based on the 4/10 work schedule) between and among area commands and between and among shifts within area commands.

- Training, Recruiting and Selection, and Other Key Support and Administrative Programs are Exemplary. The main body of this final report contains a summary evaluation of the Department's major support programs such as training, staff development, recruiting and selection, and internal affairs/ complaint investigation. We have reviewed these programs in the context of "best practices" and practices and approaches in these areas which we have evaluated for other law enforcement agencies and have concluded the following:

  - The current recruiting and selection program is among the best we have encountered in recent years. This includes outreach approaches; emphasis on building and sustaining diversity in the department; and maintaining quality standards while attempting to keep pace with the significant demands to keep pace with community growth.

  - Pre-service and In-service Training Programs are well designed and include some components often ignored or insufficiently emphasized by other law enforcement agencies with which we have worked. This includes such programs as a mandatory and continuing training program for new first line supervisors (sworn and civilian), and attention (including a needs assessment and subsequent development of specific training opportunities) for civilian staff -- often overlooked by other law enforcement agencies.

- A pro-active approach has and is being taken to address such issues as sexual harassment to include not only addressing allegations of situations but also focusing on prevention and mediation of allegations when they occur.

- The internal affairs process is structured consistent with progressive practices and provides timely resolution of complaints of misconduct or policy/procedures violations.

Overall, our findings involving the cost-effectiveness of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department, as summarized above, are positive. While some potential cost-effectiveness issues have been identified and could receive additional analysis, they are relatively minor in the context of the magnitude of the total Department and involve a relatively limited number of positions and functions and/or validation of the findings outlined in more detail in the main body of the final report.

The principal purpose of this project was to provide a third party review of the efficiency and effectiveness of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department for the City of Las Vegas to ensure that the resources contributed by the City were supporting an efficient and effective law enforcement program. A total of $ 180,000 was allocated to support the project with about half of project resources allocated to each of two phases. As noted earlier, the original project plan was to conduct the project in two phases with the first phase focused on identifying issues and the second phase based on detailed analysis of issues and improvement opportunities identified as a result of first phase data collection and analysis. Based on the nature of the issues identified in this report and the findings summarized above, we do not believe a second phase is warranted and completing the project as originally designed would not be a cost effective use of City funds. By all the major measures employed in this study, the Las Vegas

CLV001111

Metropolitan Police Department is efficiently organized and operated. While a few potential cost-effectiveness issues have been identified, they are minor in the context of the overall organization and can be addressed by the Department without further expenditure on consulting services for this project.

This analysis has indicated that Metro is an efficient and effective organization and was conducted based on City Council concerns about cost - effectiveness of the services provided by Metro to the City under the current contract. As noted in this report, there is much positive about the Department and its current services, programs, and operations. We believe that steps need to be taken by both the Department and the City which can better make visible the services and results so that annual budget requests can be made and considered in the context of service commitments made and results achieved. The main body of the report outlines a recommended set of measures and processes which can be employed to make service targets and results achieved more visible to the City.

The main body of the report which follows presents our findings in more detail.

Organization and Operations Audit

INTRODUCTION AND EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This initial chapter of the report introduces the approaches utilized in this study and summarizes key findings, conclusions and recommendations to be found in this report.

1. INTRODUCTION TO THE REPORT

The Matrix Consulting Group was retained by the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department to conduct an Organization and Operations Audit. In reaching the concluding point of the study, the project team has assembled this final report which summarizes our findings, conclusions and recommendations, where appropriate. This report represents the conclusion of nearly four months of analysis of the organizational structure, staffing, management and operations of the Police Department.

The scope of this assignment was a comprehensive organizational, staffing and operations assessment of the LVMPD, excluding the detention system and the airport. In this Organization and Operations Audit of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department, the Matrix Consulting Group's project team utilized a wide variety of data collection and analytical techniques. The project team conducted the following data collection and analytical activities:

- The project team began an intensive process of interviewing staff in every Police Department function and collecting a wide variety of data designed to document workloads, costs and service levels. Members of the project team individually interviewed almost 250 staff. These interviews included not only managers and supervisors, but also many line staff.

- The project team supplemented this input through the use of confidential employee surveys. About one-third of the employees took advantage of this opportunity to provide input to us. Its results were useful to the project team to identify issues and potential solutions.

- The project team developed descriptive summaries, or profiles, of each Division and operating unit in the LVMPD – reflecting organizational structure, staffing, workloads, service levels and programmatic objectives. These profiles were reviewed with managers and staff.

- We compared workloads / service levels as well as the performance and management of the Las Vegas Metro Police Department with the project team's assessment technique called 'best management practices'. This step served as an issue identification step in our analytical process.

- The project team also compared organizational structure, staffing levels, as well as certain operational and service delivery indices against other police departments. This step, too, served as a way to identify issues in this study. This survey also included an examination of comparative compensation.

- The project team also reviewed initial findings and issues with the management of the Police Department as well as with City and County management.

- The project team also developed a methodology for projecting the staffing needs of the LVMPD for a ten year planning period. These projections can be found in an Attachment to this report.

In all instances, the measures of efficiency and effectiveness utilized by the project team in our analyses were selected and adjusted to reflect the unique operating and service conditions in Las Vegas and Clark County.

2. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The project team has prepared this detailed summary of the findings, conclusions and recommendations contained in this final report. Before summarizing the principle findings, conclusions and recommendations of the report it is important to place this study in context. The sections, which follow, describe relevant recent population and law enforcement workload trends for the LVMPD which in part led to the commissioning of this study. The project team also places the LVMPD in perspective in terms of the kind of its strengths as well as opportunities to improve management, operations and services.

(1) The Context of This Study.

This study came at a critical time for the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department. After years of extremely rapid population growth – the fastest in the country for a metropolitan area its size – and associated workload / crime growth, LVMPD managers were concerned that they were 'falling behind the curve'. It is clear from a review of relevant trends that there are elements of truth behind this concern.

The following table shows the total number of authorized LVMPD personnel for both commissioned and civilian personnel (as of July 1) between 1999 and 2003, as well as the percentage change for each year since 1999 – excluding detention system staffing. The total number of authorized commissioned personnel has increased by 21.2% since 1999, or an annual average percentage increase of 5.3%. The total number of authorized civilian personnel has increased by 29.3% since 1999, or an annual average increase of 7.3% between 1999 and 2003.

Commissioned	1,749	1,969	2,019	2,050	2,119
Cum. % Change	NA	12.6%	15.4%	17.2%	21.2%
Civilian	874	938	1,013	1,070	1,130
Cum. % Change	NA	7.3%	15.9%	22.4%	29.3%
TOTAL	2,623	2,907	3,032	3,120	3,249
% Change Since 1999	NA	10.8%	15.6%	18.9%	23.9%

During the same period, the service area population for the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department has grown by over 20%. The following table shows the population figures and percentages for the LVMPD service area between 1999 and 2003.

Population	1999	2000	2001	2002	2003
LVMPD Service Area	1,020,340	1,072,639	1,134,478	1,176,146	1,228,466
Cum. % Change	N/A	5.1%	11.2%	15.3%	20.4%

The chart, below, graphically portrays the staffing versus population trend information described above. As the chart shows, sworn staffing has risen comparably with service area population while civilian staffing increases have exceeded population growth (as the Department has established its support infrastructure – a major effort in the past few years).

Population	0	5.1%	11.2%	15.3%	20.4%
Commissioned Staff	0	12.6%	15.4%	17.2%	21.2%
Civilian Staff	0	7.3%	15.9%	22.4%	29.3%

However, population increases do not tell the story of law enforcement resource needs – workloads and increasing criminal risks do. The following table shows the community generated field responded calls for service between 1999 and 2003 as well as the percentage change for each year since 1999. As shown, the number of community generated calls for service has increased by 21.6% since 1999.

Call for Service	543,700	581,619	628,964	657,959	661,171
Cum. % Change	NA	7.0%	15.7%	21.0%	21.6%

The project team also collected information on recent trends in reported major crimes as a proxy for understanding changes in criminal risks. The following table shows the total number of Part I crimes between 1999 and 2003, as well as the cumulative percentage change for each year since 1999. As shown, the cumulative percentage increase of Part I crimes amounts to 39.5% since 1999, with the largest 5-year percentage increases for aggravated assault, auto theft, larceny, and murder.

% Change Since 1999	NA	-0.9%	5.7%	18.7%	39.5%

The chart, below, graphically portrays the staffing versus call for service and major crime trend information described above. As examination of these trends clearly shows, while staffing levels have recently kept pace with field generated workloads, recent significant growth in major crimes raises issues about the ability of the Department to proactively anticipate or otherwise suppress crimes.

Commissioned Staff	0	12.6%	15.4%	17.2%	21.2%
Civilian Staff	0	7.3%	15.9%	22.4%	29.3%
Calls for Service	0	7.0%	15.7%	21.0%	21.6%
Part I Crimes	0	-0.9%	5.7%	18.7%	39.5%

These issues generated the Department's interest in this study. It is generally understood today that effective law enforcement is not just about responding quickly to a request for service. Rather, it is about having sufficient time also to be proactive. This project provided critical analysis relating to the LVMPD's need to be effective as a proactive and not just reactive Department. It also provided critical analysis for the Department to accomplish this as efficiently as possible.

(2) The Strengths of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department.

It is important to place any analysis such as this into a complete context. A study such as this one, necessarily focuses much of its attention on improvement opportunities which need to be addressed in a client agency. However, this study process has also identified many positive characteristics of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department. It is clear from the project team's work that the LVMPD is an exemplary organization. This conclusion was established from:

- Our extensive input and interaction from hundreds of personnel in the organization which highlighted staffs' dedication to service.
- The 'best practices' assessment process utilized in this study was also key to understanding that the Department has a history of providing high levels of service, a wide range of services and a tradition of evaluating new approaches to law enforcement.
- The comparative analysis demonstrated that the LVMPD is a leader among the group of large agencies we studied as part of this project.

The project team feels that it is important in this Executive Summary to highlight at least some of the positive features of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department. The table, below, summarizes some of these positive attributes:

Summary of Key Positive Findings
OVERALL DEPARTMENT AND ITS MANAGEMENT
• The Las Vegas Police Department is, and has been for many years, an 'accredited' agency through an ongoing and stringent process by a national association. This has focused the Department on the attainment of many 'best practices'.
• The Department has a relatively 'lean' top management group, including the Sheriff, Undersheriff and two Assistant Sheriffs. Given the size of the agency, many of its counterparts have many more managers at this level of the organization.
• The Department is involved in many 'cutting edge' law enforcement issues, including for example: investigation of internet crimes (involving fraud and pornography), homeland security intelligence and proactive investigations.
• The Department utilizes many 'state of the art' technologies relating to forensics, its new radio system, use of GIS to aid the deployment of field resources, in car computers to aid the utilization of field resources most notably in traffic, and in the investigation of computer crimes.
• The Department is involved in many joint efforts with other agencies at the federal, State and local levels. Joint task forces exist in many investigative areas, for example, in auto thefts.
• The Department is proactive working with the many communities it serves as well as with the media.
• Clear policies and procedures are in place throughout the Department. Generally, policies are well crafted and meet industry best practices.
• The Department has clear financial controls in place.
• The Department has centralized most of its internal support functions which has reduced the potential for duplication of services and costs.
• The Department has outsourced several of its functions, for example, fleet and facilities maintenance.
• The Department has been aggressive in its approach to civilianization with impacts on the cost effectiveness of staff as well as the appropriate background for staff in support positions.
FIELD OPERATIONS
• The Police Department deploys field personnel in a manner consistent with historical workloads, the need to ensure appropriate response times and to balance proactive capabilities. Crime analysis staff play a lead and constant role in this analysis.
• Staffing and deployment decisions are accomplished using formal models which evaluate such key analytical factors as workloads, service level objectives and availability of staff.
• Calls for service are 'triaged' in the field according to priority and availability of resources.
• The Police Department has taken steps to manage calls for service through the use of a "Teleserve" unit. This unit takes reports for calls for service over the telephone, providing a report to the victim, documenting the incident but not requiring a field response. The Department also utilizes a few field deployed civilians to handle other lower priority requests for service.

• The Department has proactive enforcement units at each of its area commands to handle the unique policing needs of the many communities it serves.
• The Department has restructured the way it provides services in its Downtown Area Command to deliver a better coordinated service.
• Dedicated traffic enforcement personnel exhibit high levels of enforcement activity.
• Traffic enforcement activities are directed toward problems – focusing on reducing accidents.
INVESTIGATIONS
• Several investigative units are functioning at very high ratios of cases to staff – especially in property crime, domestic violence and other person crime units.
• The Department is involved in numerous regional and cooperative task force initiatives – including efforts to address auto theft, narcotics, vice, cyber crimes and the internet.
• The Abuse / Neglect Unit functions entirely with civilian investigators.
• There are also several proactive investigative units – VIPER for auto theft, career criminal and repeat offender units, as well as internet crimes against children, cyber crimes and tourist safety units.
• Field and investigative units have a high level of support from a leading and accredited criminalistics unit for field and lab services.
SPECIAL OPERATIONS
• The Department has consolidated most of its special proactive enforcement units in one division which efficiently and effectively consolidates intelligence and other forms of support. Units in this Division frequently work together on special enforcement activities.
• Missions and priorities are well defined in special operations also increasing their effectiveness.
• Unusual for these functions, many staff are civilians.
• The Special Operations Division coordinates its plans and activities with many external agencies.
• The resident deputy program is organized in this division to provide higher levels of enforcement to rural parts of the County.
ADMINISTRATIVE AND SUPPORT SERVICES
• The Department takes complaints against itself and its personnel very seriously. Complaints have dropped significantly in recent years.
• The Department has initiated an early intervention program designed to identify employees with potential issues before they result in an internal affairs complaint. This training has been provided to all managerial and supervisory personnel.
• There is a strong internal audit and quality assurance program in the Department which reinforces ongoing efforts to remain a leading agency for its size in the country.

• Strong fiscal policies exist and are centrally supported in the Department.
• The Public Information is staffed by experienced personnel who quickly respond to media requests and manage public affairs while supporting others in the Department with public roles.
• The Department leads extensive inter-governmental relations and outreach efforts.
• The Communications Bureau answers over 91% of calls within 10 seconds.
• Information Technology has recently made major strides in developing a long range plan and leading-edge uses for computer systems in the Department.
• The Department has increased its focus on the various risks it faces as a law enforcement agency, including health and safety, legal, etc.
• The recruitment process for new Police Officers is thorough and has a high degree of outreach, resulting in a broad pool of applicants and recruits.
• The testing and background check processes conform to 'best practices' and in many cases exceed national standards in terms of timeliness and effectiveness.
• In-service training, including that provided to civilians, reflects the Department's commitment to provide high levels of varied and targeted training for personnel.

It should be pointed out that in spite of its length, the positive characteristics of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department described above are not exhaustive – they represent operational and management approaches which highlight the quality of this Department. As a result, while there are many recommendations found in this report to improve operations and services, these proposed changes reflect a tradition of self-examination for the Department and continue a philosophy of providing excellent service to the community. These changes should be viewed as evolutionary, not revolutionary.

There are also many improvement opportunities which should be addressed by the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department. These improvement opportunities are a consequence of the Department's size, complexity and the fact that it has grown so quickly. The improvement areas are summarized in the extended table which begins below. The detailed analyses which this table summarizes are contained within the report. We have also included an extended table at the end of the list of recommendations which summarizes all of the personnel related changes to be found in this report.

SUMMARY OF RECOMMENDATIONS IN THE FINAL REPORT

Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department

Chapter 1 – Technical Services Division, Information Technology Bureau
The plan of organization for the Information Technologies Bureau should be modified to flatten the organization and enhance the accountability for information technology management. This would result in one net fewer manager/supervisor position.
The salaries for Executive Director, IT Manager, IT Supervisor should be adjusted to provide a competitive compensation system.
The Information Technologies Bureau should develop a strategic plan for information systems.
The Information Technologies Bureau should develop an inventory of all software and applications in use by the department.
The Information Technologies Bureau should assume responsibility for the control of licensed software in use by the Las Vegas Metro PD, audit the software in use and remove unlicensed software or obtain appropriate licensing authority.
The Information technologies Bureau should develop a disaster recovery/business resumption plan for Las Vegas Metro PD and test the adequacy of this plan on an ongoing basis.
A Security Risk Assessment Should Be Conducted. The Information Technologies Bureau should develop an information security policy. All employees within the Las Vegas Metropolitan PD should be required to acknowledge the information technology security policy. The Information Technology Supervisor allocated to configuration management should be reclassified to Senior Network Systems Analyst, assigned to the Enterprise Services Section, and assigned responsibility for information technology security.
The Las Vegas Metropolitan PD should develop technology standards in the full range of information technology hardware and software. The Las Vegas Metropolitan PD should migrate from GroupWise to Microsoft Outlook, and transition from Novell to Microsoft fileserver software. The Las Vegas Metropolitan PD should migrate from Corel WordPerfect to Microsoft Word. There would be a net decrease of between $0 – ($60,000) in one time costs.
The Information Technologies Bureau should fully develop information technology policies and, upon development of these policies, place these policies on the Las Vegas Metropolitan PD Intranet.

The Telecommunications Director should develop an inventory of telephone equipment within all of the Las Vegas Metropolitan PD facilities. The Telecommunications Director should contract for the one-time audit of telephone invoices through the use of specialty consultants that audit these invoices and charge a fee based upon the extent of cost savings realized. The Telecommunications Director should conduct a cost-benefit analysis to determine whether there are enough telephone lines and equipment in Las Vegas Metropolitan PD facilities to warrant the purchase of telephone equipment including the purchase of VoIP private branch exchange (PBX) equipment at any of these facilities.
Chapter 1 – Technical Services Division, Fingerprint Bureau
The Fingerprint Bureau should develop a cost recovery philosophy. The Bureau should work with Finance to develop a comprehensive fee. The Bureau should enhance cost recovery.
The AFIS Unit should add two temporary positions to address backlog issues for one year.
Four additional LEST's should be authorized for the Work Card Unit to address the wait time for customers (staff the Lifescan machines) and provide additional support (backroom processing).
The Records Manager position should be eliminated, through attrition.
Chapter 1 – Technical Services Division, General Services Bureau
Facility management practices should be improved in such areas as conducting an inventory of facility components including the inputting these components into MP2, establishing preventive maintenance schedules and inputting this schedule into MP2, etc.
Staffing for Facility Management should be increased by two Facility Maintenance Coordinators.
Responsibility for issuance of facility access cards should be reassigned to the Human Resources Division and the facility access card should be consolidated with the employee identification card.
The responsibility for motorcycle maintenance should be assigned to Fleet Services including the reassignment of two Mechanics.
Replacement cycles for the LVMPD Fleet should be adjusted for general use sedans to between 90,000 and 100,000 miles.
The general order for take home vehicles should be modified to include policies for take home vehicles. The Finance Office should be responsible for administration of the take-home program. The Finance Office and Payroll should review take home car assignments and determine which are taxable fringe benefits and assure that employees W-2 statements reflect the value of that benefit. A General Order should be adopted establishing guidelines for minimum utilization of vehicles. The Finance Office should evaluate, identify, and recommend the elimination or "pooling" of underutilized vehicles in the LVMPD fleet. Fleet Services should develop a general order regarding the type and size of vehicles that will be assigned under different circumstances.

The Finance Office should work with other public agencies, particularly the City of Las Vegas and Clark County, to formulate a regional cooperative purchasing program to bulk purchase fuel and reduce the unit costs.
The temporary position within Fleet Services should be converted to a full-time LEST.
The Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department should either reduce the uniform allowance to that necessary for cleaning of the uniforms or the it should get out of the business of providing uniforms and use the uniform allowance to provide for the purchase and maintenance of uniforms.
Chapter 1 – Technical Services Division, Communications Bureau
Maintain authorized staffing for 9-1-1 Specialists and Dispatchers this year at 216. Utilize the workload and availability formula on an ongoing basis to assess staffing needs in the center.
Consider implementation of an 8 or 12-hour shift schedule to reduce the number of staff required.
The Bureau should alter supervisory responsibilities in order for functions to be grouped. The Department should evaluate the elimination of the Police Captain position when the position becomes vacant.
The Bureau further explore potential consolidation opportunities.
Chapter 1 – Technical Services Division, Records Bureau
The Records Bureau should acquire and install a document imaging system within the context of the IT Strategic Plan.
The funding for outsourcing of transcription should be increased by $120,000 annually.
The Information Technologies Bureau should integrate the LRMS so that it can download information into both WVS and NCIC.
Chapter 2 – Human Resources Division, Personnel Bureau
Hire an Analyst position to administer ADA requirements, FMLA eligibility and other day-to-day program requirements to allow the Manager to focus on more policy-oriented objectives.
Prepare and issue a Request for Proposals for physical exams.. If the result of the Request for Proposals does not generate comparable cost savings, consider bringing this function in-house.
The Department should implement a proactive Injury Prevention Program, and authorize an additional Analyst to work with, and supplement the efforts of the Safety Coordinator.
Add a Personnel Technician to Selection and Classification.
Transfer 3 teams (3 Analysts and 3 Personnel Technicians) to the Employee Services Section to hold the Employee Services Manager accountable for the overall recruitment process.

The Selection and Classification Section should conduct salary surveys on an annual basis to ensure the "external equity" of the Department's pay structure. The Selection and Classification Section should routinely conduct desk audits of classifications within the Department to update the classification plan.
Maintain Payroll staffing at current levels while evaluating the feasibility of improving methods in which outlying divisions report payroll exceptions.
Upon transfer of the Time and Attendance Staff to the Finance Office from the Payroll Section, transfer the 5 remaining Accounting Specialists and Account Technicians and the 1 Support Assistant to the Selection and Classification Section. Eliminate the Payroll Manager position, through attrition, upon transfer of the Time and Attendance Staff to the Finance Office from the Payroll Section.
Evaluate the civilianization of the positions of Executive Director of Personnel and Employee Services Manager, when these positions become vacant.
Ensure that the Enterprise Resource Planning initiative incorporates a comprehensive Human Resources Information System including payroll.
The Personnel Bureau should ensure that each employee's performance is evaluated annually.
Chapter 2 – Human Resources Division, Training Bureau
The Deputy Chiefs, Assistant Sheriff's, and Undersheriff should be informed regarding sworn officers that do not meet POST requirements for new and re-certification training each year.
LVMPD should modify the requirement for AOST for sworn staff below the rank of Captain to attend AOST once per 18 months.
The Department should establish a command college for the positions of Lieutenant and above.
The Department should withdraw from PAL, and reallocate the two Police Officers to other areas of the Department
The Las Vegas Metropolitan PD should enhance the appearance and operation of the firing range.
Consolidate the firing range and driving course under the direction of the Academy Lieutenant, and transfer responsibility for DARE to the Lieutenant responsible for In-service training to balance the spans of control somewhat. Eliminate the third Lieutenant position, through attrition, allocated to the Training Bureau. Eliminate the position of Sr. LEST that provides support to the Lieutenant, through attrition.
Chapter 3 – Professional Standards Division
Hire one additional Analyst to specifically focus on proactive management studies of bureaus within the Las Vegas Metropolitan PD.
Develop a consistent format for report development and presentation by the Quality Assurance Section.

The Section Lieutenant should immediately begin the process of documenting all recommendations made in reports, and assigning the task of following-up on progress made against these recommendations. The progress in implementing recommendations should be reported to the Deputy Chiefs and Assistant Sheriff's.
Develop work plans for each management study conducted by the Quality Assurance Section before beginning these studies.
The Quality Assurance Section Should Develop an Internal Control Procedures Manual and Conduct Internal Control Audits.
The Section enhance its policy regarding the reporting of progress in investigations at the Area Command level by requiring these Commands to report progress monthly to the Internal Affairs Section.
Purchase video equipment to enable videotaping of interviews by Internal Affairs.
Chapter 4 – Office of the Sheriff
The Risk Management Unit should develop a proactive approach to the identification and reduction of liability hazards and unsafe conditions.
Evaluate the civilianization of the position of Risk Manager when this position becomes vacant.
The Department should add an Attorney and a Legal Secretary position. The Department should assess the impact of adding the position in terms of reducing reliance on legal counsel and the associated reduction in costs. The Department should add a second Attorney position if there appears to be opportunities to further reduce these costs in excess of the cost of the second position.
Legal Affairs should record the time expended by its legal staff.
The Time and Attendance Unit should be transferred from the Payroll Section in the Human Resources Division to the Accounting Unit in Finance.
Finance should prepare a five-year financial plan for the Las Vegas Metro PD including a five year capital improvement plan.
Finance should develop and implement a program budget for the Las Vegas Metropolitan PD.
The Las Vegas Metropolitan PD should work with the County to implement security controls that would prevent Clark County staff from making changes to the Department's general ledger.
An additional Analyst position should be authorized for the Budget Unit in Finance.

The Budget Unit should assume responsibility for the analysis of cost recovery for fee-based services and the updating of fees. Over the next two to three years, the Budget Unit should analyze all of the fees charged by the Las Vegas Metropolitan PD to assess the adequacy of cost recovery. The Budget Unit should generate a fee schedule for the Las Vegas Metro PD that lists all the fees charged by all of the divisions of the Department.
Bureau Managers, and not the Budget Unit, should be responsible for approving purchase and travel requisitions upon acquisition of the ERP by Clark County. The Las Vegas Metropolitan PD should utilize the full capacity of the ERP to automate the generation and approval of purchase and travel requisitions.
The LVMPD needs to take steps to centralize its administrative functions as well as appropriate investigative functions. Current facility distribution in the Metro service area has significant impacts on operational, supervisory and management efficiency and effectiveness.
Chapter 5 – Special Operations Division, Support Services Bureau
Maintain current staffing in the Flight Operations and Search and Rescue elements of Air Support.
The Air Support section should maintain the current fleet if the goal is to maintain current service levels. As with pilots, the maintenance and fleet of the section is performed at a high level of utilization.
Alter the scheduling of Canine personnel from the current two-shift overlap to a single shift targeted on times of peak activity. This will increase availability and utilization of Canine resources. Continue the practice of assigning two dogs to each handler.
Continue to staff the Resident Deputy operations at current levels.
Chapter 5 – Special Operations Division, Homeland Security Bureau
Dissolve the Technical / Analytical Section. Move the Technical Detail resource and responsibility to the Criminal Intelligence Section.
The Homeland Security Bureau has developed a solid foundation and refined analysis processes. They can only remain contemporary and continue to meet the growing Department need with the existing staff with the acquisition of more contemporary analysis processing systems. Securing Federal money for new data analytical systems should be the approach – an intelligence analysis processing system could cost approximately $1.2 million dollars, with an annual system maintenance cost of approximately $183,000 after the first year.
Through the Criminal Intelligence Section Administrative Squad develop the processes and protocols necessary for appropriate covert identification, (Backstops), for Special Operations Division personnel. Consider expanding the two member Emergency Management 24/7 Response Team to provide for more personal flexibility for "on-call" status. With the transfer of the Technical Detail to the Criminal Intelligence Section, the Detail Lieutenant could be available for reassignment.

Chapter 5 – Special Operations Division, Vice and Narcotics Bureau
All Sections in the Vice and Narcotics Bureau need to continue to provide the Department and Las Vegas regional with well defined, organized, and collaborative covert investigation and enforcement of vice and narcotics activity.
Chapter 5 – Special Operations Division, Gang Bureau
The Gang Crimes Section Administrative Team re-evaluate the effectiveness of existing strategies for mitigating criminal gang activity.
The Section Administration should continue with current focus on investigative case management systems and how the Section personnel resource is being employed.
Division managers should coordinate efforts to address potential operational redundancies and promote the installation and application of the Universal Case Management System for all Division Investigative Sections.
Chapter 6 – Central and Valley Patrol Divisions
The LVMPD should shift its Police Officer allocation methodology from one which relies only on proportional calls for service to one which utilizes total workload (this latter is comprised of all Officer time associated with calls for service). This method can be updated as frequently as necessary from data available from CAD.
The Area Commands should assign personnel based on total workload with the goal of allocating proactive time across all three shifts. The current approach places high levels of proactive time into the early morning hours (when it is least useful) and places relatively little time in the afternoon and evening hours (when it is most useful).
Utilize a minimum average level of patrol proactivity per shift in patrol of 35% for patrol units. This assumes continued availability and use of Community Policing and Problem Solving Units. As a result, aggregate field proactivity should be in the 40% - 45% range. Utilization of these targets has a significant impact on patrol staffing needs – increasing the need for staff, depending on the shift schedule utilized.
Serious consideration should be given to negotiating for a different shift configuration for patrol operations (either 8 or 12 hour rotations). The impact of the 10-hour shift on patrol operations is significant in terms of its staffing impacts – ranging from no approximately no net additions under an 8 or 12 hour shift to a need for over 200 positions under the current schedule.
The Department should continue its efforts to expand the use of differential police response – thereby also impacting the need for new commissioned field personnel. Addition of 28 field civilian report takers and expansion of Teleserve would still result in the addition of 158 new field deputies.
Increase TSB staffing by 25 Police Officers and 3 Sergeants. Additional patrol personnel will also make it likely that additional citations and charges will be written. Continue to track increased report writing time using the automated systems. Consider reducing the response to non-injury (i.e., property only) automobile accidents.
Identify a specific liaison for each of the Area Commands (and Resident Deputy areas) through whom traffic complaints can be identified and responses coordinated. There is no staffing impact from this recommendation.

Chapter 7 – Investigative Services Division, Crimes Against Youth and Families
Reduce the Sexual Assault Unit to the average of the staffing variance range (or 1 detective) to meet the benchmark targets for active caseloads.
No staffing changes are recommended for several units – Sexual Assault (Juvenile), Internet Crimes Against Children, Sexual Offender Apprehension Program, Juvenile and Missing Persons.
Eliminate the General Investigations unit (6 detectives and a sergeant) and transfer staff to investigative units deficient in staff.
Increase Domestic Violence staffing by 13 detectives to be within the benchmark target range for active caseload. Two additional sergeant positions are also required.
Increase Abuse/Neglect staffing by 2 investigator positions and 1 Investigative Specialist position.
Continue seeking avenues for the funding of temporary part-time positions in Victim / Witness as well as identify internship programs to obtain qualified help from local colleges and universities.
Chapter 7 – Investigative Services Division, Robbery / Homicide Bureau
No staffing changes are recommended for Robbery, the Repeat Offender Program, the Criminal Apprehension Team and Fugitives.
Reduce the Homicide detective staffing by 13, abandoning the practice of permanent two person teams, to better align detectives with more common practices.
Eliminate the General Assignment Unit from the Investigative Services Division, and reallocate the investigative resources to other units.
Increase staffing for the Violent Crimes Unit by 3 detectives to better align with benchmark targets.
Chapter 7 – Investigative Services Division, Financial / Property Crimes Bureau
Reduce Tourist Safety staffing by 3 detectives to better align staffing with the benchmark targets for active caseloads.
Increase Property Crimes East staffing by 12 detectives to better align detective staffing with benchmark targets. The unit would also require an additional 2 sergeants (3 total). Increase Property Crimes West staffing by 22 detectives to better align detective staffing within benchmark targets for active caseloads. In addition, increase sergeants by 2 positions.
Increase Auto Theft staffing by 5 detectives to better align detective staffing within benchmark targets for active caseloads. Add one sergeant to the unit.
Increase Forgery staffing by 1 detective to better align staffing within the benchmark targets. Increase Fraud staffing by 3 detectives to better align staffing within the benchmark targets.
No changes are recommended for Firearms Investigations.

Chapter 7 – Investigative Services Division, Criminalistics Bureau
Funds should be made available for part time temporary positions to assist in the elimination of the backlog of evidence and property in the Evidence Vault. The project team estimates this need to be $120,000 in a one year period.
Chapter 7 – Investigative Services Division, All Functions
The project team firmly believes that by making the changes described above that investigative management and deployment in the Las Vegas Metro Police Department will be improved.
The facility planning process should include specific inclusion of investigative functions not currently at Stewart Street and also include consideration of placing at least some of the property crime investigators in Area Commands.

In the table, which follow, are provided the summary recommended staffing levels for the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department on a functional and position classification basis. The tables also compare recommended staffing to current staffing.

Mayor Carolyn Goodman
City of Las Vegas

City Manager, Betsy Fretwell
City of Las Vegas

Dear Mayor Goodman and City Manager Fretwell,

Please see below responses to your questions, as well as some attachments that are referenced to in this letter. Along with this letter is a compiled list showing the many different committees and organizations that Metro participates in, a one page highlight of our 2013 LVMPD Budget Reductions, a 2004 Organizations and Operations Audit of the LVMPD by the Matrix Consulting Group, as well as an Executive Summary of the 1999 Deconsolidation Study.

What is the status of the implementation of body cameras for the police force? Will you provide a brief report on the history, issues, funding and impact of the new program and use of this technology?

LVMPD began looking at body worn camera systems (BWCS) in 2012. An exploratory committee conducted tests of several systems and presented former Sheriff Gillespie the recommendation to purchase and deploy the TASER AXON Flex BWCS.

In March 2013, LVMPD entered into an agreement with the Department of Justice's National Institute of Justice, to participate in the first large-scale study on the efficacy of BWCS. The study required the purchase of 200 BWCS. The total initial expenditures to purchase these cameras, licenses, cloud storage and IT infrastructure was $264.5K The department received $107K from the department of Justice as a grant and the Department funded the remaining costs.

LVMPD currently has all 200 of its initial purchase cameras deployed with patrol officers assigned to the Community Policing and Tourist Safety Divisions The study is being conducted by CNA (the same corporation that conducted the Collaborative Reform Process for DOJ) and managed locally by Dr. William Sousa of UNLV. The study began in March and will be completed in October of this year. A formal report is expected from CNA by Fall of 2016.

LVMPD requested, and was approved, funds to purchase an additional 436 cameras in its 2015/2016 Budget. LVMPD also was approved for a $95K Byrne Justice Grant in late 2014 but has yet to receive those funds. They will be used to purchase an additional 64 cameras. The department will have approximately 700 cameras on the street then. This is about two-thirds of the patrol officers on the department. It is estimated that approximately another 700 cameras will be needed have total coverage of all officers that have routine contact with citizens.

This number could rise if the state legislature, or the department, mandates all officers wear BWCS. There have been a number of small issues associated with the deployment and use of the cameras, but this is to be expected with any new technology. BWCS are the single largest technological innovation in policing in the past 60 years and the impact of these devices remains to fully be determined. Effective policy, evolution of recording processes to support prosecutions, the handling of privacy issues, compliance with the Nevada Public Records Act, and unrealistic expectations from the public as to what the cameras can and cannot do, are but a few of the major issues facing agencies around the country as they deploy BWCS. LVMPD has made great progress in many of these areas and we are confident we are setting a national example for use of BWCS.

Regarding the ¼ cent sales tax, it would appear that an independent audit of Metro's operations and use of funding might be helpful in continuing the dialogue about the need for the new resources. As you know the City increased its commitment to Metro this year by another 8% and even with that additional investment that funding yielded approximately 50 new positions. This only seems to address emergent needs, but is not enough to get staffing levels where they ultimately need to be. Possibly an audit or independent audit would better illustrate the need the Sheriff has discussed with Fiscal Affairs and the members of the Commission and City Council.

Generally, such extensive performance audits are quite involved. It is unlikely that such an analysis could be undertaken and the results available in time to have an effect on the More Cops sales tax argument. However, LVMPD strives to be as transparent as possible, particularly in regard to our operational efficiency. To that end, LVMPD would certainly welcome a review of our operational efficiency provided the City and/or City and County wish to fund such a study. Given the historical context described below, we have confidence that any such review will point to our organization as being efficient and effective.

In addition to the annual audits LVMPD undergoes that tests our financial controls and processes, LVMPD has been the subject of two extensive independent performance audits over the past 15 years. The first was a management review of LVMPD operations commissioned by the City of Las Vegas in 1999. That review involved a lengthy, detailed analysis of LVMPD operations. The auditors determined LVMPD to be an highly efficient organization (please see attached Executive Summary). The second extensive independent performance audit was commissioned jointly by the City of Las Vegas and Clark County in 2004. As with the first study, LVMPD was again found to be a highly efficient organization. This report also provided very specific recommendations for improvement which were evaluated and addressed wherever feasible.

In addition to the above organizational efficiency audits, LVMPD had an audit of our More Cops fund in 2009. That audit reported LVMPD to be in compliance with all legislatively imposed requirements. It is also important to note that LVMPD has been the leader in developing the quarterly financial reports provided to both the State Department of Taxation and Legislative Counsel Bureau.

Since the performance audits and as with other government agencies in southern Nevada, LVMPD experienced significant expansion followed by a sharp contraction in resources. While difficult to endure, the recent economic downturn created an opportunity for LVMPD to undertake an extensive self-examination of our processes and practices and to uncover any inefficiencies in the interest of reducing costs. At the onset of the economic downtown, we undertook this evaluative process by creating a Budget Reduction Task Force composed of a small group of mid-level managers who reviewed the efficiency and effectiveness of each and every unit in the organization.

The task force uncovered opportunities to reduce costs and personnel and was instrumental in creating culture of attentiveness to costs across the agency. As a result of this effort and through subsequent years of difficult decisions, we have made substantial reductions to our budget and in permanently increase efficiencies. Please find attached a short summary of just some of the reductions LVMPD made during the downturn. While we have thankfully made some strides to begin to recover from some of these reductions, we continue to fall short of having sufficient resources, particularly when it comes to the gaining enough police officer positions to increase the officer to population form 1.75 to our goal of 2.0 officers to 1,000 residents (excluding tourists).

Despite our reductions, LVMPD has continued to be an effective organization that has directly and resolutely confronted problems like office- involved shootings, auto accidents, and body cameras. As a result of addressing our budgetary and operational challenges head on, we are proud to be recognized. Not only have we been recognized as leader by the national media particularly in the context of the national debate on constitutional policing and procedural justice (see attached stories from NPR and Governing Magazine), but we are regularly visited by leaders from other police agencies who are interested in emulating our practices. That said, we can do more and we need the resources to allow us to once again proactively rather that reactively police.

Our recent survey results indicated a high degree of satisfaction to importance rating for the visibility of police in neighborhoods. Would you please describe what might be done to help our residents have a greater feeling of police presence and safety in our neighborhoods. (Survey results sent under separate cover.)

Both the crime rate and the fear of crime can affect our neighborhoods. Perception counts. The presence of police officers can quell both the real threat of crime and the fear of crime.

The decentralization of detectives will help place more personnel closer to crime problems in the future. In addition, we have placed a minimum staffing level for Patrol Operations; however, manpower is a challenge as our population grows. As we reduced our force during the economic downturn, we have placed a priority on Patrol Operations. We recognize that an officer in a black-and-white patrol car is our greatest asset.

In July at the start of a new academy, our staffing of commissioned officers will be at 1.74. This ratio has significantly dropped from 2.06 authorized officers per 1,000 residents at our peak in. The North America average ratio is approximately 2.42 officers per 1,000 residents. Our officer to population ratio does not include the approximately 40,000,000 tourists that visit our valley every year. Visitor volume has rebounded and is now above the peak levels of 2007, placing greater demands for service.

Currently, LVMPD maps out where crime is occurring and we develop daily deployment strategies to place officers in these heavy crime areas. The purpose is to deter crime. Arrest and citations as outcomes are not the goal—the prevention of crime is the goal. Studies have shown that if an officer does a proactive stop for 15 minutes in a high crime area it can deter crime in the area for up to 2 hours. The challenge for us is to have the available resources to conduct proactivity; many times officers are going call to call. Over the past several years, our proactivity has substantially decreased. In addition, we cannot neglect providing service to neighborhoods where crime is not high. We continue to look at our deployment strategies for efficiencies, matching the best placement of officers against our service demands.

In light of the recent riots in Baltimore and the events in Ferguson, would you please provide a summary of the current activities Metro is undertaking to prevent and prepare for social unrest in our community that might lead to emergency response. Please include any community outreach activities that are a part of that approach. Please share your thoughts about how Metro and the City would work together to manage that kind of crisis and any substantial emergency situation in general.

To this end, we have done a lot. We have had several community meetings (town halls) after the Ferguson incident, discussing police and community responses and efforts to quell emotion and prevent public disharmony. We continue to have First Tuesday meetings, inviting the public, at the area commands. In addition, each Captain has a weekly meeting with key stakeholders in their areas.

I have attached a listing of the many communities and groups that we participate in.

Also, we constructed detail operation plans, anticipating the Ferguson verdict and have prepared our people (both in training and in leadership) for the potential for protest and demonstrations. For example, we organized and scheduled community leadership meetings at the Pearson Community Center. We invited faith-based, community centers, coaches, etc., to solicit information on four questions: (1) What is the community action plan leading up to, during, and after the Ferguson decisions? (2) How will the community engage our youth between the ages of 14-19? (3) Does the community want a central protest location? Where? (4) Does the community want to engage the media prior to the Ferguson decision? (This interact went a long way to build trust and direction on what to do in case we experienced greater public outcry).

We are communicating well. The heads of law enforcement agencies meet regularly to discuss these types of issues. Our agency does well in anticipating risks—it is due, in part, to the planning for the many large scales events that our jurisdiction experiences.

We look forward to a continued conversation on these issues and topics.

Sincerely,

Joseph Lombardo, Sheriff

EXPERT ANALYSIS

Whistleblower Protections: What To Expect In The Trump Era

While there may be a retrenchment in the scope of whistleblower protections and a decrease in the efficacy of whistleblower rewards programs under the Trump administration, it is unlikely that either will disappear given the strong support of key Republicans, as well as the availability of state-level whistleblower protections and whistleblower rewards programs, says Alexis Ronickher of Katz Marshall & Banks LLP.

Perhaps our new Congress will get our inventors back on base, says Darin Gibby of Kilpatrick Townsend & Stockton LLP.

Subject: Threats that they will block me from moving

Mayor Goodman,
I know you have asked the sheriff to help me. I have had people tell me that they will try to block my plane trip to move to New York to work and attack me. I don't take this lightly because your police have been involved in calling me a terrorist and Homeland Security at the airport talks to me about murder and moving to mexico on videotape and I am still told I am imagining it.

Las Vegas has told me to "leave town or we will force you on drugs" and you have sent Counterterrorism Detectives to my home handing out cards and getting me evicted.

NV State Police have harassed me about LVMPD making me homeless and refused to look into it.

I have to navigate a minefield each day. I am trying to leave safely and my apartment had a hole in the roof that caused rainwater to make my roof cave in, as the staff harass me and discriminate on me. I have lost around 10 homes in Las Vegas and police have been involved.

I am denied internal affairs reports, and the community review board refuses to help me.

You have offered to help me by sending the Sherrif, who has told me that I am imagining harassment, as your Judge Sullivan has, and told me my video evidence would make the court blow up.

Forensic Psychiatrist Norman Roitman, paid by the City of Las Vegas, says I am not psychotic, but your police officers use harassment to keep me awake at night and any request for help leads to accusations of mental illness.

This is not right. I have been imprisoned and told I am imagining being a doctor.

Help did not come, and will never come. Help is an excuse for further adverse action against me. I was told to kill myself by guards in jail, they do get arrested for corruption in Nevada, and Sherrifs across the country are caught in corruption, but any complaint leads to an accusation of mental illness by police in our society. Not just to me but across the United States of America. Terrorism laws have taken away everyone's civil rights and the mafia and gangs are courted by the President of The United States of America and Las Vegas leaders.

I do not believe in gangs but I know the power of groups is amazing. And I know men use them including in religion for malicious purposes. As do the police, as do the military use their power.

I am asking for safe passage. My roof caved in and I am harassed and bitten by US Military personnel's dogs and spit on.

I want to move to New York to save people's lives. I have to be at my apartment at [redacted] between 9-11 tomorrow 5/3 and I guarantee some violent action will occur if someone does not help me. I am trying to get out of there and a friend is taking my furniture to help.

In addition,in all honesty the Las Vegas police harass, threaten, and have people assault and run into me at the airport. I will be taking a flight on Wednesday night, paid for by a Manhattan Surgeon, to get me to New York, New York where I am licensed and supported despite the corrupt Judges in Las Vegas, some of whom are addicted to narcotics, and who convicted me for defending myself against 3 men who testified to tackling me and holding me from behind.

A man at City Athletic Club was present, and he harassed me and got me kicked out of 2 gyms mentioning the US Marines to me.

Will you have someone with integrity watch the police and homeland security at the airport on Wednesday night? I guarantee you you will see corruption by airport employees and police trying to stop me from getting a job. I am harassed on flights and if I say anything to help myself, they will put me in a psych hospital and it has happened several times.

I gave you videos of US Marshals saying "hurry up and go harass that fucking asshole" and discussing me as a terrorist and looking into my camera that they turned on, and Homeland is on video telling me to murder an move to Mexico as corrupt police watch video that has no audio and call me crazy.

This is a violent, corrupt, and criminal probe into my life, I am sleep deprived, isolated, tortured, drugged,and attacked and I am asking for help.

Respectfully,
Cornelius O'Leary Jr, MD

The Senate Health Care Bill Would Give Millions to Drug Companies Accused of Helping Fuel the Opioid Crisis

By Sam Berger

The Senate's health care bill, the Better Care Reconciliation Act (BCRA), would provide billions of dollars in tax breaks to drug companies—including some of the very same companies that are being sued over their potential contribution to the opioid crisis by Ohio, Missouri, Mississippi, and Tennessee. Worse, these giveaways will be paid for by stripping people of their health care coverage and driving up costs for those suffering from the opioid epidemic.

According to the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office (CBO), the BCRA would provide more than $500 billion in tax breaks predominantly to insurance companies, drug manufacturers, and individuals in the highest income brackets. Among the beneficiaries would be opioid producers, who would receive a tax break through the repeal of a fee on manufacturers and importers of brand-name prescription drugs. The CBO has said that the fee is structured so that it does not raise premiums for private coverage, so its repeal should not lower them. However, repealing this provision would give $25.7 billion to drug makers and importers over the next 10 years.

1. Decimates Medicaid
2. Allows states to offer bare-bones coverage by eliminating essential health benefits protections
3. Imposes sweeping restrictions on insurance coverage of abortion
4. Imposes work requirements for new moms
5. Defunds Planned Parenthood

'Hyatt 3' Oral Argument And Potential State Tax Implications

However the U.S. Supreme Court decides the third iteration of Franchise Tax Board v. Multi-Agency Push To Help Trafficked Victims

A new group has been formed that authorities hope will do more to stop the traffickers and help the victims. The Southern Nevada Sex Trafficking Multidisciplinary Team is composed of several police agencies, advocacy groups, and prosecutors that want to assist victims of sex trafficking while fighting sex traffickers.

James Sweetin, Chief Deputy District Attorney at the Clark County District Attorney's office says he couldn't understand why a police officer would drive by a young girl who so clearly looked like she was the victim of human trafficking. The problem was that there weren't any resources for police to do anything.

"Working with a multi-disciplinary team, you are able to not only cover the prosecution part of it but bring it full circle and try and identify the needs of this victim and find somebody within the team that would have the resources to meet those needs so we don't have service gaps," says Lt. Kristine Buist.

Both Buist and Sweetin talk to State of Nevada about how this multi-agency team is meeting the challenges of sex trafficking.

Amazing my one-liner response justified this lengthy litany of his perspectives.
Two things (actually 3) since he's thinking himself king and thus is most judgmental:

1. "acknowledgement" should be acknowledgment
2. Hasn't he studied enough history to realize we (the historical "we") are all immigrants and probably most were church-mouse poor at one point?
3. who made him king?
4. Should we answer or not?

Mayor Goodman,
Thank you for your acknowledgement. Please read my summary of "Adios America" below.
Also, because some people are more influenced by feelings than facts, I thought you might be interested in my summary of this NYT book review, "Against Empathy: The Case for Rational Compassion" by Paul Bloom:
"Empathy, he argues, is a poor moral guide.... favouring the one over the many... empathy is untampered by reason, emanating from the murky bayou of the gut. He prefers a kind of rational compassion - a mixture of caring and detached cost-benefit analysis. ... To those who say empathy is essential to morality, he would reply that morality has many sources. Many 'wrongs' - like littering or cheating on your taxes - have no distinct victims to empathise with. Nor does it appear that the most empathetic people behave the most ethically. There have been hundreds of studies... the results are 'meh'. ... empathy is generally a bad tool to use for allocating resources. ... is part of the reason why governments and individuals care more about a little girl stuck in a well than about events that will affect millions. Consider parenting... almost all parents have a terrible time tolerating the discomfort of their children. Yet it's often essential (going to the dentist, doing homework, spending a night away from home). ...rationality in political domains often does seem to be in short supply."

"Adios, America!" by Ann Coulter. Excerpts below:

1. For forty years, the people have tried to tell politicians they want less immigration, but the politicians won't listen. Every single elite group in America is aligned against the public - the media, ethnic activists, big campaign donors, Wall Street, multimillionaire farmers, and liberal "churches." They all want mass immigration from the Third World to continue. Both political parties connive to grant illegal aliens citizenship and bring in millions more legally, and the media hide the evidence. ... How immigration is changing our country is a lot more important than most of the "news" we hear about endlessly. The media will pound away at Chris Christie's 'Bridge gate', apocryphal fraternity rapes, the Augusta National Golf Club's membership policies, 'white privilege... But getting the truth about immigration is nearly impossible. The media tell us: ... Immigrants are doing the jobs Americans just won't do: Americans are perfectly happy to do all manner of jobs - they just won't do them for $7.00 an hour. Unions used to care about that, but now they just want political power.... Amnesty will be Fantastic for the Economy: Unless we're talking about the Mexican economy, this is patently ridiculous. Adding another 30 million poor, unskilled, non-taxpaying, welfare-receiving people to America is good only for government workers and employers who refuse to mechanize their operations or pay Americans one dollar more. ... The problems stemming from unchecked immigration are all over the news. You'll just never be told they are problems of immigration - children living in poverty, childhood obesity, teen pregnancy, out-of-wedlock births, abysmal high school dropout rates, income inequality, 'homegrown' terrorists, massive Medicare frauds, internet crime, identity theft, prison overcrowding, the vast number of uninsured used to justify Obamacare, sex trafficking, the epidemic of child rape, the destruction of our national parks, drunk driving casualties, drug-resistant tuberculosis, measles and other viral outbreaks, bankrupt government pension, low reading and math scores and shorter 'Americans'. ... why is it a crisis that illegal aliens are 'living in the shadows'?... It's supposed to be uncomfortable to break the law. ... How did all those illegal aliens get into the shadows in the first place? They weren't kidnapped and dragged across the border... But 'living in the shadows' is evidently better than living in Guadalajara, otherwise, there's an easy solution. Democrats aren't big on amnestying other lawbreakers. they don't hysterically demand amnesty for accounting cheats or polluters - not even for "the children" of accounting cheats and polluters. Enron executives were hard workers. They loved their families and wanted the best for them, just I'm sure MS-13 gang members love their families.... When the bathtub is overflowing, the very first thing you do is: TURN OFF THE WATER. ... obviously, any amnesty functions as a magnet for more illegal aliens. Nothing shows the bad faith of amnesty advocates with more blinding clarity than their steadfast refusal to seal the border. Ordinary people see this and know they're being lied to. ... China built a thirteen-thousand mile wall several centuries before Christ, and it's still working. ... For whom is a 'world without borders' an ideal? People who don't much care for America, I gather. ... Congress has repeatedly voted to build a border fence. But somehow, the fence never gets built - and Congress does nothing. ... amnesty supporters tried a surprise argument: To stop illegals pouring across the border, congress had to pass amnesty. They were hoping to stun us into silence with the stupidity of their argument. ... The 1986 Simpson-Mazzoli Act was supposed to end illegal immigration forever: Give us amnesty one time, then: Never again. As with all laws that combine the bitter with the sweet, such as tax hikes and spending cuts, we got one and not the other. The amnesty came, but the border security never did. Illegal immigration sextupled. There have been a half dozen more amnesties since then... . "The moral thing to do" is usually defined as "following the law." ... To paraphrase what President Bush used to say about terrorists: The anti-amnesty side has to be perfect every time; the pro-amnesty side only has to win once. Then the country is finished. 2. ... shouldn't politicians be more concerned with what citizens think of them than what foreigners do? ... Wouldn't any sane immigration policy be based on the principle that we want to bring in only immigrants who will benefit the people already here? ... Try calling another country's embassy and asking to immigrate there. Consulate: What do you want? You: Well, I can't read or write, I have no skills, and I've got nine kids. Oh and by the way. If I can't make it in your country, would you mind cutting my family a check once a month? ... Our "family reunification" policies mean that being related to a recent immigrant from Pakistan trumps being a surgeon from Denmark. Our government does such a terrific job at choosing who gets to immigrate to America that 52 percent of legal immigrant households with children are on government assistance. In all, nearly 60 percent of immigrants - legal and illegal - are on government assistance, compared with 39 percent of native households. Why would any country voluntarily bring in people who have to be supported by the taxpayer? ... The immigrants get a taxpayer subsidy to work for the rich, and the rich get a break on the maid. This cozy deal is funded by the long-suffering middle class. The anti-American crowd used to dash off to fight with Communist insurgencies in Third World jungles. But the fun of being self-righteous was sometimes cut short when they ended up in prison.... Rather than hating America from abroad, today's radicals can hate it right here at home by bringing the Third World to America! ... Being openly hostile to America has become a part of ethnic pride. US Rep Luis Gutierrez calls on his own country (technically the USA) to "stop the deportation of our people . ... Gutierrez told Newsweek that he has "only one loyalty, and that's to the immigrant community."

Whose taxes will be raised to make up the shortfall? Not the people who don't pay any taxes at all. Employers don't care. They want the cheap labor NOW.... We're seeing exactly what Vladimir Lenin is supposed to have said about capitalists: 'They will sell us the rope with which to hang them.' ... Whey shouldn't employers be on the hook when their cheap labor becomes a public charge or commits a crime? ... An immigration law premised on the idea that America owes the rest of the world would be bad enough. But Third World immigration + massive welfare state + political correctness = The end of America. 4. America is not the natural state of the world. The natural state of the world is Darfur. The British Empire spread Anglo-Saxon culture around the globe - Protestant morals, individualism, and the rule of law. Most British colonies rejected those values. Only the ones populated by actual British people -

America, Canada, Australia, and New Zealand - managed to hold on to them and, as a result, prospered. The empire's most successful experiment was the United States. Anyone who hesitates for a moment to recognize that some groups have it over other groups in producing free and prosperous nations has been brainwashed beyond reclamation.
5. America has already taken in more than one quarter of Mexico's entire population. ... Is that diverse enough yet? Why is it better that the ethnic population of our country be changed? ... Immigration of the past half century has been a homicide made to look like a suicide. ...a natural process? ... It's more like Americans are trying to stop an Army Corp of Engineers project that will flood the valley where they live in order to build a hydroelectric plant that will help one powerful corporation.
6. ... Until 1970, American immigrants did better than the natives - as any sane immigration policy would require. They made more money, bought more houses, and were more educated. By contrast, the post-1970 immigrants are far more likely to be unemployed and live in poverty that the native Americans. More that a third of the post-Kennedy act immigrants don't even have a high school diploma. ... In some bizarre notion of turn-about-is-fair-play, it is assumed that backward societies have the right to relocate to the countries of their former colonizers. I thought they hated those guys (the colonizers)? ... In just a few decades, Minnesota has gone from being approximately, 99 percent German, Dutch, Finnish, Danish, and Polish to 20 percent African immigrant, including at least one hundred thousand Somalis. And that's not counting the Somalis who have recently left the country to fight with al Queda and ISIS. One hundred thousand is just an estimate. We don't know precisely how many Somalis the federal government has brought in as "refugees" because the government won't tell us. ... Kate Towle, the parent leader of a high school group called "Students Together as Allies for Racial Trust" explained that diversity skills "have to be developed like math, history." Maybe it would be better for students to be learning math and history, rather than the important skill of getting along with Somalis. It doesn't seem to be working anyway. There are still violent ethnic brawls that send students to the hospital. What did we do to Somalis? ... absolutely nothing. But now these immigrants, who arrived yesterday, will get affirmative action over white Americans. ... Luckily, every Somali in Minnesota who has a job works for an ethnic grievance outfit - for example, the Somali Justice Advocacy Center, the Somali Resources Aid Associates, the African Development Center, and the Confederation of Somali Community in Minnesota. (And those are just some of the jobs being created by immigrants!). ... half of Somalis in Minnesota unemployed and 80 percent living at or below the poverty level... Recent mass murders committed by legal immigrants: The seven people murdered by Chechen immigrants Dzhokhar and Tamerlan Tsarnaev, who planted a bomb at the Boston Marathon, the four people fatally shot in a Carson City IHOP by... the Mexican-born Eduardo Sencion, the thirteen soldiers killed at Fort Hood by Major Nidal Malik Hasan, son of Palestinian immigrants, the thirteen people murdered by Vietnamese immigrant Jiverly Wong, at an American Civic Association in Binghamton, New York, the thirty-two people murdered at Virginia Tech by Seung-Hui Cho, a South Korean immigrant.... no one notices the immigrant crime wave because the media hide the evidence.
8. When did Americans get together and decide we want 30 percent of all immigrants to be from a single country and that country should be Mexico? If we're going to take almost all our immigrants from a single country, why not Denmark? There appears to have been only on Danish prisoner in New York State in decades - and, again, that was a Muslim. ...nearly 90 percent (of criminal aliens imprisoned in the states in 2009) were from one of eight countries: Mexico, Colombia, the Dominican Republic, Cuba, Jamaica, El Salvador, Honduras, and Guatemala. ... What other country on earth would be so stupid? We have studies showing Hispanics are underrepresented in Hollywood, at top colleges, in the federal government, and in the national media... You know where else Hispanics are underrepresented? In the US military. You'd never know it... but Hispanics are half as likely to enlist in the military as either whites or blacks. ... Hispanic males in the US are more than three times as likely to spend time in prison in their lifetimes than white males. ... The vast majority of all drugs in America - heroin, cocaine, marijuana, and increasingly, methamphetamine - are brought in from Mexico. Most of the heroin sold in the US is grown south of the border, and Mexican cartels transport nearly all of it. ... More than 40,000 Americans were killed from all illegal drug use in 2010, surpassing car accidents and shootings as a cause of death. ... Today, China is once again battling drug smuggling because like America, it also has a poor, corrupt nation with a massive humanitarian crisis on its border; Not Mexico, but North Korea. Guess what China did? It built a fence! Despite stern warnings from the New York Times, China put a thirteen-foot barbed wire fence on its border, patrolled by armed guards. And you know what, it's working! ... Is an American citizen more likely to be murdered by a Muslim terrorist or by a Mexican? According to CNN, 29 Americans have been killed in Islamic terrorist attacks in the US since 9/11. I don't know why they excluded 9/11, so by my count, it's 3,029. In fact, let's round it up to 4,000 to cover the last several decades. According to the GAO's extremely conservative figures, Mexicans alone - forget other immigrants - have murdered a minimum of 23,000 Americans in the last few decades. ... If this were happening in Israel, forget a fence - Netanyahu would be bombing Mexico. ... President Eisenhower put a general in charge of the INS, who proceeded to round up and deport illegals in an operation dubbed "Operation Wetback." HBO's Bill Maher would be saying of our southern neighbors: "Americans have 349 Nobel Prizes; Latin Americans have 16. That seems like kind of a big advantage for Team America." ... Far more Americans are murdered by Mexicans, per capita, than Israelis are murdered by Palestinians. 11. The three young girls kidnapped and held as sex slaves for more than a decade in a boarded-up house in Cleveland had been held by Ariel Castro. ... But then it turned out Castro wasn't the only Hispanic raping young girls - on his block. ... While investigating the Castro case, detectives happened upon Acevedo... he had raped and killed two of his neighbors...

Chandra Levy's killer turned out not to be Democratic Congressman Gary Condit, but Ingmar Guandique - an illegal alien from El Salvador, given temporary amnesty by President Bush. (Does that guy have any brothers? I'd love to see another one like him in the White House!). The one Central Park rapist that even liberals admit was guilty was Hispanic Matias Reyes. After the other attackers had finished with the victim, Reyes came across the joggers beaten and bloody body, and raped her himself.

12. ... environmentalists used to care about gridlock, overcrowding, loss of parkland, and exhaustion of natural resources. Not anymore. Today's environmentalists turn a blind eye as 25 million people tramp through delicate ecosystems, set fire to national parks, kill livestock, dump tons of soiled diapers and Pepsi bottles in the desert, and deface ancient Native American sites. Political correctness demands that no one notice immigrants' toll on the environment. ... Of the 77 human-caused fires on federal or tribal land in Arizona between 2006 and 2010 investigated by the GAO, a cause could be determined in 60 cases. Fully half of those were caused by illegal aliens. ...One of the reasons the GAO was able to review only 77 fires was that the BLM and the Forest Service couldn't spare any agents for investigations. They were too busy protecting 'firefighters and their equipment from illegal aliens.' Apparently, when illegals see border patrol agents, they try to distract them by throwing lighted matches in the brush to start fires. Not only do illegal immigrants intentionally set wildfires, but they violently attack firefighters trying to extinguish the blazes. Firies are allowed to rage, because fire crews are forced to wait for law enforcement protection. ... The Forest Service had once gamely suggested trying to identify 'the group most likely to start fires,' but once the evidence was in, they buried it. To blame illegal aliens would be playing the 'blame the perpetrator' game. ... Because of new border restrictions after 9/11 - I guess it was possible to tighten the borders! - our dear friends in Mexico moved their drug cartel operations directly into America's parks. ... 'These guys shoot people'... Armed illegal aliens were in control of our national parks, so government officials leapt to action by shutting down the parks. A majority of Organ Pipe Cactus National Monument was closed to US citizens for more than a decade because it was too dangerous.

... For a glimpse into America's future, consider how Mexicans treat their own environment. In Mexico's most famous national park, a ten-thousand-year-old evergreen forest designated by presidential decree as a biosphere reserve, illegal loggers chop down about seventy mature tress a day... While environmentalists from around the world send millions of dollars to Mexico preserve the forest... For decades, Mexican refuse ended up on San Diego's world-famous beaches by way of the Tijuana River. ... One solution would have been for Mexicans to stop throwing their garbage in the river. ... Instead, US taxpayers funded a sewage treatment plant on the border at a cost of $239.4 million. Mexico chipped in $17 million. ... Where are the environmentalists? For 50 years, they've been carrying on about overpopulation; promoting family planning, birth control... The Sierra Club began sounding the alarm over the country's expanding population in 1965 - the very year Teddy Kennedy's immigration act passed - and in 1978, adopted a resolution expressly asking Congress to 'conduct a thorough examination of US immigration laws.' For a while, the Club taked about almost nothing else. "It is obvious" the Club said two years later, "that the numbers of immigrants the US accepts affects our population size and growth rate," even more than 'the number of children per family.

Over the next three decades, America took in tens of millions of legal immigrants and illegal aliens alike. But suddenly, about ten years ago, the Sierra Cub realized to its embarrassment that importing multiple millions of polluting, fire-setting, littering immigrants is actually fantastic for the environment! The advantages of overpopulation dawned on the Sierra Club right after it received a $100 million donation from hedge fund billionaire David Gelbaum with the express stipulation that - as he told the LA Times - 'if they ever came out anti-immigration, they would never get a dollar from me.' It would be as if someone offered the Catholic Church $100 million to be pro-abortion. But the Sierra Club said: Sure! Did you bring the check? Obviously, there's no reason to listen to them on anything.

... Not only did the Sierra Club never again say another word against immigration, but, in 2004, it went the extra mile, denouncing three actuals environmentalists running for the Club's board, by claiming they were racists who opposed mass immigration. The three 'white supremacists' were Dick Lamm, the three-time Democratic governor of Colorado; Frank Morris, former head of the Black Congressional Caucus Foundation; and Cornell professor David Pimentel, who created the first ecology course at the university... America's premiere hate group, the Southern Poverty Law Center, jumped into the fray, with multimillionaire con man and SPLC head Morris Dees running for the Sierra Club board simply to smear the three real environmentalist candidates... But, evidently, what poor Southerners need most is a massive influx of foreign poor people competing for their jobs. ... In 2012, Sierra Club executive director Michael Brune announced that the Club officially supported mass immigration - amnesty, no borders, more legal immigration, the whole nine yards.

13. Normally, (Carlos) slim is the kind of businessman the (NY) Times - along with every other sentient human being - would find repugnant. Frequently listed as the richest man in the world, Slim acquired his fortune through a corrupt inside deal giving him a monopoly on telecommunications services in Mexico. But in order to make money from his monopoly, Slim needs lots of Mexicans living in the US, sending money to their relatives back in Oaxaca. Otherwise, Mexicans couldn't pay him - and they wouldn't have much need for phone service, either, other than to call in ransom demands. Back in 2004, before the Times became Slim's pimp - a Times article stated: "Clearly... the nation's southern border is under siege." But that was before Carlos Slim saved the Times from bankruptcy. Ten years later, with a border crisis even worse that in 2004, and Latin America pouring across the border, the Times indignantly demanded the Obama "go big" on immigration and give "millions of immigrants permission to stay". ...

Republicans are terrified of saying anything about immigration for fear of being called 'racist.' ... The fact that most immigrants are Hispanic provides excellent cover for the elite's monumental self-interest. Here's a tip for the GOP: Don't talk about the illegal aliens. Talk about Carlos Slim, Talk about rich Americans finding a solution to 'the servant problem.' Talk about one-hit wonder Mark Zuckerberg underpaying his computer programmers while 32 percent of American graduates in STEM fields can't get job and the rest haven't seen their salaries rise for more than a decade. Talk about how Bill Clinton couldn't find someone to be his attorney general because of the prevalence of illegal alien employees in households of the '1 percent'. Determined to appoint a woman attorney general, Clinton kept producing women with illegal alien nannies (Zoe Baird, Kimba Wood). ... The elites just can't grasp that most Americans raise their own kids, make their own beds, cook their own food, and drive their own cars. ... America will be Brazil, with a well-pampered, itty-bitty upper class, amid an ocean of poor people. ... It's a sweet deal the elites have: They get to have cheap nannies and lawn boys in the whitest towns in America - and feel morally superior at the same time!

14. The vast majority of all legal immigrants - two thirds- get in on "family reunification" policies each year. In other words, America has no say about the single largest category of immigrants... Entire villages from Pakistan are dumped on the country, based not on their expertise in nuclear engineering, but because everyone in the village is related to the first guy who got in. If they're not, in the strict sense, related, they'll lie. In 2008, the State Department suspended the family reunification part of the African refugee program because DNA testing showed that only 20 percent of 'family members' were actually related. We'll still take as many refugees from Africa, but they won't have to lie about being related anymore. ... The special agricultural amnesty of 1986 is a good example of how even the most reasonable-sounding immigration law will inevitably be turned into a pipeline for criminals, welfare cases, and terrorists. ... illegal alien farmworkers who could prove they had done seasonal farmwork for a total of ninety days between May 1, 1985 and May 1, 1986, would be granted temporary legal status. what could go wrong? In the first three years of the program, 888,637 agricultural amnesty applications were identified as fraudulent - but only 60,637 of those were denied. Overwhelmed with amnesty applications under just this one provision, the INS found it to be a big time-saver to simply ignore fraud. ... Mohammed Salameh, another terrorist convicted in the 1993 World Trade Center bombing, was also in the US because of Schumer's special agricultural worker amnesty. The unskilled 19-year-old first came to the US on a tourist visa because, as the US consulate later explained, someone in the office "took a chance" on Mohammed. Mohammed not only had never worked on a farm, but he was not even in the country until 1988, two years after the special amnesty became law, though it was explicitly limited to those who had worked on farms in the US in the year before May 1, 1986. By the most basic definition of the law, Mohammed was not eligible, but he was allowed to stay in the US and obtain a work visa - while the INS processed his petition. Moving with the lightning speed of a government agency, the INS rejected his petition for amnesty as a farm worker three years later. Then, Mohammed applied for a general amnesty, claiming he had been living continuously in the US from 1980 to 1986. Actually, he was a teenager in Jordan then, but again, Mohammed was allowed to stay while the INS considered his request. As it considering, Mohammed bombed the World Trade Center.

How about all those brainy, high-tech H-!B immigrants that Senator Orrin Hatch keeps telling us about? ... the cheap-labor advocacy group Partnership for a New American Economy excitedly tweeted that two - yes two - of the five LindedIn founders were "born in Europe"!... Here's my counter tweet: 98.7% fo the founders of important Silicon Valley companies were born in America! 99 percent are white men! ... Professor Norman Matloff: 'The vast majority of H-1B's, including those hired from US universities, are ordinary people doing ordinary work, not the best and the brightest. On the contrary, the average quality of the H-1Bs is lower that theat of the Americans. ... The main advantage of foreign labor over native workers, Matloff explains, is aht H-1B workers are indentured servants: They can't quit without risking deportation. so American employers get to pay less for standard computer programming work. ... They want cheap people. Mass-immigration advocates push ethnic stereotypes about high-IQ immigrants, but then go crazy whenever anyone suggests we actually bring in high-IQ immigrants. ... The average Indian IQ is staggeringly low: 82. That's about the same as the average IQ in Afghanistan - 84; Panama - 84; Dominican Republic - 82; Paraguay - 84; Yemen - 85; and Tonga - 86. We take more immigrants from India than from Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, Greece, Iceland, Ireland, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Sweden, Switzerland, Spain, and the Czech Republic put together. Why are we discriminating...? The answer is: Because those immigrants would tend to fill the kinds of jobs rich people have.

15. The only thing that stands between America and oblivion is a total immigration moratorium. ... It's evident that the government can't be trusted to use three brain cells in admitting immigrants, so its discretion has to be completely revoked. No matter how clearly laws are written, government bureaucrats connive to confer citizenship on people that a majority of Americans would not want to let in as tourists, much less as our fellow citizens. ... No other fix will work. Congress could just insist that immigrants pay taxes, learn English, not collect welfare, and have good moral character, except the problem is: It already has. All those laws were swept away by INS officials, judges, and Democratic administrations. Doing it again won't produce a different result. ... Even if we could trust the government on immigration - and we can't - there are the legions of immigration lawyers, lobbyists, nonprofits, and general miscreants whose single-minded mission is to turn America into the Third World hellhole of liberal fantasies. ... The billion-dollar immigration industry has turned every single aspect of immigration law into an engine of fraud. The family reunifications are frauds, the 'farmworkers' are frauds, the high-tech visas are frauds - and the asylum and refugee cases are monumental frauds. ... the only result of our asylum policies is that we get good liars. Taxpayers subsidize sleazy immigration activists who coach immigrants to lie to immigration officials. Document mills produce phony passports, school records, and medical reports. ... immigration judges approve 92 percent of all "credible fear" asylum applications.
16. ... if Romney had won 71 percent of the Hispanic vote in 2012, instead of 27 percent, he still would have lost. On the other hand, had he won just 4 percent more of the white vote, he would have won.
17. America's suicidal immigration policies are the single biggest threat facing the nation. What happens with immigration will determine whether America continues to exist or becomes a Third World republic...

Mayor Goodman,
I was disappointed to watch you on your KCLV show Friday evening supporting illegal aliens. Worse yet was the inclusion of two guests, both of who were also advocates of illegal aliens. Wouldn't it have been fair to host an equal amount of speakers in opposition? Is the care and feeding of illegal aliens a part of the city charter? I doubt it. We need the illegal immigrants to return to their native countries. Your positions lure more of them here and encourage them to stay. Why don't you start looking out for US citizens first? Don't you realize that the reason people from third world countries sneak into the US is ultimately because they can't stand being around other third world people. Plenty of skilled people from developed countries are waiting patiently for admission to the US. Is it fair to reward those whose very first act into this county is illegal? You can disguise the problem by saying they are fleeing high crime rates, violence, rotten economy... but this deception hides the real reason. Why would you want to turn us into a third world country? If you feel so concerned about them, there is an easy solution: move to a third world country to help them where they are.

Please read:

The Immigration Solution, by MacDonald, Hansen & Malanga

While the cheapness of the immigrants' labor may benefit a very few industries and provide some upper and le-class families with cut-rate gardeners and nannies, it adds very little to our national standard of living. On the other side of the ledger, the costs these immigrants impose on US taxpayers for health care, schooling, welfare, and (all too often) incarceration far outweigh the benefits they offer. In California, the National Academy of Sciences found immigrant families cost each native-born household an additional $1,200 in taxes per year. Although a net loss for the US, such workers are an unalloyed boon for Mexico. Their ability to find work north of the border is an essential safety valve for Mexico's failed economy and stubbornly unreformed political culture, and the remittances these workers send home are indispensable to Mexico, constituting its second largest source of hard currency. No wonder the Mexican government – especially through its consuls in the US – vigorously fosters the illegal migration of its nationals into its northern neighbor. … But those earlier huddled masses of immigrants yearning to breathe free, however tired and poor they may have looked, were in fact on average more skilled than the native-born population of a century ago. In addition, the less-developed economy of that era also had a vastly greater need for immigrants without skills than does today's knowledge economy. More important, the US immigration system of that period was a machine for selecting the most enterprising and energetic migrants. With no welfare system whatever, those who came were those who thought they could make use of the opportunity and freedom America offered by their own efforts. Grateful for the chance, these newcomers were only too glad to assimilate to their new land as best they could, and their children did so wholeheartedly. Not so today. The first child born in America to an immigrant entitles his or her family to child-only welfare payments – a hefty-looking sum to a recent migrants from a peasant village. … Deprived of work, illegals would return home, just as 60 percent of immigrants from the first great migration eventually left these shores when they couldn't make it here. ...our new policy should select newcomers not because they are someone's brother or adult child or elderly parents, or because they successfully sneaked into the country some years ago, but because they have some special skill... that will enrich our nation. … Thousands arrive illegally from Mexico into California each year... They come in such numbers because a tacit alliance of Right and Left has created an open-borders policy, aimed at keeping wage labor cheap and social problems ever fresh, so that the ministrations of Chicano studies professors, La Raza activists, and all the other self-appointed defenders of group causes will never be unneeded. … nearly one quarter of California's inmates are aliens from Mexico. The pro-labor left found that the industrious new arrivals whom it championed eroded the wages of its own domestic low wage constituencies - the Labor Department attributes 50 percent of real-wage declines to the influx of cheap immigrant labor. … when I was ten, in 1963, all suburbanites mowed their own lawns – many with push mowers. Now almost everyone hires the job out. Nannies for toddlers and grannies, unheard of then, are now ubiquitous... Rural schools used to begin in mid-September to ensure that we natives could pick grapes to earn our school clothes and shoes. Today not a single student in California would do such hot, dirty work, now considered demeaning. … So we allow illegal aliens to obtain California driver's licenses – the foundation for all other means of legal identification – and to pay reduced in-state tuition at the University of California, thereby providing several thousand dollars in discounts not available to American citizens from out of state. Whether you break the law to reach California or immigrate legally, it makes little difference in how you drive, send your kids to college, or draw on the public services of the state. … I often suggest to teachers who tell aliens that our culture is racist, exploitative, and sexist that they should live in Mexico themselves to fathom why millions are dying to obtain what they so casually dismiss.

… America does not have a vast labor shortage that requires waves of low wage immigrants to alleviate; in fact, unemployment among native-born unskilled workers in high – consistently about double the nations' overall unemployment rate. … an unusual coalition of business groups, unions, civil rights activists, and church leaders thwarted the call for restrictions with passage of the inaptly names 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act, which legalized some 2.7 million unauthorized aliens already here, supposedly in exchange for tougher penalties and controls against employers who hired illegals. The law proved no deterrent, however, because supporters, in subsequent legislation and court cases argued on civil rights grounds, weakened the employer sanctions. Meanwhile more illegals flooded here in the hope of future amnesties from Congress, while the newly legalized sneaked their wives and children into the country rather than have them wait for family-preference visas. The flow of illegals into the country rose to between 300,000 and 500,000 per year in the 1990's, so that a decade after the legislation that had supposedly solved the undocumented alien problem by reclassifying them as legal, the number of illegals living in the US was back up to about 5 million. … In many American industries, waves of low-wage workers have also retarded investments that might lead to modernization and efficiency. Farming, which employs a million immigrant laborers in California alone, is the prime case in point. Faced with a labor shortage in the early 1960's, when President Kennedy ended a 22-year-old guest-worker program that allowed 45,000 Mexican farm hands to cross over the border and harvest 2.2 million tons of California tomatoes for processed foods, farmers complained but swiftly automated, adopting a mechanical tomato-picking technology created more than a decade earlier. Today, just 5,000 better-paid workers – one-ninth the original workforce – harvest 12 million tons of tomatoes using the machines. The savings prompted by low-wage migrants may even be minimal in crops not easily mechanized. … If the benefits of the current generation of migrants are small, the costs are large and growing because of America's vast range of social programs and the wide advocacy network that strives to hook low-earning legal and illegal immigrants into these programs. A 1998 Nationals Academy of Sciences study found that more than 30 percent of California's foreign-born were on Medicaid... compared with 14 percent of native –born households. The foreign-born were more than twice as likely as the native-born to be on welfare, and their children were nearly five times as likely to be in means-tested government lunch programs. Native-born households pay for much of this, the study found, because they earn more and pay higher taxes – and are more likely to comply with tax laws. Recent immigrants, by comparison, have much lower levels of income and tax compliance.

... This call for 'human rights' is a clever one, for it hides its radical status in a rhetorical safe harbor. What, exactly, are the 'human rights' that the US is denying illegal aliens? They have unfettered access to free medical care, free education, welfare for their children, free representation in court when they commit crimes, every due process protection during criminal prosecution that the Constitution guarantees citizens and legal immigrants, the shelter of labor laws, and the miracles of modern industrial society like clean water, the control of infectious diseases (including the ones they bring with them), and plumbing. The only putative 'right' they lack - and that, of course, is the 'human right' to which they and their ambassadors refer - is the right to legal status regardless of illegal entry. ....

No one will take the assurance that 'this time we mean business' seriously. If the executive branch is not willing to enforce the current law against violators, a new set of laws will not suddenly strengthen its resolve... border defenses have been fortified over the years, but the drill has been: if you can get past the border patrol, you are home free. The most important action the government could take to end illegal immigration would be to penalize employers that unlawfully hire illegal aliens... After 9/11, the department of Homeland Security deported fifteen hundred illegal Pakistanis. An additional fifteen thousand then left voluntarily, reports Jessica Vaughan of the Center for Immigration Studies. There is no reason to think this enforcement-through-attrition strategy won't work as well for Hispanic illegals. ...

It would be useful for open-borders optimists to spend some time in the Los Angeles Unified School District, which is 73 percent Hispanic, and where just 40 percent of Hispanic students graduate. (Nationwide, 53 percent of Hispanics graduate from high school...) Of those Hispanic students who do graduate, just 22 percent have completed the course work necessary for admission to a four-year state college - which means that of all Hispanic students who enter in ninth grade, fewer than 15 percent will graduate ready for college. Immigrant advocates have fiercely opposed in court a long-deferred California high school exit exam, which would require students to answer just over 50 percent of questions testing eight-grade-level math and ninth-grade-level English. The California Research Bureau predicts that if the exam becomes a reality, Hispanic graduation rates would drop well below 30 percent. ... Schools spend huge sums trying to improve the Hispanic graduation rate, even hiring 'outreach consultants' for dropout prevention. One Santa Ana consultant's approach is predictably multicultural. "We need to teach teachers that students need to be proud of where they are coming from," she told me. But, of course, Hispanic school failure derives not from ethnic neglect - the Sana Ana schools glorify the Hispanic heritage to a fault...
...a high level of immigration translates to increased levels of crime. Between the foreign-born generation and their American children, the incarceration rate of Mexican American jumps more than eightfold...
Pro-amnesty forces promote that illegal immigrants "risk everything for the dream of freedom"... However lousy the Mexican economy, there are few, if any, political freedoms enjoyed by Americans that Mexico denies. It is the Yankee dollar, not untasted freedom, that brings the vast majority of illegals here.

...in spring 2006 American witnessed millions of illegal aliens who not only were unapologetic about their illegal status but were demanding that their hosts accommodate their own political grievances, from providing driver's licenses to full amnesty. The largest demonstrations - held on May Day, with thousands of protesters waving Mexican flags and bearing placards depicting the Communist insurrectionist Che Guevara - only confirmed to most Americans that illegal immigration was out of control and beginning to become politicized along the lines of Latin American radicalism. I chronicled in Mexifornia the anomaly of angry protesters waving he flag of the country they vehemently did not wish to return to , but now the evening news beamed these images to millions. In short, the radical socialism of Latin America, seething in the angry millions who flocked to support Venezuela's Hugo Chavez, Bolivia's Evo Morales, and Mexico's Andres Lopez Obrador, had now seemingly been imported into our own largest cities. ...

Crippled America

We are the only nation in the world whose immigration system places the needs of other nations ahead of our own. … Too many people have forgotten the Mariel boatlift. … The Mexican government has published pamphlets explaining how to illegally emigrate to the US. … It's a great way for those governments to get rid of their worst people without paying any price.... Operation Wetback... was successful. It was a joint effort between the INS and the Mexican government. Special immigration teams were created to quickly process and deport illegal immigrants. One of the reasons it worked is that people who were caught were given to Mexican government agents, who moved them into central Mexico, where they could find jobs. ...In the first year, more than one million people were sent back. ...Why should we absorb the expense of keeping criminals in prisons? Let their countries of origin deal with the problems they sent us. If they refuse to take them back, we can stop issuing visas to those countries, preventing their citizens from legally visiting the US. I also would triple the number of immigration officers we currently employ until the wall is built. … Currently there are about 5,000 officers attempting to enforce the existing immigration laws against the more than 11 million illegal aliens. Compare that to the... 35,000 officers in the New York Police Department. Since 9/11 we have tripled the size of the border patrol but haven't substantially increased the number of ICE officers – the officers who enforce immigration laws. … We have to cut off federal grants to sanctury cities... We need to have real penalties for people who overstay their visas. … Most important is ending or curtailing so-called birthright citizenship, or anchor babies. … It is estimated that about 300,000 of these children are born here annually. That's 300,000 children who are entitled to all the rights and privileges granted to American citizens because their mothers entered this country illegally... There are businesses that specialize in making this happen! They call it 'birth tourism'…. And those people take advantage of the system and come here illegally should never enjoy the benefits of being a resident – or citizen – of this nation. So, I am against any path to citizenship for undocumented workers or anyone else who is in this country illegally. They should – and need to – go home and get in line. And you know who agrees with me? The Mexicans, the Chinese, and all the people from other countries who want to be here legally and can't get a visa or fit into a quota... We can be generous and do all of this humanely. But the security and prosperity of American citizens have to come first. .. (Chapter 3)

I believe in putting the needs of American citizens first, always.... There's an old phrase that, sadly, you rarely hear anymore, "Made in America". We will start saying this again. (Chap. 10)

Mayor Goodman,

An issue has come into my life at the most inopportune time. I do not know who to turn to. I need the correct help. I need it quick

I will share back story and events leading up to the pressing issue at hand

I am a 59 year old male. In 2005 I was diagnosed with severe [redacted]. From that day forward my life was no longer my own. By end 2006 I was no longer able to work. A couple difficult years later I qualified for federal disability benefits. After nearly 7 years in a "walking coma" from disease, opiates, benzodiazepines, neuro drugs, psych drugs, ambien, antiseizure, and more drugs, tests and treatments, in late 2013 I told my doctor I wanted off all the chemical drugs. A rough three months later I was off all chemical medicines and have been ever since. I began a natural approach to my wellness focusing on food as medicine. My health began to improve while still the New York weather was still causing me much pain and flares of symptoms-conditions. In August 2014 I accepted invitation to leave Millbrook, New York to try the hot, dry deserts of Phoenix for my conditions. I felt improvements in days. Opportunity arose to move to Las Vegas early 2015. I moved to Vegas in April 2015. I love it here. I do not to ever want to leave. In October 2015 I became a Nevada medical marijuana patient. By end of November 2015 I began treating myself with cannabis protocol. In days my wellness improved and has improved ever since. One year later I am in the best physical condition in a decade. I am in the amazing spiritual-mental state we are Blessed to after looking death straight in the eyes, take him on in a battle to the death, and win. I am ready to give a go at becoming a working member of society again. I want to work at getting off the disability and become a productive member of the Las Vegas community. Over this past year I have met many people in our medical marijuana establishments. Being someone who has healed himself using full plant cannabis medicine I have much to offer our growing Nevada medical marijuana industries. I am enrolled in Trim Ready dispensary class 11/20/2016. I am enrolled in both the Cultivation Class and Edibles manufacturing classes on 11/27. When I complete dispensary certification on November 20th I will ask Brenda Gunsallus, owner of Sahara Wellness, my favorite person in the business, to sponsor my MME Agent card. I am just a few short weeks away from being a vetted member of the Las Vegas medical marijuana industry and onto a new life. I am Blessed to be the real deal success story that when you do not give up, regardless the odds against, fight hard fearlessly, you can win over anything. I am proof that for me cannabis changed my life from dark shadows of disease to a bright sunny new future in the city of lights I want to share my experience, skills, and knowledge, with others. I am once again looking forward to the future.

Here is my pressing issue.

I have lived in this same apartment at Ogden Villas, [redacted] for 18 months [redacted]. I rented furniture from Ogden Villas for $40 per month on top of my $425 month rent as I arrived in Las Vegas with just backpack and suitcase . By September 2015 I had acquired my own furniture. I put in a written request with Ogden Villas to have the rental furniture removed. The complex removed the furniture before September was over. When I paid my November 2015 rent for $425 I was told by office manager Jody Blackley I must continue paying $425 rent plus the $40 the furniture they took back or be evicted. I replied that is ridiculous. She replied it is the way it is. Jodie was moved to another site. Manager Liz, the manager who originally signed me into Ogden Villas, replaced Jodie. I brought attention to Liz that I am still being made to pay for furniture I returned. Liz said paying for furniture I returned makes no sense, she will look into it, and I must still pay the $40 for furniture I returned until it is figured out or be evicted. Liz moved to another a site. Manager Patty put a notation in my file I am still being charged for furniture I do not have. After thirteen months of being told by every floating manager that I must continue paying for products & services I do not receive under threat of eviction I receive notice my rent is being increased $40 to $505 (copy attached). They are raising my rent forty dollars each month on top of my already being overcharged $40 each month for furniture I do not have. I see this as a common sense opportunity to clear the slate by me accepting not paying November 2016 rent $465 for the $520 Ogden owes me for furniture and start the year off with this long overdue issue sorted and done. I write up a proposal (copy attached), give a copy to manager Patty to give to Jody, and mailed a copy to Plenty of Places corporate offices. On Thursday November 3rd I received email from Plenty of Places stating I can no longer access my online plenty of places account. Thursday November 10th I found an eviction notice attached to my door (copies attached).

I am a model tenant who has done nothing to cause any trouble here nor anyone anywhere.

I have paid my rent on time every month since I have been here. I have not once been a bother to anyone. All my neighbors like me. I keep to myself and do not get involved with the dramas of other residents. My apartment is clean without ever a problem with insects.

While Ogden wants to charge me $505 a month rent there are other tenants on disability benefits who were residents who were here before me that are paying $425 per month

I had three important stipulations to making the move to Vegas. 1 Tile floor, 2 second floor, 3 near a store

1. My decade of wicked battles against an invisible illness no one understands is brought to me by a tiny insect bite I did not know I received. Carpet grosses me out in a sense. Like indoor grass. For someone disabled with cans-joint related conditions with chronic pain maintaining carpet is an added chore. This apartment is all ceramic tile and is ideal for my needs

2. To have the stairs as a forced form of exercise. I prefer the less noise and traffic. I have trees outside my window. One year past a walk down Fremont to The Experience was an accomplishment. Today, most days, I walk over a mile around the neighborhood enjoying the Las Vegas sunrise with coffee. I commonly walk to our senior center on bonanza, library right up N LV Blvd., anywhere I want to go. I am truly Blessed beyond belief in all aspects of life

3. Store for access to necessary supplies close by when physically unable to make it to proper markets. The owners and crew at 7-Eleven Fremont & 15th all know me. After 18 months we get along quite well.

My requirements were met with this apartment and I moved here. I love my apartment home here in Downtown Fremont.

I have no money to move nor anyplace to move to. No friends nor family to help. I lost everything to battle with disease including nearly all my past family and friends. Thinking my offer so common sense and in favor of Ogden Villas they will accept I spent the $465 skipped November rent on renewing my medical cannabis card and enrolling in the three Nevada mme certification courses. If I am evicted over this lack of action by this company who admittedly owes me but is unable to reach a solution other than evicting their debt (me) I will be put out homeless on the street with the little I can carry. My two cats I rescued from shelter over one year ago will go back to the shelter. The few belongings I have been able to accumulate over this past 18 months into the dumpsters. Ten years battle against invisible illness to get into the position to once again have an on the grid life shattered. All of this because a manager Jody Blakley, who's agents lead me on for 13 month, refuses to see the common sense and right in not evicting a disabled, good tenant, who offers to accept $465 to clear up the $520 it is her cause the company she works for owes me

Friday morning, November 11th, I spoke with Fatima from Plenty of Places corporate offices. We spoke in length about Ogden Villas and this situation. Fatima assured me she will speak with her manager and get back to me by end of day. Fatima did not get back to me

Monday morning, November 13th at 11:15 am I called Fatima at Plenty of Places corporate offices to see what progress she has made on this issue (562) 989-9932). Fatima told me her and Jody Blakley have been speaking about this situation but have yet to come up with a resolution. Fatima assured me she will speak with her manager and get back to me by day's end. Fatima did not get back to me.

I am concerned Fatima is stretching this out as Jody has done with the furniture overpayments, and before they get back with a resolution the police will be at my door evicting me to the street

Is there anything you can do to help Plenty of Places see the wrong in kicking out a good tenant who just wants the fair deal of not paying for products-services not provided, with the slate clean for what they have overcharged me? I agree to pay the $40 increase on top my $425 true rent for $465 per month beginning December 03, 2016

Please feel free to check me out. I am one of the good guys. I have had a life Blessed with many jobs, careers, experiences, knowledge, and skills, in a variety of industries that I am looking forward to putting to use after not being able to work at all for over ten long years. I am here to help.

What I am looking for exactly:

1. November Rent Receipt showing rent paid
2. Notice in change of terms of tenancy showing my monthly rent $465.00 due by 3rd of each month
3. Letter from mgr Jody Blakley's supervisor stating there will be no discrimination, retribution, nor actions, against me by Jody Blakley over this issue

Thank you for your time, considerations, and continued service

Sincerely,

Jon Andrew Rothberg

MAYOR CAROLYN G. GOODMAN S BRIEFING SHEET

2017 Southern Nevada Substance Use & Behavioral Health Summit

UNLV Student Union Ballroom

4505 S. Maryland Parkway, Las Vegas, NV 89154

8:00 a.m.

Friday, September 29, 2017

PURPOSE

The overarching theme of the Substance Use & Behavioral Health Summit is: Changing Lives through Capacity Building and Strategic Partnership. The goal of the summit is to provide resources to direct service providers and community stakeholders. This summit will serve as an educational opportunity for professionals who work in the area of substance use and addiction, while issuing a "call to action" to participants resulting in successful inter-agency/inter-sector collaborations.

The summit will take place on Friday, September 29, 2017 from 8:00 a.m. – 4:00 p.m. The Mayor is being asked to speak from 8:40 a.m. – 8:55 a.m. (DRAFT Summit Schedule attached.) The Summit will be held at the UNLV Student Union Ballroom located at 4505 S. Maryland Parkway, Las Vegas, NV 89154.

The planning committee for this summit seeks to increase professional competencies in addressing substance use through education on prevention, intervention, and service delivery strategies. The goals of the Substance Use Summit are to:

1. Build capacity by informing our community about the latest Southern Nevada resources available in diversion, treatment, and recovery.
2. Foster opportunities for collaboration and partnership.
3. Reduce stigma and increase understanding about the nature of addiction and recovery.

Substance Use & Behavioral Health Summit (Key Talking Points)

- In 2012, the city of Las Vegas coordinated with over 120 faith leaders, representing over 70,000 local congregants, initiating Las Vegas Mayor's Faith Initiative to address seven topics confronting our community: Strengthening the Family, Education, Homelessness, Human Trafficking, Community Unity, and Addictions- the subject mentioned as the most troubling to our community.
- Developed under The Las Vegas Mayor's Faith Initiative (LVMFI), our Addictions Workgroup offers our community a safe place for honest and open dialogue coordinating strategies to address substance use disorder, and community collaboration.
- Nevada has the second highest rate of Substance Use Disorders (SUD) in the nation (SAMHSA, 2013) but has the lowest number of providers able to treat SUD per 1,000 people (Advocates for Human Potential, 2014).
- "The number of psychiatrists, psychologists, counselors and social workers available to treat every 1,000 people with SUD – ranges from a high of 70 in Vermont to a low of 11 in Nevada.

- Nationally, the average is 32 behavioral health specialists for every 1,000 people afflicted with the disorder (Advocates for Human Potential, 2014).”
- An annual average of 233,000 persons aged 12 or older have used illicit drugs in the past year in the Las Vegas-Paradise Metropolitan Statistical Area (16.8% of the population), and 138,000 persons aged 12 or older were classified as having a substance use disorder in the past year (9.9% of the population) according to the National Survey on Drug Use and Health (SAMHSA Report, 2012).
- According to a 2017 fact sheet released by the Southern Nevada Health District, since 2008, more Clark County residents have died each year from opioid overdoses than firearms or motor vehicle traffic accidents.
- In 2012-2014, the mortality rate from opioid overdoses in Clark County was almost 70% higher than the national rate.
- It is only through Capacity Building and Strategic Partnerships that we will be able to make a difference and save lives.
- So thank you for being here and thank you for all that you do to address this deadly epidemic by building recovery-focused partnerships and providing tools, resources and training to support prevention, treatment, and recovery.

YOUR ROLE

Mayor Carolyn G. Goodman is being requested to provide the Opening Remarks for the Summit at 8:40 a.m. and has been allotted fifteen minutes to speak to the audience. Key talking points are attached above.

Cross-Border Crowdfunding Boom Would Test EU Regulators

The European Union's restrained approach toward regulating crowdfunding — by largely deferring to local regimes — should enable the budding fundraising tool to grow, experts say, though they warn that continental regulators will need to develop a more coherent plan if crowdfunding expands across borders.

Lifetime Adventures: An Outdoor Adventure for Students

Our Lifetime Adventures program is one of a kind! Lifetime Adventures takes youth away from the city and into nature, where they can explore and get to know the world around them. The program teaches youth the skills that they need to know to be able to safely hike, camp, and explore the wilderness, as well as the importance of conservation. It also teaches youth leadership and other basic skills that directly translate to their everyday lives. After-School All-Stars encourages youth to say no to gangs, drugs, and violence; instead we offer ways for youth to stay active and give them the opportunity to participate in activities that promote health, fitness, and learning. During Lifetime Adventures, youth will learn in the classroom and implement what they learn on field trips, where they will be able to go hiking, backpacking, exploring, and a variety of other activities with a focus on skill-building, confidence, and teamwork.

Our first outing was a day hike at red-rock, where youth explored the Calico Tanks, participated in team-building activities and learned about the history of the Calico Tanks. Some of the other outings that are being planned are exploring Mt. Charleston, kayaking and visiting hot springs. We'd like to thank the Conservation Lands Foundation for their generous support and commitment to our students! Many of these students would never have the opportunity to have these experiences if it weren't for you!

Event News:

Hi Mayor! Two years ago (yes he kept the email!) Jon Ralston asked us about this whether you were considering returning the money he gave your campaign, and after talking with you we responded you were aware of the issue and would wait and see what the outcome of the investigation is,
Now that he has been indicted Jon wants to know whether you are planning to return the money he donated to your campaign.
Feel free to call me if you want to chat, I wanted to email you this so you had the PDF.

INVESTMENT COMPANY EXECUTIVES INDICTED FOR $1.5 BILLION PONZI SCHEME

WASHINGTON – The president and chief executive officer and two former Asia-based executives of a Las Vegas investment company were indicted today for their roles in an alleged $1.5 billion Ponzi scheme.

Assistant Attorney General Leslie R. Caldwell of the Justice Department's Criminal Division, U.S. Attorney Daniel G. Bogden of the District of Nevada and Special Agent in Charge Laura A. Bucheit of the FBI's Las Vegas Division made the announcement.

"The defendants allegedly preyed on thousands of unsuspecting Japanese victims to enrich themselves by operating a billion-plus dollar Ponzi scheme," said Assistant Attorney General Caldwell. "This prosecution shows that the Criminal Division will pursue not only those who victimize American citizens, but also those who use the U.S. as a home base to defraud victims abroad."

"Investment fraud and other financial fraud cases are a high priority for the U.S. Attorney's Office in Nevada," said U.S. Attorney Bogden. "These defendants are accused of using a Nevada corporation to conduct their $1.5 billion fraud scheme and falsely telling thousands of overseas victims that their investments would be safely held and managed by an independent, third-party escrow agent in Nevada. Fraudulent ruses and schemes perpetrated by Nevadans using Nevada corporations and entities will continue to be addressed by this office."

"These indictments are a reminder of the FBI's determination to identify, investigate and bring to justice those who are committing financial crimes against innocent consumers," said Special Agent in Charge Bucheit. "We are appreciative of the continued support we receive from our international, federal, state and local law enforcement partners."

Edwin Fujinaga, 68, of Las Vegas; Junzo Suzuki, 66, of Tokyo; and Paul Suzuki, 36, of Tokyo, were charged in an indictment with eight counts of mail fraud and nine counts of wire fraud. Fujinaga also is charged with three counts of money laundering. The indictment seeks from all three defendants forfeiture of the proceeds from the alleged crimes.

Fujinaga was the president and CEO of Las Vegas-based MRI International Inc. (MRI). Junzo Suzuki previously was MRI's executive vice president for Asia Pacific, and Paul Suzuki previously was the company's general manager for Japan operations. MRI purportedly specialized in "factoring," whereby the company purchased accounts receivable from medical providers at a discount, and then attempted to recover the entire amount, or at least more than the discounted amount, from the debtor.

According to allegations in the indictment, from at least 2009 to 2013, Fujinaga and the Suzukis fraudulently solicited investments from thousands of Japanese residents, and MRI currently owes investors over $1.5 billion. Specifically, the indictment alleges that Fujinaga and the Suzukis promised investors a series of interest payments that would accrue over the life of the investment and that would be paid out along with the face value of the investment at the conclusion of the investments' duration. The defendants allegedly solicited investments by, among other things, promising investors that their investments would be used only for the purchase of medical accounts receivable (MARS) and by representing that investors funds would be managed and safeguarded by an independent third-party escrow company.

The indictment further alleges that MRI operated as a Ponzi scheme, wherein the defendants used new investors' money to pay prior investors' maturing investments. According to the indictment, the defendants also allegedly used investors' funds for purposes other than the purchase of MARS, including paying themselves sales commissions, subsidizing gambling habits, funding personal travel by private jet, and other personal expenses.

The charges contained in an indictment are merely accusations. A defendant is presumed innocent until and unless proven guilty.

This case is being investigated by the FBI's Las Vegas Division. Significant assistance was provided by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, the Criminal Division's Office of International Affairs and Japanese authorities. This case is being prosecuted by Assistant Chief Albert B. Stieglitz Jr. and Trial Attorney Melissa Aoyagi of the Criminal Division's Fraud Section and First Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven W. Myhre of the District of Nevada.

Subject: Atkinson to resign from Legislature

Quote of the Day

"I ask that we consider our roles, not as politicians or legislators, but as parents, role models and community leaders. Consider the progress we can make as a state if we the most diverse legislature ever, can behave with dignity, respect and tolerance."

— Senate Majority Leader Kelvin Atkinson in legislative opening day speech

From the Editors

This morning's unfortunate news — that Senate Majority Leader Kelvin Atkinson will resign his seat after pleading guilty to federal charges of misappropriating campaign funds for personal use — is a tale of promise and leadership stopped short by unethical conduct and corruption.

More than anything, it is sad.

We'll be updating the story throughout the day as we learn more.

It is a start. Thanks. One answer may be in doubt and that is the question of home grow. The ballot questtion seems clear on that to me but I am told that there is more enabling language somewhere which puts a 25 mile limit on proximity to a dispensary which would prohibit it. Seems to me the plain language of the Question should control so I am confused.

Karen: Please look into that one thing for now, please?

Subject: Request for assistance legalized marijuana passage briefing

Good afternoon Ms. Duddlesten,
Councilman Coffin wanted a briefing on the passage of Ballot Question 2 that was just passed by the Nevada voters.
Absent any Bills introduced at the next Nevada Legislative Session, Councilman Coffin would still like a briefing as soon as possible.

As of January 1, 2017, it would be legal for anyone 21 and older to possess an ounce of marijuana or an eighth of an ounce of marijuana concentrate.
Correct? That is our understanding. The CAO should provide details.

An adult may grow up to six plants for personal use inside their home? YES, that is our understanding, however there is also a cap of 12 plants per household.
Correct? Will this be added for Code Enforcement to enforce? This is yet to be determined.

Who's in charge of legalized marijuana regulations-the Department of Taxation or Department of Health? The Department of Taxation. They have not yet staffed the new department but Joline Smith, 775-684-2029 may have more information.

Would city licensing fees be increased on recreational as opposed to medical dispensaries? This is yet to be determined and would have to be addressed both in enabling legislation or local ordinance.

What is the mechanism for medical to convert to recreational sales? This will need to be determined on temporary state regulations and local ordinances.

Has the state of Nevada decided how to divide the reported 80-recreational licenses that would be made available? Not to our knowledge.

Is it true that for the first 18 months, only existing medical marijuana establishments could apply to open recreational dispensaries? Yes, the Act states that only those medical marijuana establishments that hold a State Registrations Certificate may apply for a recreational license. (does not stipulate that they are licensed in their respective jurisdiction)

Define existing (licensed, built or in process). – No information available at this time as the Act only mentions State Registration Certificates.

Is city staff prepared with licensing regulations, staffing, and enforcement? We have been working with Senator Farley on the issues that may be addressed in additional legislation and have a staff working group preparing issues that will require input and direction from the CAO, CMO and City Council.

Since this will move fast on January 1, 2017, whatever briefing you can put together would be greatly appreciated. The State has 12 months from Jan 1, 2017 to start accepting applications. The Department of Taxation issued a press release that they would be working on temporary regulations. We have made contact at both the legislative level and the Department to request to be involved in discussions.

Thank you in advance.

Preventing Violence – A Proven Community-based Approach

Are your schools and communities proactively identifying at-risk individuals? Red flags and concerning behaviors witnessed by students, parents, employees, co-workers, supervisors, managers and even community members should be shared with your threat assessment team and provide an opportunity to detect and thwart potential violence within your community.

We recently interviewed Amanda Agguire, former state senator and CEO and Founder of the Regional Center for Border Health (RCBH). Agguire helped create the Yuma County Anti-Bullying Task Force in 2008 in an effort to raise awareness regarding such a sensitive and difficult issue in rural Yuma County, Arizona.

> "We all need to be aware and prevent critical incidents like those that other communities have been through."

Through the use of Awareity's TIPS prevention platform, the Community Action Group is encouraging students, parents, staff, and community members to report incidents of bullying, threats of violence, weapons, drugs/alcohol, vandalism, sexting, suicide and other risks. Proper personnel from the school district selected, as well as counselors from RCBH and appropriate city/county law enforcement, are instantly notified. All prevention efforts and actions taken are documented as team members work together to assess the situation and formulate an effective intervention plan.

We are extremely impressed by Amanda's leadership and drive to bring the community together to prevent violence. To listen to the interview click here.

Showing tribute of any kind to a drug addict is the most ridiculous thing your administration has come up with yet. The man was a good artist which he was paid highly for.
This is not someone I want my grandchildren to look up to. He killed himself! With Drugs!! This is how you wish to inspire the youth of our town. Your tribute is encouraging young people to follow in the footsteps of a drug addict!!
How sad you have decided to drag our town down a road of star idol worship instead of doing for and celebrating our military heroes. Shame on you. I am embarrassed for us all. Karleen Craig

Good afternoon Mayor,
Attached, please find the photos of the individuals that Kenny mentioned who found their way to our property in the last 7 days. It is the same report with different faces each week. Dozens and dozens more were stopped at the entrance or, turned away by someone in the casino. We have seen a noticeable increase in these individuals aggressiveness lately that makes the problem worse. These individuals are also barricading themselves in our restrooms requiring us to use force at times along with open use of illicit drugs. We spent $1,300,000 in security last year, including $353,000 paid to a third party security company for external coverage and that still is not enough. We know this is a community problem but we are asking for your help on this. The church up the street is promoting this problem to our area with the daily feedings that are conducted. We are at a loss of resources on how to address this.

Thank you in advance. All of us at the El Cortez appreciate what you do for our property and, the betterment of downtown as a whole.

Hi Mayor Goodman—

One other critical area of concern is our schools and student safety. Threats are changing and mounting and range from viral Internet risks to active shooters to sexual predators to drugs to suicide to bullying and many more.

My passion for student and child safety is very strong and I am proud to say Awareity is helping and equipping over 500 schools with the right tools to connect the dots and eliminate common and dangerous GAPs between what students know, parents know, community members know, social media users know and adults at the school usually don't know… which means they cannot prevent things if they don't know about them even though others do know.

Please visit http://awareity.com/solutions/k12/ and see multiple videos to help you know what you may not know if you don't have time to do the research.

Starting with your school would help you see what is possible Community-wide.

I know I can help… I will keep offering to help with First Preventer efforts.

Subject: Las Vegas Massacre Importance: High

Hi Mayor Goodman—

Subject: Las Vegas Massacre – Are you frustrated like me?

Hi, my name is Rick Shaw and I am sad and frustrated like you regarding the evil attack in Las Vegas, as well as the hundreds and hundreds of other attacks and tragedies that have also occurred across our great nation.

I founded Awareity out of frustration with lack of effective Prevention solutions and here is my story: http://awareity.com/silos/

Almost everyone seems to be asking why and how the Las Vegas and numerous other horrible and senseless acts of evil could happen?

Almost always there are warning signs, concerning behaviors, suspicious activities, social media postings, and other pre-incident indicators collected from "community members", from organizations, people in the local community, friends/family, and people in the social media community.

Which begs the question, if warnings and indicators can be collected AFTER tragedies, why aren't they being collected BEFORE the incident?

To achieve safer communities and different results, Community Leaders must be willing to use different strategies and different solutions. Which begs even more questions:

> Will Community Leaders consider different actions to achieve different results?
> http://awareity.com/community-leaders/
> Will Community Leaders utilize different tools to empower and engage "good" people – who far outnumber evil doers – to change the world?
> http://awareity.com/butterfly-effect/
>
> Will Community Leaders realize Defense (First Responders) is not Offense (First Preventers)?
> http://awareity.com/football/

We live in a different world, Recovering tools and strategies must change. Evidence reveals recovering quickly is vital to restoring trust and creating better prevention. A different solution category, the Community-wide Fusion Platform, is clearly needed (and proven).

And because we live in a different world, Preventing tools and strategies must change. Evidence reveals proactively preventing copycats and future attacks is critical to delivering public safety, saving lives, saving reputations, and saving bottom lines. A different solution category, the Community-wide Fusion Platform, is obviously needed (and proven).

Are you willing to consider DIFFERENT tools, strategies, and solutions that are proven in helping organizations and communities with recovering and preventing? (proof in videos above)

Are you willing to learn about the common and dangerous GAPS that exist in every organization and every community? (overview of GAPS in videos above)

Boyd Briefs

From Dean Dan

This week, Las Vegas was shaken to its core by an unimaginable act of violence. Our thoughts are with the victims, their families, and the first responders. The acts of kindness and outpouring of support around our city have shown the strength and compassion of both those professionals who in many cases risked their lives in responding, and all of our neighbors and friends who did so much to help. Las Vegas is our home. In times of the unthinkable, we are humbled by the sacrifices of others and heartened by the warmth, generosity, and spirit of our community.

As an institution, we do our best by continuing to move forward and serve the community. Today the law school welcomes the American Bar Association Forum on Entertainment and Sports Industries 2017 Annual Meeting. This year's meeting offers an unsurpassed selection of entertainment and sports educational programming and collegial social events for attorneys and other professionals practicing in every sector of the industry. We thank Mark Tratos, the founding Shareholder at Greenburg Traurig, and Leonard Glickman, Chair of the ABA Forum, for bringing the Forum to the law school as the site for the first day of their 2017 Annual Meeting.

Next week, the William S. Boyd School of Law will welcome two distinguished speakers on Thursday, October 12.

Jon Wellinghoff, former chairman of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC), internationally recognized energy law attorney, and clean tech energy expert, will present "The Future of Renewable Energy in Nevada: Public Policy and the Nevada Energy Choice Initiative" at 12 p.m. in the Thomas and Mack Moot Courtroom. His talk is free and open to the public. The longest serving chair of the FERC, Jon was first nominated to be a FERC Commissioner in 2006 by President George W. Bush. He was reappointed to the Commission in 2008, and, in March of 2009, he was named Chairman by President Barack Obama. He served as chair until November 2013. Mr. Wellinghoff has over 40 years of leadership experience in federal, state, and local energy policy, regulation, and project development. I want to thank Senator Harry Reid for making this talk possible.

The Saltman Center for Conflict Resolution has a long history of bringing to our school thought-provoking lectures. On Thursday, we are delighted to welcome Mary Roldán, the Dorothy Epstein Professor of Latin American History and Chair of the Department of History at the CUNY – Hunter College. Professor Roldán will present "War and Peace in Colombia: Conflict and Reconciliation in Historical Perspective." She will explore the historical context of conflict in Colombia, and the challenges and possibilities of achieving the goals of reparation, reconciliation and justice embodied in the Colombian Peace Accords negotiated between the Colombian government and the FARC, Latin America's oldest, revolutionary armed guerilla group.

Professor Roldán's talk will take place at 5 p.m. in the Thomas & Mack Moot Courtroom. The lecture is free and open to the public.

Faculty Spotlight: Mary Beth Beazley

Mary Beth Beazley is a Professor of Law and leading Legal Writing Scholar.

Which of your recent books or articles should I read?

It would have to be the most recent one: Writing for a Mind at Work: Appellate Advocacy and the Science of Reading, 54 Duq. L. Rev. 415 (2016). This article analyzes the impact of digital platforms on how we read and how we think. I guess I would also recommend Hiding in Plain Sight: "Conspicuous Type" Standards in Mandated Communication Statutes, 40 J. LEGIS. 1 (2014). That article talks about how legislatures mandate certain language, and even certain typefaces, in some legal documents like contracts and court orders. Unfortunately, they seem to be enacting these laws without a good understanding of how human beings actually read and use documents. It's important to understand this behavior if you are a reader or a writer, or if you legislate or write opinions about reading and writing. For example, some court opinions that apply the "least sophisticated debtor" standard seem to assume a very sophisticated reader. We know how to write and design documents for maximum comprehension – documents from the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau are a great example – and courts and legislatures need to hold writers to a higher standard rather than to impose higher burdens on readers.

How does your research and scholarship influence your teaching and service and vice versa?

My teaching and scholarship really feed into each other. In my early years of teaching, I wrote a lot about teaching methods, because legal writing was undergoing a sea change. When I started teaching (in 1983), I taught mostly about using plain language and active voice, and not very much about research or analytical structure. Now things are almost reversed. And as I observed my own behavior as a reader, reading hundreds of pages each semester, I recognized some connections between reading and law. For example, I teach my students to exploit the "natural positions of emphasis" at the beginnings and endings of documents, sections, and paragraphs. Science shows that readers subconsciously pay more attention to items at the beginning of a unit of discourse (primacy effect) and at the end (recency effect). Any politician will tell you about the impact of primacy effect on voting, and I ended up writing an article about how ballot design needs to take into account what are essentially "reader" behaviors. Likewise, I recognized that there are certain ways in which I skipped around in documents when I was researching, and that behavior was different than the way I behaved when I was reading for pleasure or when I was grading papers. Talking to students about their own behavior as readers helps them understand why they have to structure their documents in certain ways; it's a shock to some students that their readers are inattentive and impatient; they sometimes expect their readers to be "super-readers" instead of being as human as the students are. And again, this behavioral perspective led not only to my article on ballot design, but also to the conspicuous type article. Likewise, I noticed that I behave differently with hard-copy documents than we do with digital documents. That realization led me to read scientific articles about digital documents and cognitive function. And in turn, I now share that knowledge with my students when I talk to them about how they should read, and how they should write for others.

What is it about being a law school professor that inspires or motivates you?

Like many professors, I love the lightbulb moment – seeing my students understand a concept they had never understood before. I'm delighted that I'm teaching Fall 1Ls again, because I think there's naturally a better chance for lightbulb moments with that group. And I just love the intricacies of legal writing. I enjoy introducing first-year students to the foundational concepts, and I enjoy teaching more sophisticated concepts to upper-level students. I look forward to meeting my new students – and reuniting with former students – every semester.

Student Spotlight: William Nobriga

You're a literature guy. What is your "desert island" book?

I tend to enjoy classics in literature, which includes authors like Twain, Dostoevsky, Nietzsche, and Hemingway. That being said, I would likely choose the book Pudd'nhead Wilson by Mark Twain. Twain was way ahead of his time in writing this book, which is a modern day mystery that includes a commentary on the evils of bigotry and racism. I would highly recommend it for those who haven't read it.

Which course at Boyd has been your favorite?

I came to law school with an interest in constitutional law. So, naturally, my favorite courses have revolved around that topic. So I enjoyed both Con Law I and II. Administrative Law was likely my favorite so far because it dealt with the constitutional issues around the growing federal bureaucracy.

How did you enjoy your law firm summer?

I loved it! I was exposed to a variety of different practice areas, and I had the opportunity to work with talented, smart, and interesting attorneys. I think my writing drastically improved, as well as my knowledge of the law.

What's your mission as this year's Student Bar Association president?

First and foremost, I plan to make sure that all of the students' needs are met throughout this academic year. Law school is a challenging and intellectually rigorous experience, and it is my goal to make sure that the students have the support they need. Further, the SBA will ensure that all the student clubs and organizations have what they need to succeed.

Alumni Spotlight: Michiko Nozawa-Joffe 15

Michiko is an attorney at Las Vegas Sands Corp.

How did Boyd School of Law help you achieve your dream?

Coming from a long line of police officers, I always considered joining the FBI as a special agent. But, as with many of my colleagues, my path changed slightly when attending law school. One thing, however, did not change: the joy of researching and investigating. This passion has translated into my work as an anti-money laundering attorney at Las Vegas Sands Corp. Here, I get to uncover financial fraud schemes and other suspicious activity that criminals may try to conduct at our casinos. Boyd Law School prepared me well for this job through its hands-on professors who truly took the time to mentor me. Time and again, I am able to rely on the skills I learned at Boyd to be an effective in-house lawyer.

Do you have a motto and what is it?

There are a couple of proverbs that I live by every day:
First proverb (Japanese) – (kagakujoutatsu) which means "start from daily basic learning to high advanced learning." Translating the kanji for my personal guidance: Don't forget to take life's challenges one step at a time!
Second proverb (Japanese) – (amadareishiwomougatsu) which means "constant dropping wears away a stone." In translation: It is always easy to give up, but you will succeed if you stay persistent!

What do you enjoy in your off hours?

I like to read, connect with friends, spend time at home with my family (including my cats), and go on mini weekend vacations to California. I know many of my colleagues have demanding hours and may even have to work on weekends, so I am incredibly grateful for my stable work schedule which allows me to plan my trips and off hours in advance.

The Public Leadership Institute is a nonprofit educational group organized to raise public awareness on key issues and to develop public leaders who will improve the economic and social conditions of all Americans. To join, click here.

Prescription Drug Price Transparency: There is a movement in states toward requiring drug companies to disclose costs and profits in order to help drive down prices. In Massachusetts, SB 1048 would require such disclosure for a fairly small number of drugs on a "critical prescription drug list." Other disclosure bills have been introduced in California, North Carolina, Oregon and Pennsylvania.

What, if anything, is causing violent crime to increase? The media have saying that violent crime is on the rise, and it seems to be true—but only in some jurisdictions and not others. Is there a logical reason why homicide has increased significantly in cities like Baltimore and Washington, D.C. while other places like Philadelphia and New York have seen little change? Yes. Read about it on IdeaLog, our blog intended to raise eyebrows and engage minds.

How the federal budget (and the shutdown) affects you: Thursday October 1 @3pm Eastern, 2pm Central, 1pm Mountain, Noon Pacific. Once again, the federal government may shut down on October 1, this time because of an absurd plan to defund Planned Parenthood. Campaign for America's Future co-director Bob Borosage will explain what's going on and how it will affect state and local governments, as well as individuals everywhere. California passes strong climate change bill: The legislature passed SB 350 which requires the state to increase from 33 to 50 percent the proportion of electricity the state derives from renewable sources. The Environmental Defense Fund considers the bill a historic victory but some compromises were made.

California passes automatic voter registration: The legislature passed AB 1461, the New Motor Voter Act, which automatically registers to vote any adult citizen who gets or renews a driver's license, gets a state ID card, or fills out a change of address form with the Department of Motor Vehicles—unless he or she declines to be registered.

Subject: State rushes to get ruling in Dozier execution case

Quote of the Day

“Even if (Nevada Department of Corrections) used subterfuge to acquire Alvogen’s product, such a discretionary judgment call would be a legitimate choice in light of decisions by Alvogen and other drug companies ‘to refuse to supply the drugs used to carry out death sentences."

— Chief Deputy District Attorney Jonathan VanBoskerck in a court filing seeking to overturn a lower court’s decision blocking one of the three drugs scheduled for the execution of convicted killer Scott Dozier before one of the drugs expires in November

Recent filings submitted by the attorney general’s office with the Nevada Supreme Court seek a green light to execute Scott Dozier after two previously scheduled executions were called off. Riley Snyder explains what's going on.

Both parties will need to submit their filings by Aug. 30, giving the court a roughly two-and-a-half month window in which to hear the case and make a decision.

TUNE IN FRIDAY: The President's Commission on Combating Drug Addiction and the Opioid Epidemic – First Meeting

This Friday, the President's Commission on Combating Drug Addiction and the Opioid Epidemic will hold its first meeting at the White House. The President established the Commission to review the state of drug addiction and the opioid epidemic and make recommendations regarding how the Federal Government can best address this crisis.

The Commission's members include New Jersey Governor Chris Christie (chair), Massachusetts Governor Charlie Baker, North Carolina Governor Roy Cooper, former U.S. Representative Patrick Kennedy, and Dr. Bertha Madras of Harvard Medical School. The Commission's first meeting will feature testimony from many stakeholder groups on the front lines of this epidemic.

The meeting will be livestreamed on www.WhiteHouse.gov/live beginning at 12:30 PM EST.

Acting Director Op-Ed Published in The Hill

On Thursday, May 18, President Trump welcomed Colombian President Santos to the White House for a meeting where they discussed bilateral cooperation, most notably the issue of increased coca cultivation and cocaine production in Colombia. Acting Director of National Drug Control Policy Richard Baum penned an op-ed to preview the meeting, highlighting the need for increased cooperation between the United States and Colombia to combat the surge in cocaine that has led to worrisome increases in domestic use.

DFC Provides the Skills and Resources for Sustainable Prevention in Communities

Following 10 years of funding through the Drug-Free Communities Grant Program, the Dover Coalition for Youth has had nearly three years of success sustaining all of the Coalition's previous activities. The Dover, NH-based coalition has received sustainability resources from a variety of sources, with significant assistance from their local healthcare facility, Wentworth-Douglass Hospital. The hospital partnership has resulted in the coalition being able to expand its response to the opioid problem in the community. They have developed policies for first responders, educated medical providers on substance use disorders, launched a prevention based media campaign, and have worked to install permanent medication drop boxes in the community, among other activities.

Over the 25 years of the coalition's existence, they have developed a level of expertise in creating and implementing a youth empowerment program. The youth component of the Coalition, called Dover Youth to Youth, has created over 100 radio and video PSAs; created local campaigns; and provides advocacy training for Coalitions throughout the US. This expertise has led to the coalition creating a youth empowerment toolkit and evaluating the program. Their youth empowerment model has been recognized by the State of New Hampshire as an evidence-based model and is being utilized by over 100 communities across the country. This has led to opportunities for the Dover Coalition to provide technical assistance to similar youth groups and an investment by their local United Way to create a network of youth empowerment groups in the seacoast region of NH in collaboration with Dover's program.

National Heroin Coordination Group Helps Lead International Drug Scheduling

ONDCP's National Heroin Coordination Group (NHCG), along with the National Security Council (NSC), the State Department, and interagency partners, are spearheading international cooperation on drug issues between the United States, Canada, and Mexico. It began with the first tri-lateral North American Drug Dialogue (NADD), a high-level meeting with Canadian and Mexican officials, last fall. One of the NADD's priorities was to develop tri-lateral responses and complementary activities to significantly reduce the availability of heroin, fentanyl, and fentanyl analogues on the North American continent. In March 2017, the NHCG led the development and hosted a follow-up series of technical workshops with U.S. Federal agencies and their Mexican and Canadian counterparts to improve the three countries' shared understanding of the impact of heroin, fentanyl, and fentanyl analogues on the North American continent. As a result, meetings and trainings are ongoing and will take place in all three countries.

Additionally, the NHCG, again in concert with the NSC, the State Department, and interagency partners, developed fentanyl safe-handling guidelines for Federal, state, and local law enforcement, and was key to U.S.-led efforts to encourage the United Nations to internationally schedule two key fentanyl precursors, NPP and ANPP, at the Commission on Narcotic Drugs meeting in Vienna in March 2017.

ONDCP's NHCG was established in 2015 and serves as an interagency hub for coordinating Federal government activities to significantly reduce the availability of heroin, fentanyl, and fentanyl analogues and overdose deaths in the U.S.

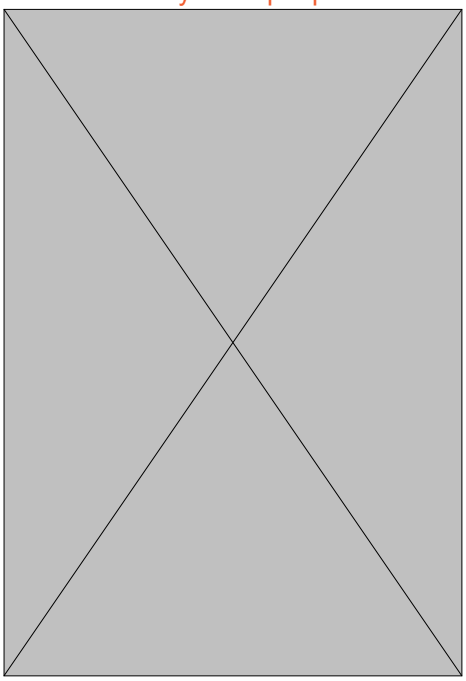
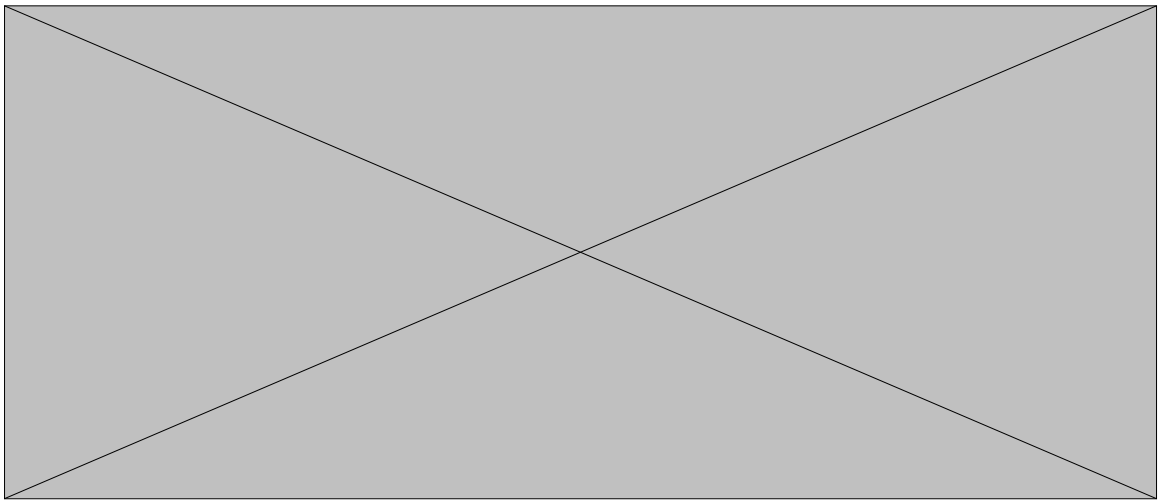
From the Desk of the President

"Every hair on my body stood up and I decided to do something this time", said Katherine Duncan.

One of the saddest moments that I have ever felt drove me to anger.
A man and woman came to Harrison House. She was in a wheelchair
And he was pushing her. They came to me because they believed I could do something.
She had been hit by a car on Washington and "F" Street. People expect me to be able to help them. I believe it is because of two women, Ruby Duncan and Faye Duncan Daniel. I resemble my oldest sister Faye and people believe that Mrs. Ruby Duncan is my mother.

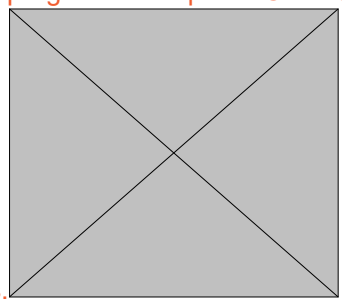


These are two women are tough acts to follow.



Ruby Duncan is well known in Nevada as one of the most prolific civil rights advocates and pioneers for women's rights. She is published and is best known for "Storming Caesars Palace".

My sister, Faye Daniel (nee Johnnie Mae Duncan) is a very tall beautiful black woman known for her Afrocentricity long before it was popular to leave home with "nappy" hair. She made a name for herself by producing the "Rose" Awards and by becoming the first black female police officer in North Las Vegas. She developed many programs to improve Clark County, such as PayBac and the burnt toast chapter of Toastmasters.



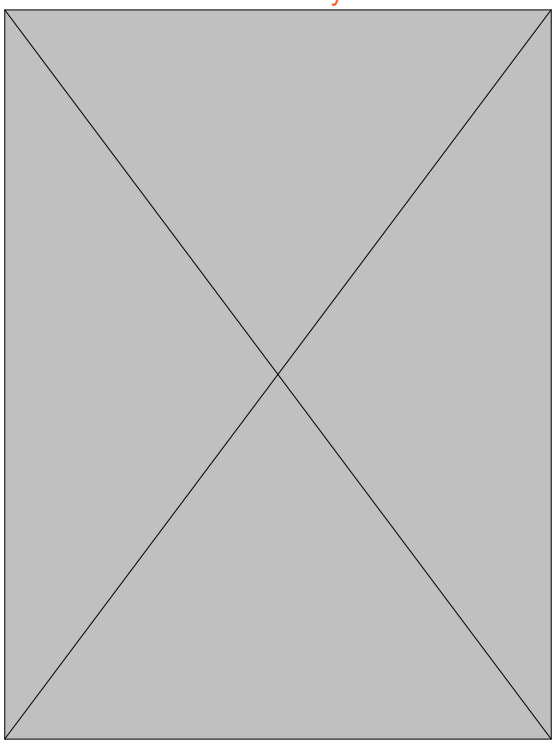
Faye Duncan Daniel at the Union Plaza Hotel

I have lived in the shadows of Ruby & Faye for 40 years but, never did I ever expect to or even try to fill either of their shoes. I never considered myself a fighter for other people. Honestly, I was pretty devoted to myself and to my immediate family. I was pretty busy getting married, remarried, divorced, married and widowed. I was raising my two sons, Derek and Jalil and traveling the world. I worked in business and kept quietly to myself until a group of people asked me to represent them and run for Las Vegas City Council Ward 5 in 2007. Prior to that moment, I have never been to City Hall! I agreed to run and upon my defeat, I was delighted to create a Chamber of Commerce. The idea was to unite all of the candidates who ran for the office to support the winner- Ricky Barlow.

Eleven years ago in 2007, we produced the Uptown View and we were so very proud to announce that we would be honoring the new Councilman Ricky Barlow in the Crystal Ballroom, Plaza Hotel Las Vegas. Things didn't go as we had hoped over the past 11 years.

Now, eleven years later, Councilman Barlow is being sentenced for Federal Fraud charges. The President of the NAACP was named in the probe which left two very powerful African American held seats stagnant all this while the Mayor of the City proclaimed that Barack Obama was not Welcomed in Las Vegas. The challenges facing the Historic Westside and F Street appear to be worse than before the "F" enclosure. This street was closed without giving any notice to the residents.

The couple who came to Harrison House reported that the woman had been struck by a hit-and-run driver on Washington and F Street. Had it been any other intersection, I probably would not have been frozen in my tracts. Every hair on my body stood up and I decided to do something this time. No longer could I take the route of least resistance. My soul was shaken.



What the hell is going on is the City of Las Vegas?

Everyone knows all too well that Oscar Goodman was responsible for the "F" enclosure. Even his dear wife, our current Mayor Carolyn, expressed her disdain for this actions even though she was powerless to stop him.

This 20 year mayoral dynasty has continued to desecrate the Historic Westside from the shutting down of every entertainment venue including the most recent closure of the Paran (The oldest organization known to man), the total destruction of the Moulin Rouge Hotel to the continuous burning of residential properties, the Goodman syndicate in hell bent on gentrification. It was Goodman who decided that the Moulin Rouge was an "eyesore" despite the historical significance of the property. Goodman never spent one dime or used any breath to save it. The cruel part about the F Street underpass was the politics behind its re-opening. It appears that Las Vegas Paving got paid twice-nearly $20 million to close it. They were the biggest proponents for its re-opening thereby gaining nearly an additional $20 million for their company's profit. $40 million dollars later, we still have the same problem that caused the street to be closed in the first place- no crosswalks at "F" Street and Washington.

One property owner, Mrs. Hatcher, recently installed iron pylons in front of her house to try to prevent another vehicle from barrelling through her property. She is hoping to be able to open an office for real estate office and mortgages. She can't advertise her services from her location because it is still zoned residential.

My sadness turned to anger because we tried to warn the City about the danger of re-opening the street without a traffic plan. "F" Street was reopened without crosswalks, speed bumps or anything to control the traffic. There didn't seem to be any thought given into who or how we would use the reopened street in light of the Project Neon, the I-11, Lossee Road or the Owens offramp.

Beautiful historical photos in tiles were installed but no one dares to go there to enjoy because of the disastrous condition of the people living under the bridge. There are people from all over the world facing misfortune living under the bridge. They are waiting for the Rescue Mission. These people have lost their money on the gambling tables, lost their minds on drugs and promiscuity, and lost their souls facing serious mental illness. There are also career thugs under that bridge enjoying the free meals brought by people who have a heartfelt compassion to help the less fortunate. They pour in with food adding to the already nightmarish environmental condition. There is an abundance of wasted food and debris under the bridge which ends up on the ground and in the sewer system.

My being sadness and angry didn't change anything. Our waiting for Councilman Barlow to finish his college degrees so that he could devote some time to the neighborhood didn't change anything. Our waiting for F Street to reopen didn't change anything- Oscar Goodman gets what Oscar Goodman wants and if he wanted the conditions to be different, then it would have been so. What is it going to take bring about a change?

We have high hopes for Councilman Cedric Crear. He didn't come the same path through City Hall's Human Resources department as his predecessors in the Goodman dynasty. Even though he just took his seat, we already have spoken to him and neighborhood meeting are being scheduled. Hallelujah! This is a new start. Barlow avoided neighborhood meetings, instead choosing to hold those infamous and well advertised throughout the valley "Community Meetings" where African Americans from around the valley would attend and voice their needs effectively continuing to silence the challenges in the Ward 5 neighborhoods he represented.

The Ward 5 Chamber of Commerce has long advocated for a world class elevated fixed route transit system since transportation continues to be the single largest threat to the City's economics. Our transportation infrastructure needs to be valley wide and integrated into the future neighborhood plans. Are there any transit plans out there? Comprehensive transportation plans (except an extended bus route) that includes the Historic West Side?

Our plan is to promote and advocate for a People's Mobility Initiative that will create a comprehensive, integrated elevated fixed route light rail transit system that will reconnect the Historic Westside to the rest of the world. Placing such a depot/station in the vicinity near the Moulin Rouge site will be the economic engine that the entire valley could enjoy. A state of the arts futuristic system that connects the Westside to the Raiders Stadium, to Hoover Dam and to the California High Speed Rail would cinch us as a "World Class City" for years to come..

Let's build a "Dam" train!

Dear Mayor Goodman,

We are sending this e-mail in anticipation of the November 21 meeting where our application regarding SUP-72940 will be considered. We wanted to take this opportunity to reach out to you and provide you with some background about our application. Please see attached.

We are hoping you would consider approval of our application as we have complied with all the rules and have taken steps to ensure our neighborhood is least impacted by any potential rental activities.

We would be willing to have restrictions on our permit to limit rentals to a minimum of 5 days, or whatever the council recommends.

Please let us know if you have any questions or concerns that we can address between now and our November 21st meeting.

Thank you so much for your time.

City Hall
495. S. Main St.
Las Vegas, NV 89101
Subject: SUP-72940 (PRJ-72939) – Special use permit for short-term rental

Dear Mayor Goodman,

Thank you very much for hearing and considering our application for short-term rental. As our application was held in abeyance to the November 21st City Council meeting, we wanted to take this opportunity to provide you more information on our application.

We have been a frequent traveler to the Las Vegas from our home in California area since we have been adults, over 20 years. We love the city and have begun planning our retirement in Las Vegas. We purchased a multi unit apartment last year to start our retirement planning. We are hoping to purchase more long-term rental units in the future. In our investment planning, we heard about the short-term rental market and decided it would be a great opportunity to be able to buy our future retirement home, use the home for getaways for our family, and rent it out when not in use.

We then began researching the short-term rental rules as we searched for the ideal home for our vacation getaways and future retirement. We ensured that we conducted our search in areas that would conform to the rules laid out by the planning department, such as location and proximity to an existing short-term rental. We kept in touch with representatives from the planning department, as we completed our search, to ensure we would be in compliance with all the rules.

We then applied for this SUP, which has been abeyed 3 times. We paid over $1,000 to apply for this permit and satisfied all the requirements laid out by the planning department.

We are trying to understand what the planning department and city council are looking for to consider approving our application. In the initial planning meeting, the planning commission expressed concern that we are out of town residents. There is no rule that discourages out of town ownership of short-term rentals. However, we wanted to ensure we addressed the concerns of the planning department. We hired a property manager and a handyman, to ensure that we have a local contact to address any issues with our property. We joined our local neighborhood watch program and have built a relationship with our neighborhood watch captain, Helen Moore, who is supportive of our application. We also sent out letters to our immediate neighbors, notifying them of our plan to rent our property out, and providing them our contact information to communicate any concerns they may have. We also put in exterior security cameras and an alarm, to better monitor the property and guest activity.

In the first city council meeting held on June 15th, the council stated that their only concern was that they had heard of noise complaints regarding our property, in proposing an abeyance. We took the opportunity to reach out to Helen Moore and the local police department. They confirmed to us that, since we purchased the property in March, there have been no noise complaints received. We made our inquiries to the local police department by phone and via email, our contact is Omar Lopez and his contact information is below.

During the latest city council meeting on September 12th, City Council voiced concern that there are 35 protest cards regarding our application versus the two individuals who spoke on our behalf. The majority of our nearest neighbors do not have any concerns about our planned short-term rental. We have spoken to 3 of our immediate neighbors and they want to remain neutral due to potential harassment by our only vocal protester, Robert Fisher, who resides on 1409 Nugget Creek Dr. They have shared with us that Robert has harassed them in the past for church group gatherings and other things.

We have reached to Mr. Fisher, as well, to understand his specific concerns and have not received a reply. His only statement during the various meetings was that the neighborhood is comprised of many retirees. Mr. Fisher has been representing himself as the captain of the neighborhood watch to the neighborhood, planning commission and city council, during the various meetings on our application. We have confirmed with our representative from the Crime Prevention Unit that Helen Moore is the neighborhood watch captain, and not Mr. Fisher. It appears that Mr. Fisher may have different motivation for protesting our application. Mr. Fisher has constructed 3 additional unpermitted structures in his backyard and rents them out, along with various rooms in his house. His protest may relate to competition in the rental market.

The planning department sent out 2 sets of notices to the 500 nearest residents. So a great majority of the nearest residents do not object to our short-term rentals. Of the 35 protest cards, most are duplicates and did not state their reason for protest. We read through the ones that stated their reason for protest and believe that we can mitigate people's concerns.

Some people objected to our house being a rental property in general. As we mentioned, we will be renting this property out since we are not ready to move to the Las Vegas area full time. It is just a matter of whether it will be a long-term or short-term rental. On June 6th, we began renting the property with a 31-day minimum. We prefer the short-term approach to allow us to be able to use the property periodically for our own use. The short-term approach will also allow the property to be owner occupied periodically. With the long-term approach, it will become a rental property full-time and it will be much harder for us to evict bad tenants.

We read complaints of potential noise and drugs in the neighborhood. We do not allow parties and have taken steps to prevent, detect, and resolve potential noise issues in our property. We have exterior video cameras in the front and back to detect additional guests, parties, and potential drug use. We have reached out to our neighborhood watch captain, Helen Moore, and she keeps us updated on the neighborhood and any concerns with the property. We have proven responsive in addressing any concerns Helen has communicated, which is why she is supportive of our application.

We have engaged with our property manager, Justin Novinger, who also manages our long-term multi-unit rental in Las Vegas, to be able to immediately address any issues. We have reached out to Omar Lopez and other contacts at the local police department provided by Helen Moore, to provide our contact information. We have provided our contact information to all of our immediate neighbors.

With regards to parking and traffic, we believe we have enough parking spaces to address potential tenants. Our house is 3 bedrooms and 1,317 square feet and has a two-car garage and a driveway that can accommodate two additional vehicles. We also believe parking and traffic requirements would be the same whether the property is a long-term or short-term rental.

We plan to require a 5-day minimum rental and would be happy to make this a condition of our license. Our target market consists of corporate travelers and families on vacation. Even a 1-week or 10-day minimum would be satisfactory.

Please let us know if there is any additional information we can provide or any actions you want us to undertake to facilitate approval of our short-term rental. Please feel free to reach out to us via e-mail, phone call or letter via the contact information attached.

Again, thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Mark and Chrystal Del Rosario

INVESTMENT COMPANY EXECUTIVES INDICTED FOR $1.5 BILLION PONZI SCHEME

WASHINGTON – The president and chief executive officer and two former Asia-based executives of a Las Vegas investment company were indicted today for their roles in an alleged $1.5 billion Ponzi scheme.

Assistant Attorney General Leslie R. Caldwell of the Justice Department's Criminal Division, U.S. Attorney Daniel G. Bogden of the District of Nevada and Special Agent in Charge

Laura A. Bucheit of the FBI's Las Vegas Division made the announcement.

"The defendants allegedly preyed on thousands of unsuspecting Japanese victims to enrich themselves by operating a billion-plus dollar Ponzi scheme," said Assistant Attorney General Caldwell. "This prosecution shows that the Criminal Division will pursue not only those who victimize American citizens, but also those who use the U.S. as a home base to defraud victims abroad."

"Investment fraud and other financial fraud cases are a high priority for the U.S. Attorney's Office in Nevada," said U.S. Attorney Bogden. "These defendants are accused of using a Nevada corporation to conduct their $1.5 billion fraud scheme and falsely telling thousands of overseas victims that their investments would be safely held and managed by an independent, third-party escrow agent in Nevada. Fraudulent ruses and schemes perpetrated by Nevadans using Nevada corporations and entities will continue to be addressed by this office."

"These indictments are a reminder of the FBI's determination to identify, investigate and bring to justice those who are committing financial crimes against innocent consumers," said Special Agent in Charge Bucheit. "We are appreciative of the continued support we receive from our international, federal, state and local law enforcement partners."

Edwin Fujinaga, 68, of Las Vegas; Junzo Suzuki, 66, of Tokyo; and Paul Suzuki, 36, of Tokyo, were charged in an indictment with eight counts of mail fraud and nine counts of wire fraud. Fujinaga also is charged with three counts of money laundering. The indictment seeks from all three defendants forfeiture of the proceeds from the alleged crimes.

Fujinaga was the president and CEO of Las Vegas-based MRI International Inc. (MRI). Junzo Suzuki previously was MRI's executive vice president for Asia Pacific, and Paul Suzuki previously was the company's general manager for Japan operations. MRI purportedly specialized in "factoring," whereby the company purchased accounts receivable from medical providers at a discount, and then attempted to recover the entire amount, or at least more than the discounted amount, from the debtor.

According to allegations in the indictment, from at least 2009 to 2013, Fujinaga and the Suzukis fraudulently solicited investments from thousands of Japanese residents, and MRI currently owes investors over $1.5 billion. Specifically, the indictment alleges that Fujinaga and the Suzukis promised investors a series of interest payments that would accrue over the life of the investment and that would be paid out along with the face value of the investment at the conclusion of the investments' duration. The defendants allegedly solicited investments by, among other things, promising investors that their investments would be used only for the purchase of medical accounts receivable (MARS) and by representing that investors funds would be managed and safeguarded by an independent third-party escrow company.

The indictment further alleges that MRI operated as a Ponzi scheme, wherein the defendants used new investors' money to pay prior investors' maturing investments. According to the indictment, the defendants also allegedly used investors' funds for purposes other than the purchase of MARS, including paying themselves sales commissions, subsidizing gambling habits, funding personal travel by private jet, and other personal expenses.

The charges contained in an indictment are merely accusations. A defendant is presumed innocent until and unless proven guilty.

This case is being investigated by the FBI's Las Vegas Division. Significant assistance was provided by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, the Criminal Division's Office of International Affairs and Japanese authorities. This case is being prosecuted by Assistant Chief Albert B. Stieglitz Jr. and Trial Attorney Melissa Aoyagi of the Criminal Division's Fraud Section and First Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven W. Myhre of the District of Nevada.

A Plan to Raise the Caps Without Breaking the Bank

Read the paper.

Due to the large temporary increase in discretionary spending levels for Fiscal Years 2018 and 2019 in the Bi Act of 2018, spending is projected to fall by 10 percent ($126 billion) next year, returning to the sequester-leve the 2011 Budget Control Act. Unfortunately, existing proposals to avoid these cuts would cost roughly $350 b years – twice as much as simply repealing the sequester – and add about $2 trillion to projected debt levels decade.

Debt is already on an unsustainable path, and policymakers should not worsen the situation by lifting discreti to record levels without offsets. Instead, policymakers should chart a reasonable and responsible path fo spending through a new multi-year cap regime that is fully offset with mandatory spending reductio revenue.

There are many options available to offset these costs, including numerous policies put forward by Presid President Obama, or both (see appendices). In this paper, we present an illustrative plan based on policies v appeal.

Our illustrative plan would:

1. Increase the caps through a two-year spending freeze at FY 2019 levels, at a cost of roughly $2 ten years.
2. Offset the cap deal with bipartisan deficit reduction, including $75 billion each in spending cuts, t offsetting receipts.
3. Extend the caps through 2029 and offset the cost. We suggest freezing spending through 2023, inflation thereafter, and enacting $350 billion in bipartisan health reforms and fixes to the 2017 t
4. Improve the integrity of the caps and facilitate future budget deals by placing limits on tactics to above the spending caps and formalize a process to offset future cap increases with alternative s

In addition to setting discretionary spending levels for at least FY 2020, policymakers must raise or suspend t avoid the threat of a potentially catastrophic default. Rather than simply enacting a one-time increase, we pro the debt limit with a new process to limit debt through a series of fiscal targets.

Importantly, this plan is an illustrative example of responsible action and does not provide the definitive roadr spending levels policymakers choose, they must offset the cost to prevent a bad fiscal situation from beco trillion in debt over the decade. Neither outcome is acceptable.

The Cost of Current Policy

The Bipartisan Budget Act (BBA) of 2018 increased spending by 16 percent between 2017 and 2019 but al

Since 2012, discretionary spending levels have been set through the Budget Control Act (BCA) of 2011, whi defense and non-defense discretionary spending caps that both parties saw as reasonable. Those caps we roughly $90 billion per year to 'sequester levels' after a broader debt reduction plan failed to materialize. Betw 2017, policymakers increased caps to between these two levels, offsetting the cost above sequester

Unfortunately, lawmakers broke this trend in the BBA 2018, increasing the discretionary caps by $153 billion i $62 billion more than simply reversing the sequester – and bringing discretionary spending to near-record troubling, they failed to offset the cost, making future generations pay for it by adding it to the nationa

Some lawmakers want to continue this practice by increasing spending levels in 2020 and 2021 to above
Because the current caps end after 2021, the Congressional Budget Office (CBO) will assume discretionary s

A Realistic and Responsible Path Forward

Rather than enacting a massive spending increase without offsets or allowing an abrupt reduction in military domestic government services, policymakers should aim to strike a balance that ensures adequate spending add to the debt. The best approach would be to establish a new set of caps over the next decade to smooth from current levels of spending to levels policymakers could more easily pay for.

Policymakers could select several paths to achieve this goal. For example, growing current spending levels would add about $2 trillion in projected debt, while enacting a two-year spending freeze at current levels or r BCA pre-sequester caps would cost about $1 trillion. Extending that freeze for four years would cost $575 extending it for six years would cost $275 billion – saving money in the second half of the decad

In each case, the first two years represent the direct cost (over a decade) whereas the next eight years repres cost imposed by CBO's baseline assumption. The direct cost of growing the caps with inflation over the nex about $350 billion, whereas the cost of freezing spending for the next two to six years is about $225

While policymakers should set caps for the next decade, they could focus their efforts on setting achievable le two years and then set placeholder caps that could be adjusted in future budget agreements.

In any case, lawmakers must put forward sufficient offsets to cover the full ten-year cost of their proposed in these offsets do not need to cover all costs in the first year, they should pay for the new spending within a dec deficits over time by tackling the long-term growth of mandatory spending and lack of sufficient reve

The appendices of this paper include two tables of offsets with potential for bipartisan support.

An Illustrative Plan To Raise the Caps Without Breaking the Bank

While there is not one single correct way to responsibly raise discretionary spending caps, we suggest an illus would do the following:

1. Increase current law caps through a two-year spending freeze at current levels
2. Offset the cap deal with bipartisan deficit reduction
3. Extend the caps through 2029 and offset the cost
4. Improve the integrity of the caps and facilitate future budget deals

Increase the caps through a two-year spending freeze

To prevent the 10 percent funding cliff called for under current law, we recommend freezing spending at 201 least the next two years. This increase would have a direct cost of about $225 billion, compared to $350 billi grows with inflation.

Importantly, a two-year freeze would still leave 2021 appropriations 16 percent above 2017 levels in nominal t higher in real terms, and about the same size as a share of GDP. Spending would be about 9 percent higher t caps and 1 percent above the pre-sequester caps agreed to on a bipartisan basis in the BCA.

At the same time, a two-year freeze would erode the extremely high real levels of defense and non-defens appropriated over the past two years, reducing them from near their record to levels more consistent with re would also force appropriators to identify efficiencies and targeted spending cuts rather than continue to spe each year.

Offset the cap deal with bipartisan deficit reduction

The $225 billion cost of a two-year spending freeze could be offset with policies that have bipartisan support, appear in budget proposals put forward both by President Trump and former President Obama. While lawmak any combination of mandatory spending and revenue adjustments they choose, our illustrative plan suggests $ revenue, $75 billion in spending reductions, and $75 billion in offsetting receipts, such as premiums and

On the revenue side, we suggest policies proposed by Presidents Trump and Obama to reduce the tax gap – between taxes owed and taxes paid – mainly by increasing tax enforcement funding for the Internal Revenue We also suggest policies both have supported to extend excise taxes for oil spill liability and nuclear waste cl we suggest closing loopholes that allow earned income to be classified as lower-taxed capital gains or busi

On the spending side, we propose a number of bipartisan policies to reduce health care spending, including increase the availability of low-cost generic prescription drugs, limit out-of-network surprise billing, and close allows hospital-owned physician clinics to receive higher Medicare payments than physician-owned clinics. I suggest extending the mandatory spending sequester, which reduces Medicare and other spending through expires. Lastly, we suggest adopting some modest proposals from President Trump's latest budget to reduce and overpayments throughout government and limiting farm subsidies, mainly for higher earners

The largest offsetting receipts in our illustrative proposal come from extending the current freeze on the incom Medicare means-tested premiums, which expires after this year, for two years, slightly increasing the number beneficiaries who pay higher premiums. We also suggest extending and increasing customs fees and Transpo Administration (TSA) fees; increasing premiums for the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (PBGC), Fan Freddie Mac; increasing food safety user fees; selling and charging user fees for spectrum; and enacting a n small proposals.

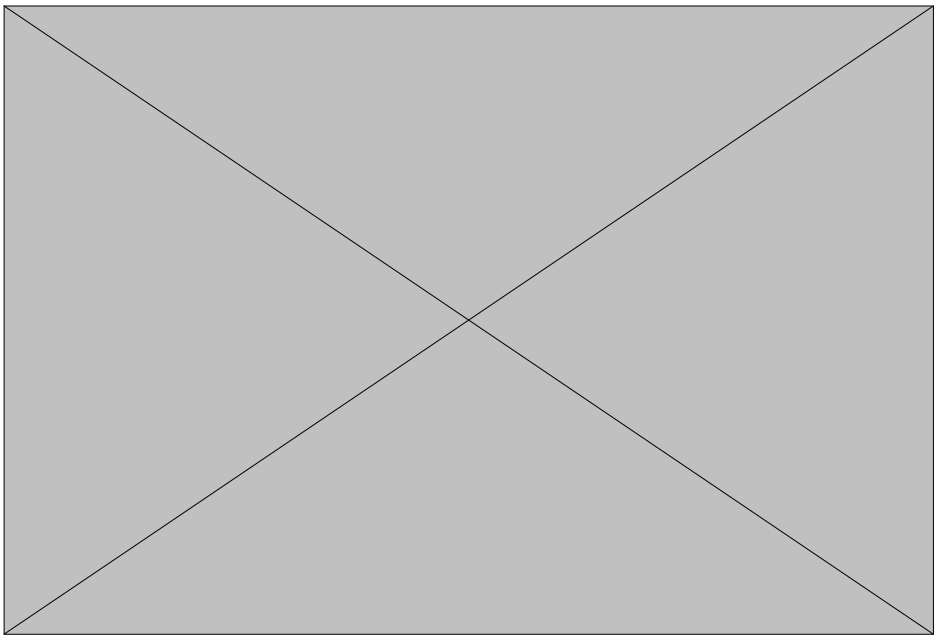
Our unsustainable fiscal outlook requires long-term discipline throughout the budget. The discretionary spendi be extended at least through 2029 at a level that is both responsible and achievable, and any increases rela current law projections should be offset with changes to mandatory spending and/or revenue.

Our illustrative plan assumes the suggested spending freeze will continue through 2023, bringing discretion levels about halfway between pre-sequester and post-sequester levels, which is where they were every year and 2017. Doing so would cost an additional $350 billion through 2029 ($575 billion in total spending increas $45 billion in 2029. Lawmakers could further increase spending so long as they offset the increase with othe revenue adjustments.



We suggest three sources to cover the $350 billion cost. First, our illustrative plan would reduce Medicare sp acute care and bad debts as proposed by both President Trump and President Obama.

Second, our illustrative plan would reverse a recent rule that requires drug rebates in Medicare Part D and Me care to be passed directly to consumers; in its place, the plan would enact alternative reforms to reduce Part D individuals and the government. These reforms include a hard cap on out-of-pocket spending – proposed by P – and changes to the program's low-income subsidy (LIS) program – proposed by President Obama – to enc of low-cost generic drugs.

Finally, our illustrative plan would improve the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act (TCJA) by replacing a scheduled am research costs that could slow economic growth (and is unlikely to be allowed to occur) with a limit on the deductibility of state and local taxes (SALT). The TCJA already caps the SALT deduction for individuals at $1 change would promote parity and reduce possible gaming under current law.

Improve the integrity of the caps and facilitate future budget deals

In addition to increasing and extending the caps, policymakers should strengthen them. That means estab guidelines and requirements for discretionary spending not subject to the caps, such as Overseas Contingen (OCO), disaster relief, or emergency spending. Cap exceptions should be limited and clearly defined in orde fiscal discipline and transparency.

Lawmakers should explicitly cap OCO spending for future years, phase out the ability of appropriations to r changes in mandatory spending programs (CHIMPs) that allow discretionary spending to increase without ac mandatory spending, and create new offset rules to require disaster costs be paid for over some perioc

Lastly, lawmakers should consider designing an explicit process – either through pay-as-you-go rules (PAY regime – to allow future lawmakers to raise discretionary caps in exchange for offsetting revenue or mandatory current process is ad hoc and, even when consistent with the spirit of the law, is in violation of current budge must be waived to even allow for a responsible budget deal.

An Illustrative Framework to Replace the Debt Limit

Estimates from CBO and the Bipartisan Policy Center (BPC) find that Congress will need to increase or suspe debt limit by October or early November of 2019 or else default on some of the country's obligations. Such a result in economic catastrophe, and even coming close to default could shake markets. Policymakers must th the debt limit sooner rather than later; they are likely to do so in combination with a budget cap de

Rather than simply increasing or suspending the debt limit, we suggest reforming it. Today's statutory debt lir numerous well-known defects that become clearer each year. In addition, the debt limit actually does little to c debt from growing unsustainably relative to the economy – except by serving as a reminder for policymakers

We therefore suggest replacing the debt limit with a series of new fiscal targets. Unlike the current debt limit, w nominal gross debt, these fiscal targets should be economically meaningful and based on fiscal goals that bot to. These could be debt-to-GDP targets focused on stabilizing the debt ratio, or they could be deficit targets transition to structural primary balance (current spending less than current revenue, excluding net interest) w put debt on a downward path so long as interest rates remain below the growth rate.

In addition to annual targets, lawmakers could consider long-term targets designed to limit future debt growth they could target reductions in projected debt at some point in the future, narrowing the long-term fiscal gap, country's net liabilities.

Policymakers should include a process to facilitate deficit reduction in order to achieve these targets, whic process similar to budget reconciliation, a requirement to vote on presidential recommendations, a commissio something else.

They should also include enforcement. For example, failure to achieve fiscal targets could result in a freeze o discretionary cap levels as well as mandatory spending and revenue provisions. The more these adjustment modifications to current policy rather than across-the-board cuts, the more likely they are to wor

Fiscal targets could also be encouraged and enforced by making debt limit repeal conditional on achieving th the event targets are missed, lawmakers would have to vote explicitly in support of increasing the deb

Conclusion

It would be highly disruptive to allow defense and non-defense discretionary spending to fall by 10 percent levels, and it would be disastrous to breach the debt limit. However, the need to avoid a spending cliff and rais should not be an excuse to add trillions of dollars to the national debt.

Current discretionary spending levels are already at near record-highs, and continuing to grow them at their would be the equivalent of lifting the sequester twice over. Lawmakers should instead transition to more rea affordable levels of spending and more importantly should fully offset the cost by addressing the growth of spending and raising more revenue.

Lawmakers should also reform or replace the debt ceiling with a mechanism that will better control rising deb the economy without threatening the full faith and credit of the U.S. government.

Our illustrative plan would responsibly address the pending funding cliff by freezing spending at 2019 levels extending caps through 2029, and paying for the cost of these proposals through mix of spending and revenu enjoy bipartisan support. In the appendix to this paper, we also put forward alternative options to offset a new Additionally, we propose to improve the integrity of the caps and facilitate future budget deals through a variet budget rules.

This paper also puts forward an illustrative framework to replace the debt limit with a new process that would a more meaningfully limit debt through a series of fiscal targets and a process to achieve those targ

While these plans are illustrative, they show a responsible path forward. Whatever discretionary spending leve agree to, their cost must be offset to prevent our unsustainable fiscal outlook from becoming wor

Issue 201 – July 2, 2019

Dear Friends and Colleagues,

This week, we're taking another look back at one of my earliest newsletters, it's from December 2015. Back then, we spent a lot of time thinking about the type of students we wanted. They needed to be bright and inquisitive with elite GPA's and strong MCAT scores. But just as importantly, we were looking for students who showed some "fire in their bellies." In other words, young people who may have faced adversity and battled through it. On top of all that, they needed to have strong ties to Nevada. Now, for a while, we were afraid of not being able to find enough outstanding students who fit the bill. But you know what, so far we've done it, and I couldn't be happier with our 120...and soon to be 180 students. Each one is uniquely talented, and brings something special to the school. When our students work in small groups, which they often do, you can see the magic happen. They're challenging their classmates, while supporting each other through the sometimes difficult grind that is medical school.

THE EARLY DAYS: IMAGINING THE UNLV SCHOOL OF MEDICINE STUDENT

UNLV School of Medicine students pose for a photo inside a classroom at the Shadow Lane Campus. Thoughtful planning about the "type" of student the school was looking for has paid off. Members of the first three classes of students are bright, come from diverse backgrounds, and are either from Nevada or have very strong ties to the area.

Newsletter From December 8th, 2015

When we submitted our accreditation documents, we had to identify the type of students we want in our program. What are their values and personal characteristics? What kind of future physician leaders do we want to graduate?

Samuel Parrish, MD, Senior Associate Dean for Student Affairs and Admissions led this effort. He has overseen similar efforts for two other medical schools -- Drexel College of Medicine and Quinnipiac School of Medicine.

Dr. Parrish and his team, composed of UNLV faculty and University of Nevada School of Medicine faculty, along with community members, shaped our student admissions process with this premise -- We want outstanding students, from diverse backgrounds and experiences, who demonstrate personal qualities of community activism, leadership, perseverance, resiliency, optimism, and dedication to exemplary patient care; and who will stay in Nevada to take care of Nevadans.

How will we find these students?

All students who want to attend medical school in the U.S. apply through the American Medical College Application System (AMCAS). When students apply through AMCAS they must choose which schools they would like to attend. Medical schools then evaluate the students who select their programs. Next, the medical schools send a secondary application to the students who meet their qualifications for an interview.

Students who want to attend the UNLV School of Medicine will go through the same process. The only exception is that we will give every Nevada student who applies and who meets our basic requirements an interview. In addition, students with strong ties to the state will receive an interview. We also will consider older students who have decided to go into medicine, and first generation college students who often prefer to be near their families.

Our scholarship program will help us attract outstanding students. Matching each student with their scholarship donor will help our students create a long and lasting bond with the incredible people of this community. We believe requiring each student to complete at least 400 hours of community service also will help them become more rooted in our community – especially when they see the impact they can make. And lastly, since our medical school is community based, it provides our students with many opportunities to build relationships with patients, physicians, health care teams, and hospital systems across Southern Nevada.

We are working hard to build more residency and fellowship programs in Las Vegas in all the needed specialties so students don't have to leave Nevada to finish their education. I personally can't wait to meet our charter class of 60 students. It's going to be a very rewarding day.

EXPERT ANALYSIS

Beware Unintended Consequences Of Class Action Reform

The U.S. House of Representatives currently has before it a bill — H.R. 985 — intended to reduce abusive class action and mass tort practices that undermine the integrity of the legal system. Class action litigation does need reform, but some features of this legislation could perpetuate existing problems and create new ones, say Anthony Anscombe and Mary Beth Buckley of Sedgwick LLP.

Assessing Likelihood Of Survival For SEC Pay Ratio Rule

Preliminary steps taken thus far by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission with respect to its final pay ratio rule may be seen as a setup for later action that could scale back or even totally scuttle a number of major policy initiatives that had been undertaken by the Obama administration, say Andrew Oringer and Aryeh Zuber of Dechert LLP.

Courts Should Act Broadly In Favor Of Claim Assignability

The Supreme Courts of Nebraska and New Jersey have recently joined the majority of U.S. jurisdictions in holding that the proper balancing of public policy concerns weighs against enforcement of nonassignment clauses, but these two decisions also reveal a schism in the majority position that should be addressed, say Leonard Powell and Brian Scarbrough of Jenner & Block LLP.

ADA Compliance For Financial Cos. In The Crosshairs

Through its enforcement actions, the Justice Department has clearly taken the position that Title III of the Americans with Disabilities Act covers access to websites, online tools and mobile apps for public accommodations. Eliminating The Accredited Investor Concept Is Problematic

While Michael Piwowar, acting chairman of the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, may view defining accredited investor as "a line-drawing exercise

DHHS Framework for Health Template 11-21-18jk_clean copy.docx

Good morning,

For those who were not able to attend our meeting this morning, I have some homework.

The attached document represents a new vision for the provision of healthcare in Nevada. I am working with DHHS on fine-tuning the document prior to it moving forward. This represents several months of meetings to influence how the state (DHHS) works with our most vulnerable populations as it relates to providing health and mental health care.

I need your feedback. If you, or your staff, could look at this and provide me feedback. I don't need expert health policy feedback - but feedback about what changes need to take place in order for your clients to receive greater access to services.

On December 4 (Time TBD), I will be facilitating a roundtable discussion with DHHS to solidify our feedback for the proposed changes.

I will also keep everyone updated on our work with DHHS and RTC funding.

DRAFT

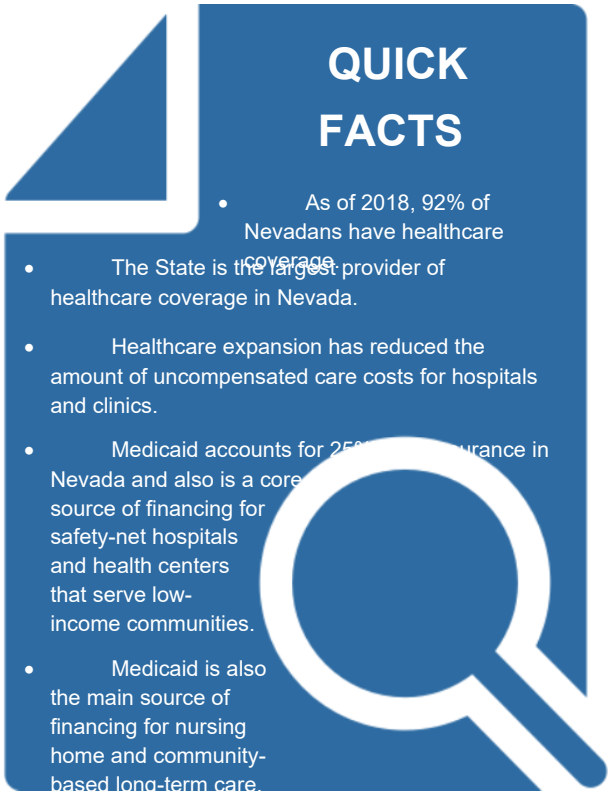
The Nevada Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS) promotes the health and well-being of its residents through the delivery or facilitation of a multitude of essential services to ensure families are strengthened, public health is protected, and individuals achieve their highest level of self-sufficiency.

A key strategy in achieving these goals is through the state's role as a funder, regulator and direct service provider within the healthcare system.

Since Medicaid expansion, the healthcare system has undergone the beginning phases of a healthcare transformation. For the first time, the majority of residents have insurance coverage either through an employer, Nevada Health Link, Medicare, or Medicaid. Implementation of healthcare expansion saw the number of Nevadan's insured through Medicaid increase from approximately 230,000 to nearly 700,000 in the years between 2014 and 2018.

While Nevada has made gains in healthcare coverage, it now needs to focus on the infrastructure needed to ensure universal access and high quality care. Furthermore, the Nevada healthcare system must mature in response to the changing landscape of healthcare in the state. Community partners now play a greater role than ever before. In addition, the state continues to refine its roles and structure to better align with a healthcare system for the future.

DRAFT



The state, as a primary driver for the healthcare system, needs to create a Healthcare Framework – a statewide initiative supporting local ownership of healthcare delivery on the premise that change and improvement is possible through the evaluation of needs, establishment of clear outcomes and the measurement of results.

Nevada intends to build its framework utilizing lessons learned from other states who have gone through a similar transformation, reorganizing and modernizing to better meet the changing needs of Nevada's healthcare system.

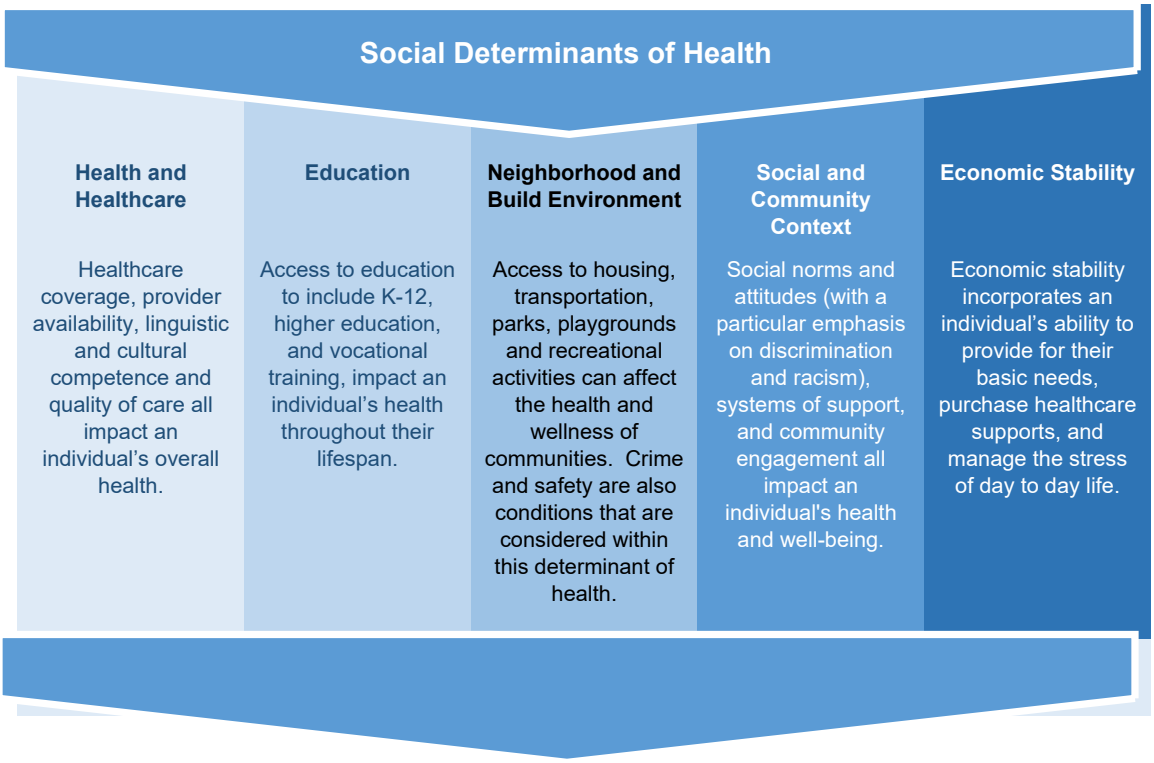
Developing a framework for health requires a fundamental understanding of the social determinants that impact overall health and well-being. For that reason, a brief summary of the social determinants of health is provided below, as it will serve as the foundation for the healthcare framework in Nevada.

The Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) define social determinants of health as the "circumstances in which people are born, grow up, live, work and age." In addition, it also includes the systems in place to offer healthcare and services to a community. Each determinant is described in the graphic below.



"Inequalities in people's health are forged through the processes which maintain socio-economic inequalities in and across their lives." (Graham, 2007) While there may be many treatments available for a particular disease, not everyone with the same diagnosis will likely have the same access to treatment. Many factors may contribute to access to treatment, but the most prominent determinant of treatment access is wealth. While a person's income, may not have a direct correlation to how healthy they are, links between poverty and health have long been established. (Graham, 2007) Often those living in poverty have multiple socioeconomic determinants that contribute to poor health including lack of education, poor nutrition, and inadequate access to preventative care.

While public health systems have long addressed components of social determinants of health, such as healthy housing and safe workplace conditions, much of the focus in the past century has been on disease prevention (Krisberg, 2016). This changed approximately twenty years ago when the World Health Organization released "Health Equity through Action on the Social Determinants of Health" in which it called for a universal response to closing the health gap within a generation. Recommendations from the report call for:

- Improved daily living conditions
- Addressing the inequitable distribution of power, money and resources
- Measuring and understanding the problem and assessing the impact of action

DRAFT

The World Health Organization further asserts that the conditions that comprise social determinants of health are shaped by a wider set of forces such as economics, social policies, and politics. For this reason, Nevada recognizes the need to establish a healthcare framework that is rooted in an understanding of and responsive to the social determinants of health.

There are many positives for Nevada as the healthcare system evolves. In the last 10 years, wages earned from jobs in the healthcare sector in Nevada have grown from $4 billion annually to nearly $7 billion annually. In 2016, over 125,000 people were employed in the healthcare industry with an average annual wage of $52,000. Growing access to healthcare provides health and financial security to both those who work in the industry and those who access services.

As healthcare has evolved in Nevada, local providers have played a greater role in serving those that previously did not have healthcare. This has required a partnership between the state and local entities to fund, regulate and ensure that direct services are available. Engaging local stakeholders and providers has been a core strategy for the state in laying a foundation for a new healthcare framework.

The model that the State will use in establishing its Framework for Health is based on the cycle of system design, implementation and evaluation. This model, as demonstrated in the graphic to the right, is an adaptation of the process used in Vermont for its transformed healthcare system. Vermont has the most mature system to date, and has demonstrated early signs of success.

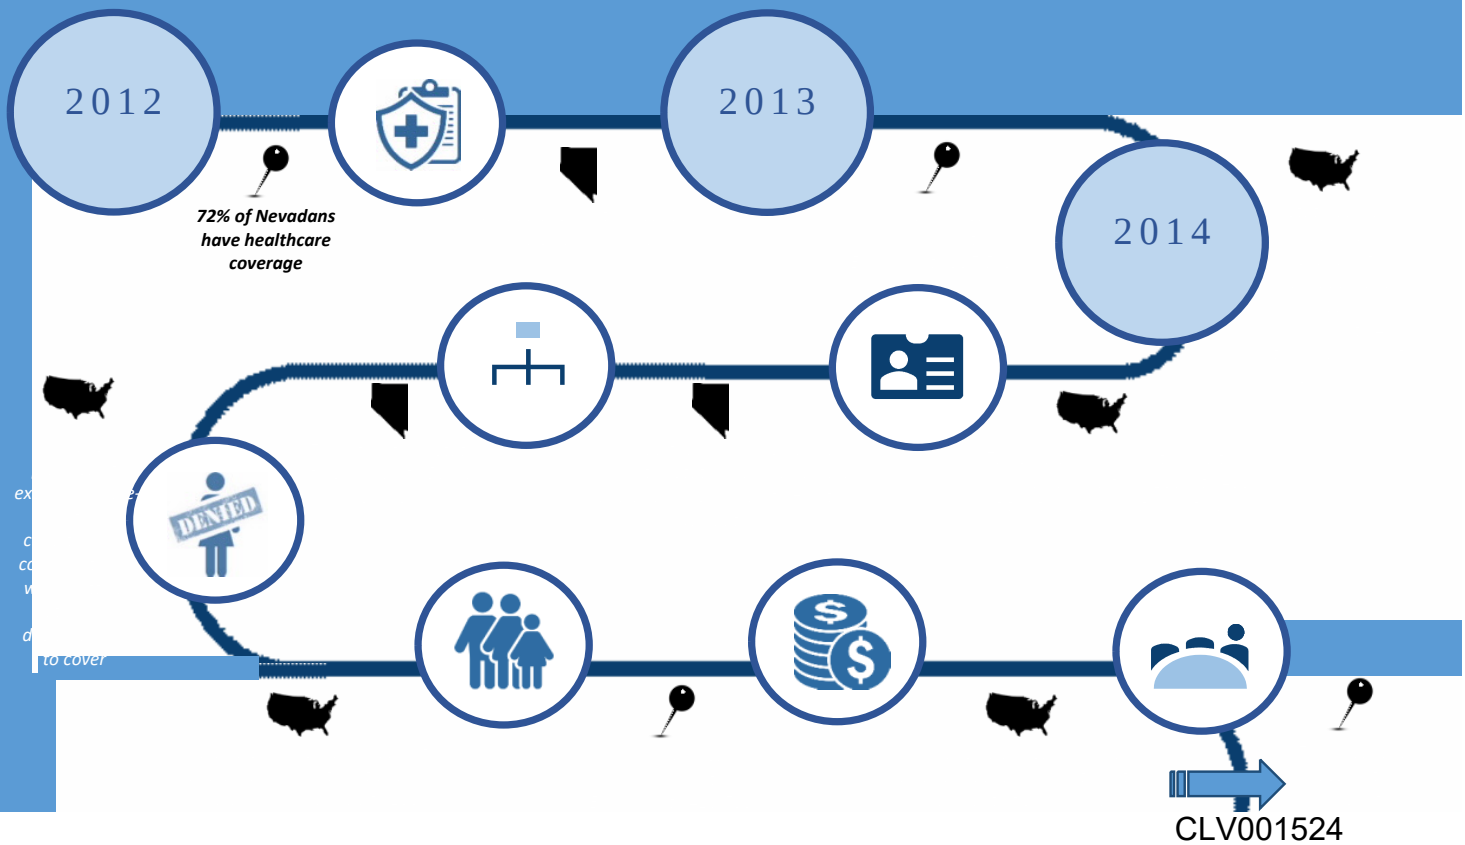
The rest of this document outlines in more detail the evolution of the healthcare system and the framework for the future.

Nation-wide Activities

Nevada Specific Activities

Nevada Related Data Points

This timeline demonstrates the maturation of the health care system in Nevada since Medicaid expansion took place. As the timeline demonstrates, Nevada has made substantial gains in increasing enrollment and healthcare coverage for Nevadans. Unfortunately, the state could not, at the same time, invest in the infrastructure needed to support the health care system in responding to the increase in the service population.

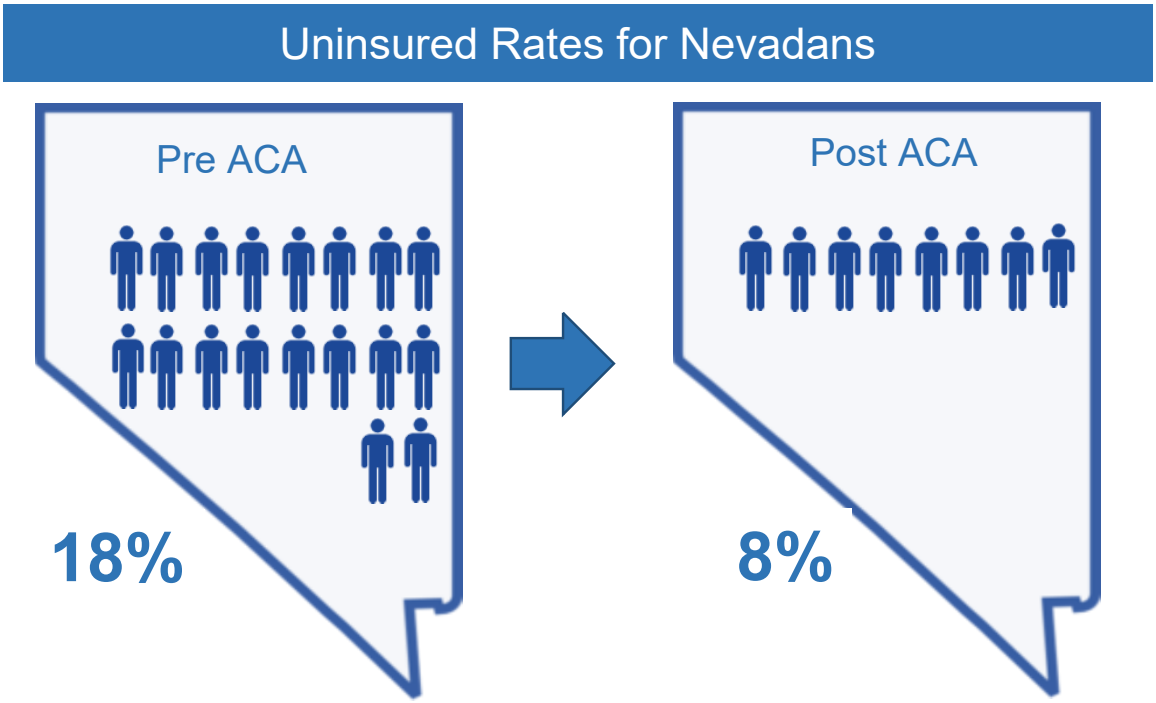


The Affordable Care Act (ACA) was an ambitious redesign of healthcare. It developed mechanisms to broaden coverage to the millions of Americans who were uninsured while weaving in consumer safeguards such as protection for pre-existing conditions. While not perfect, the ACA provided a significant opportunity to broaden access to healthcare for Nevadans who had gone uninsured and those unable to access healthcare. In December of 2012, Governor Sandoval, opted to expand Medicaid in Nevada and thus ushered in a multi-year effort to ensure that all who qualified had some form of coverage.

Growth in Coverage

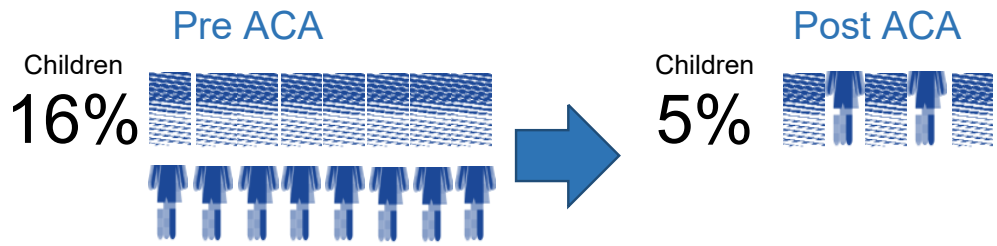
The ACA ensured an expansion of coverage for all Nevadans, as well as for special populations to include children, those living in rural areas, and those within specific racial/ethnic categories.

Statewide, the total uninsured rate is approximately 8%. Expanded Medicaid and CHIP have increased access to healthcare for more than 200,000 Nevadans. The Silver State Exchange has provided affordable healthcare for another 90,000 Nevadans.



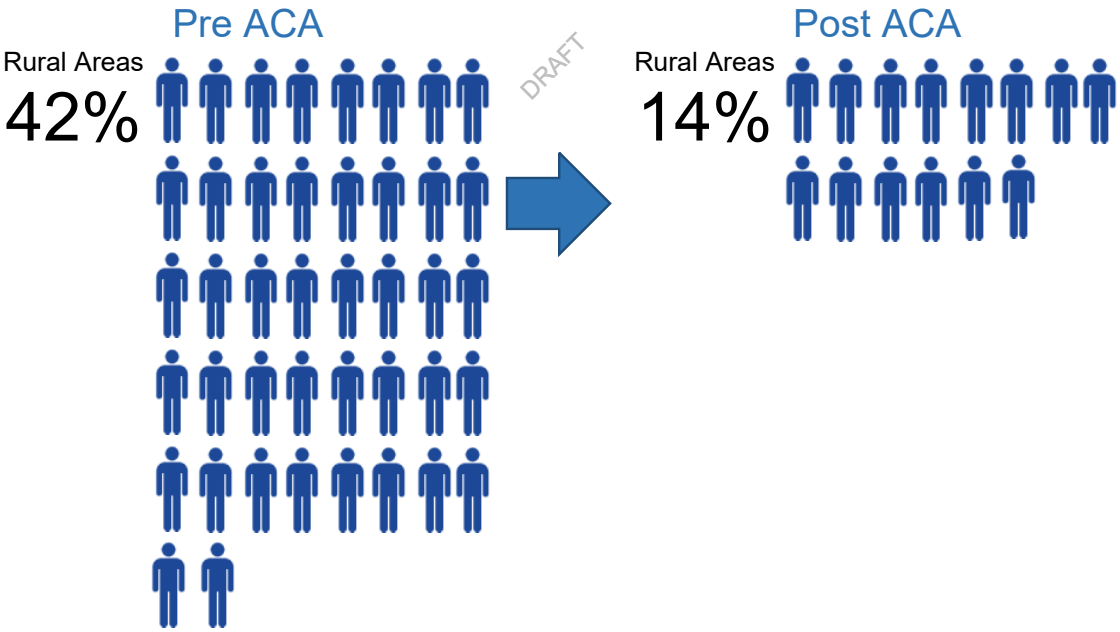
Prior to the implementation of the Affordable Care Act, 16% of children in Nevada were uninsured. In 2016, that number had dropped to 5%. Likewise, 24% of adults were uninsured and that number has dropped to 12%.

Uninsured Rates for Children



Of particular importance, the ACA provided significant coverage gains for rural areas. In Nevada, the estimated rate of uninsured in rural areas is 14%, which is half that of similar areas in non-expansion states.

Uninsured Rates in Rural Areas



Most states who expanded Medicaid saw a decline of 18 percentage points in the uninsured rate of people living in rural parts of the state. In Nevada, the decline was even more dramatic dropping from 42% to 14%, a 28 percentage point decline.

Increases in insurance coverage were not universal across all groups. Hispanics in Nevada saw a significant decrease in uninsured rates, dropping from 34% in 2013 to 19% in 2016.

DRAFT

The deliberate and strategic focus on enrollment demonstrated that Nevada can effect change on a large scale that spans the entire system. Now that change needs to extend to the delivery and planning of healthcare services.

The ACA sought to create a continuum of Healthcare coverage. On one end of the continuum is Medicaid with Medicare on the far-end. Employer coverage and purchasable coverage on the exchange occupies the middle portion of the continuum largely separated by transitions based on income and age. For example, people who earn less than 138% of the Federal Poverty Level (FPL), about $34,000 for a family of four, qualify for Medicaid. If you earn more than 138% of the FPL and your employer does not provide coverage you can purchase coverage on the exchange. At age 65, consumers transition to Medicare regardless of income level or employer coverage.

Healthcare is largely managed the same way, regardless of who ultimately pays for coverage. Medicare and Medicaid largely manage their coverage through a system of Managed Care Organizations (MCO's). Systems described as Fee-for-Service (FFS) exist in both Medicare and Medicaid in order to ensure coverage in rural areas or sometimes for specialized populations. This is very similar to the commercial market where employers and employees can select a Health Management Organization (HMO) or Preferred Provider Organization (PPO) model of coverage.

The HMO model is similar to the MCO model under Medicaid and Medicare where healthcare services are offered and managed by an insurer. The FFS or PPO model are similar as well in that the services are not actively managed by an insurer and the individual has to manage their own care using a list of approved providers. Some individuals and providers believe that the FFS/PPO model of care provides for more flexibility and choice. However, that flexibility and choice often come at the cost of additional services and assistance provided in the HMO/MCO models.

Regardless of insurer coverage or payer source, the provider system contains a group of providers who form the healthcare safety net. These providers serve all who come to them regardless of ability to pay. The most common among these providers are hospitals, who cannot refuse emergency services to anyone. However, there are other non-emergency providers such as Federally Qualified Health Centers (FQHC's) and Certified Community Behavioral Health Clinics (CCBHC's). These clinics are community-based healthcare and behavioral healthcare providers that accept all patients regardless of ability to pay or insurance coverage. They, along with the hospital system, provide the safety net and foundation of the healthcare service system. Since the ACA, the number of FQHC's has grown from two to seven.

<Insert Graphic>

Yet, even with these essential providers Nevada continues to struggle with system capacity. Much of the state is a Health Professional Shortage Area (HPSA) and all of the state is a Behavioral Health Professional Shortage Area. These are federal designations that measure the capacity of an area to serve the population based on the number of license practitioners located in the same area.

In order to combat these shortages, Nevada has implemented some system changes that have had great success. For example, Nevada expanded the role of Advanced Practice Registered Nurses (APRN's) to include independent practice. This expansion of role in law permits them to practice without requiring supervision of a physician. The number of APRN's has grown in Nevada to more than 1,500 and they continue to be a core expansion of primary care services in underserved areas.

Other reform initiatives look at the expansion of other profession types to fulfill discrete healthcare needs. One such example is a Community Health Worker. Medicaid adherence or adherence to any treatment regime is very important to improving and maintaining the health of individuals with chronic conditions. However, it is not necessary for doctors or nurses to perform this role. Trained Community Health Workers have been utilized to make these connections with individuals in care and provide the assistance they need to maintain their health. In this way, the health system extends the roles that can provide support.

Technology has also been a source of innovation and extension within the healthcare system. Using telehealth, practitioners in urban areas can provide healthcare consultation to patients and providers in remote areas. Through telehealth a child psychiatrist in Las Vegas can have a counseling session with an adolescent in Ely. Or a pain management doctor in Reno can consult with a primary care doctor in Battle Mountain on the best course of treatment for a patient.

Yet even with these innovations and growth in enrollment there are still areas in Nevada that are without a FQHC or a CCBHC. While expansion of Medicaid and the reduction in uninsured has resulted in healthier rural and critical access hospitals, there are still communities who lack any type of local emergency care or primary care clinics. This is not a dilemma relegated only to rural areas. Underserved areas are not uncommon in Nevada's urban centers, where swaths of areas have population density and yet have little provider access.

<insert geocode chart of a HPSA in Las Vegas>

Research on Social Determinants of Health indicate that zip code is one the most significant indicators of health outcomes. The needs of communities are shaped by their healthcare concerns, the age of the community, access to providers, income, housing, transportation, and community connectedness. For example, Clark County is a diverse collection of communities sometimes defined by cities within the county and other times loosely defined as the Greater Las Vegas area. The size and diversity of Southern Nevada can at times make the development of a coordinated healthcare system daunting. Yet, through community connections and mechanisms for feedback that utilize the defined communities within the county it is possible to develop service systems that reflect those individual community needs.

DRAFT

Healthcare Costs

Healthcare is critical for financial stability, health, and well-being. In a recent study released in the Journal of Public Economics, the researchers determined that the Affordable Care Act and Medicaid expansion had a positive impact on financial wellbeing. Nevada was one of the states included in the study sample. The researchers determined that financial consequences are severe for uninsured individuals who become seriously ill or injured. The average cost of an inpatient hospital bill was $15,000 and the annual cost of care was $25,000.

In Nevada, healthcare spending has outpaced economic growth, leading to a net decrease in individual's personal finances. In 2016 the annual growth rate for healthcare was 3.6% compared to 2.9% growth in the Nevada's Gross Domestic Product (GDP).

While overall growth in healthcare spending is slowing to more closely match the overall rate of economic growth, out of pocket expenses have not slowed and are a much larger percentage of healthcare expenses. For some time, spending on deductibles and co-insurance has far outpaced wage growth.

In 2016, employer costs for wages had increased 29%, while deductibles paid by employees had increased 176% and co-insurance increased by 67%. This translates to a higher overall percentage of an individual's pay being spent on out of pocket costs related to healthcare.

All of these financial indicators demonstrate that the cost of healthcare is growing and even as it slows, consumers are continuing to shoulder a large portion of out of pocket costs. How the system is funded and grown has an immediate financial impact on all Nevadans, regardless of how they access insurance coverage or care.

Prior to the ACA, a much larger portion of the population was uninsured. The system of healthcare did not necessarily have a dependable payer source for all individuals. This resulted in an unmanaged and disconnected system where people were unsure of where to go to access affordable services and often defaulted to the emergency departments of hospitals. This overuse of emergency departments slowed the growth of comprehensive primary care and relegated healthcare to emergency only events for large swaths of the population who were unable to access preventative care through non-emergency medical check-ups. Regular screenings for things such as pre-diabetes or cancer are critical for early detection and treatment of illnesses that can be devastating to the individual and to the healthcare system.

DRAFT

As stated earlier, the system of insurance coverage now operates on a continuum. Insurance on that continuum is largely managed using an insurer or MCO. This type of coverage is funded utilizing a payment method called a capitated rate or more simply a flat rate this is charged per member per month. This rate is calculated by actuaries who factor in a variety of risk options such as age, historical utilization of services, and prevalence of disease when establishing the cost. This rate is paid to managed care organizations who are then required to provide comprehensive services to every individual served under their plan. The payer program (e.g. Medicaid) can establish the list of required covered services that must be included in the plan and MCO's can add in any services on top that they feel are essential for ensuring healthier outcomes for individuals they insure. For example, an MCO may include additional teeth cleanings for individuals with diabetes whose overall health could be negatively impacted by an oral infection.

The focus of most managed healthcare systems is to improve the health of individuals so that they avoid costly and invasive medical treatments. This shifts the healthcare system away from one of emergency and crisis care to preventative and primary care. By doing so, the cost of the healthcare system should decrease overtime as chronic conditions are managed effectively and the long-term health of the community is improved.

This shift in how healthcare costs are managed is in its early stages in Nevada and in the rest of the country. Historically, costs have been managed by reducing utilization of services. That makes sense in a fee-for-service model where people spend a limited amount of time covered by the program and are generally healthy (e.g. children). Medicare and the aged, blind, and disabled populations served by Medicaid are the exceptions to that rule as they serve people during their most expensive time in their lives when they are more likely to have chronic conditions and when discouraging access to healthcare services can have an immediate and costly impact on the healthcare system.

For example, a high co-pay for insulin can lead to individuals rationing their usage. If that then leads to their diabetes getting out of control it could lead to a hospital stay that could extend into a stay in a skilled nursing facility. The single co-pay or cost of one drug for one patient drives the cost in both Medicare and possibly in Medicaid if the individual requires skilled nursing care not covered by Medicare. As people move in and along the continuum of coverage, the cost control and management policies in one system ripple across all others. The time when healthcare coverage and systems could be managed in isolation of each other is no longer.

Consequences for Nevada

DRAFT

With a high rate of uninsured in Nevada, the first natural area following adoption of the ACA was to focus was on increasing enrollment. Now, increases in enrollment have ensured that most Nevadans have access to healthcare and the focus must shift to effective management of health outcomes, system costs, and quality of services. This shift in purpose requires a different focus and possibly a different skill set then was needed in the past.

Nevada has several systemic or role-driven inefficiencies that hinder the effective use of resources and talent:

- Role Conflict: Direct services, planning, payment, and regulation are currently grouped together.
- Resource Efficiency: Some programs have clinical expertise, resources and grants for shaping whole health initiatives, while other areas tasked with the purchase of healthcare do not have either the policy resources, knowledge of best practices, or clinical expertise.
- Population Based: Some systems are designed to serve an entire population while others only operate a piece which leads to system fragmentation.

Historically, the role of the state in healthcare was to manage enrollment and process claims through the Division of Health Care Finance and Policy which oversees Medicaid. With a relatively small portion of individuals insured, and those limited to specific populations, the state had little control over the broader insurance market. Policies implemented in Medicaid, for example, were contained to the Medicaid population with little incentive for insurers to implement those policies in their commercial market. However, with the expansion of Medicaid, the state is the single largest insurer (refer to State Profile found in the Appendix for supportive data). Medicaid now comprises such a large portion of the overall market that choices and policies implemented in the Medicaid system can positively or negatively impact their broader market. Even without the impact to the commercial market, as the insurer for nearly 700,000 Nevadans, decisions made in the Medicaid system have a far-reaching effect.

At the same time, funding for public health has been limited to federal grants that are often dictated by federal priorities related to specific disease states or prevention strategies. The money can also be very time limited with grant terms ranging between 1 and 3 years. Public health programming has struggled to utilize this funding to create long term health outcome changes. Even when a grant is used to pilot an innovation that has positive health outcomes, there is very little sustainability. This results in an ineffective use of grant funding and frustration within communities and the healthcare system that even when solutions are found they are not necessarily available long term.

Nevada's geography also creates complexity in the healthcare system. With two urban areas located at each end of the state and a rural region that spans over 90,000 square miles the healthcare system must be one that is able to adapt to meet the needs of each community, regardless of size or location. Managing to the needs of the system as if it is a single homogenous population located in the same area has been the historical method yet fails to meet the needs of local communities nor provide for equity in healthcare access. The needs of an aging population in a small rural community may differ significantly from the needs of a younger more diverse urban population which is also likely to differ from a suburban population living adjacent to a larger city.

DRAFT

These points underscore the importance of ensuring the Framework for Healthcare in Nevada addresses complex challenges while continuing to build on the gains made through the expansion of access to healthcare.

The role of the state has been slowly evolving and is reaching the point where resources need to be consolidated and directed into activities to support the system the way it looks now and in the future. States have chosen different methods for reorganizing themselves to meet the new demands of a healthcare system that has become the largest provider of health insurance. System reorganizations have varying levels of success, but they can be a method for redirecting resources and focus to the outcomes the state is seeking to achieve.

In Nevada, the challenge remains to design a system that can both utilize the size of the system and purchasing power to manage costs while also adapting the system to reflect the diverse needs of the population.

The current system is complex and contains so many varying roles that the struggle to focus resources on system change is often thwarted by the urgent need for direct services. The broad change necessary to lay the foundation for managing and maturing the healthcare system requires a direct and systematic concentration of resources and effort. While, healthcare comprises a significant portion of the state budget, the direct service responsibility often drives the urgency of action and allocation of resources. At the same time, the role of regulator can place leadership in tenuous positions where they are regulating the service system they operate and fund.

These issues have been compounded by policies that have restricted the internal growth of needed policy and planning expertise. It has also hindered the growth of leadership. However, there are several actions that can be taken to remediate these issues:

- Reduce Conflicts: Septerate out direct service functions from planning, payment and regulation.
- Create Efficiency: Utilize existing expertise and clinical knowledge to guide healthcare purchasing and implementation.
- Replicate Success: Build on changes that have occurred internal to the state and in other states to implement a system that has demonstrated effectiveness.

Nevada can establish the infrastructure needed to respond to the new healthcare landscape. However, no system can develop in a vacuum separated from the voices and contributions of the local communities the system serves. The infrastructure would be built upon inputs and leadership from communities, providers, and the state.

The Patient Protection Commission would provide oversight for the healthcare system and serve as a guiding body. The Commission would provide direct oversight to the other healthcare related boards such as the Board of Health, the Public Employees Benefit Program Board, the Silver State Health Insurance Exchange Board, and the Medicaid Medical Care Advisory Committee. Other boards such as professional licensing boards for healthcare professions could be included as well.

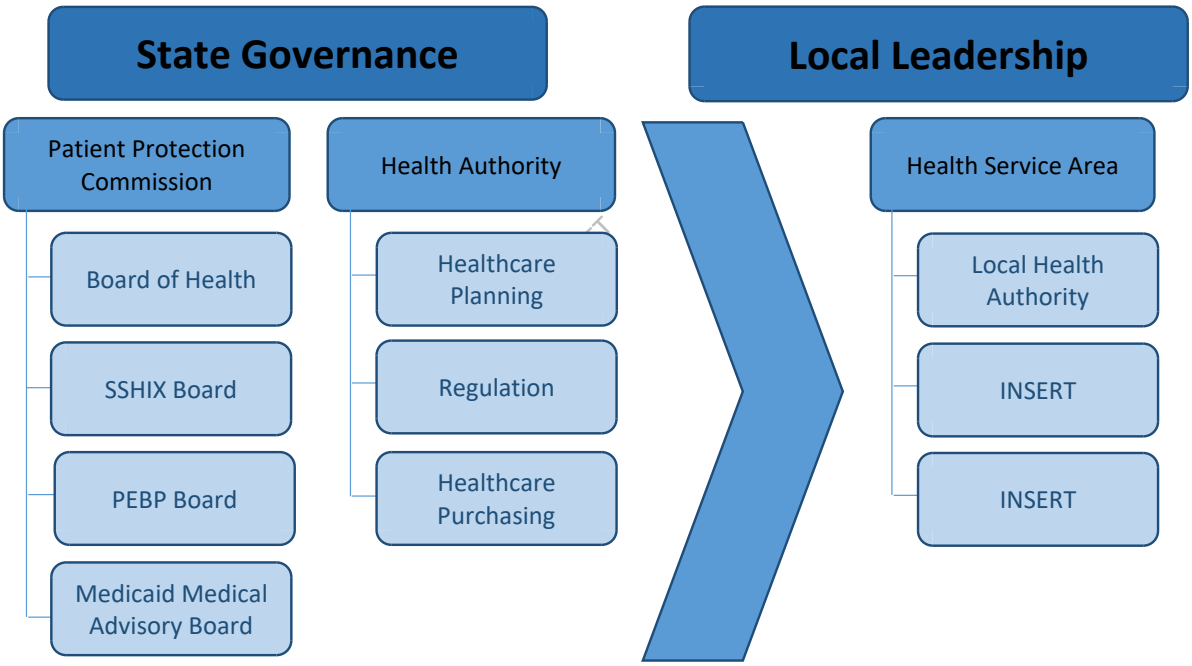
Nevada can form a Health Authority to focus on and manage the healthcare system. The Health Authority would exist as a two-part entity: an advisory board and as a unit of state government. The Health Authority would function as a unit of state government and would include healthcare planning, regulation, and purchasing roles that currently exist in scattered areas throughout the state. The Health Authority would exist separate from the direct service agencies and be guided by the Patient Protection Commission as well as by local regional community boards. The Health Authority would be tasked with developing and implementing healthcare policy that supports the improvement of public health and provides for services that support the health, well-being, and independence of Nevadans. The Health Authority would also be expected to regulate the system of healthcare including healthcare facilities and other functions as required to protect and promote health such as network adequacy and surprise billing.



Community involvement in the system is a vital, but missing part in the current model. The Health Authority will form and support the creation of Health Service Advisory (HSA) groups located in each county. Clark County will have a HSA for each city within the county in order to better reflect the size and complexity of regional needs. The purpose of this design is to allow each community to prioritize services in the target areas that are important to their local community that may not be as urgent in another community. For example, on community may want to prioritize diabetes while another may feel that substance abuse treatment is a greater concern.

Each HSA will be staffed by a state-funded public health staff member tasked with implementing the design principles for the local community. HSA membership should include the stakeholders in that community including local primary care leaders, hospitals, insurers, mental health agencies, aging agencies, housing organizations, and any other community leaders who can help to identify local priorities, goals, and strategies.

The eventual goal of the HSA is to transition into an accountable healthcare community who are responsible for the wellness of the population. As such it is imperative to include integrating of high-quality medical care, mental health and substance abuse services, social services, and public health prevention.

DRAFT

The following are the guiding principles that serve as the assumptions and recommendations that underlie the Nevada Healthcare Framework:

- ✓ Improving health outcomes is the goal of the system. Healthcare coverage is one tool among many used in the process.
- ✓ The State is the largest purchaser of healthcare and can best take advantage of purchasing power and leveraging of resources.
- ✓ Local leadership over the delivery of service in the community can create improved healthcare outcomes for each community and ensure culturally competent service delivery tailored to meet each community's needs.
- ✓ Data is a powerful and effective tool to ensure accountability of the healthcare delivery and to measure the success of policy and funding choices.
- ✓ Each stage of the cycle (design, implementation, evaluation) must be appropriately resourced and supported to achieve the health outcomes identified in each community.

Improving health outcomes requires a population-based approach, the use of evidence-based or clinically appropriate practices, and individualized systems tailored to meet the needs of each community. The targeted areas included in the framework will incorporate the top 5 initial populations selected that reflect the most urgent needs of Nevadans.

DRAFT

These five populations are either specific early intervention points, healthcare cost drivers, or critical services to ensure independence for Nevadans. Women's Health and Children's Health are important intervention points to ensure that people start and remain healthy. Chronic Disease Management is vital for managing long term health and consequently long-term healthcare costs of individuals who have been diagnosed with a chronic disease. Behavioral Health and Substance Abuse as well as Services for Seniors and Persons with Disabilities are incredibly important services needed to ensure that all Nevadans can achieve or maintain independence and inclusion in the communities in which they live.

In designing a framework for the future, three key goals should be the focus for designing, implementing and evaluating system changes to support a new Nevada HealthCare Framework with a focus on the top five priority areas. They include a 12-point plan to create Nevada's Healthcare Framework for the Future:

Improve the Management of Healthcare Costs

1. Bring down the cost of high-priced pharmaceuticals/Create Silver State Scripts
2. End surprise billing
3. Create price and system transparency
4. Protect Medicaid and CHIP

DRAFT

Improve the Implementation of Services

5. Increase access in underserved areas
6. Expand insurance options/Fill coverage gaps for Nevadans
7. Address mental health and substance abuse crisis
8. Expand the use of telehealth
9. Fix doctor and medical professional shortage

Improve Healthcare Planning

10. Use data to drive innovation
11. Protect coverage for pre-existing conditions
12. Improve health outcomes for pregnant women and families with newborns

The Nevada Healthcare Framework needs implementation strategies to drive changes to the new healthcare delivery designs. The implementation strategies need to provide the route to build trusting relationships with a wide range of healthcare providers and community organizations, to convene partners for planning coordinated action, to engage and act in response to community needs, regardless of organization affiliation or funder, and to monitor and measure implementation progress.

These implementation strategies are the structural tools that can then be applied to population health improvement areas highlighted in the design strategies:

- Strategy 1: Use Data for Cost Management, Planning, and Service Delivery
- Strategy 2: Implement Strategies that Support Purchasing Power
- Strategy 3: Enhance Meaningful Regulation of Healthcare Systems
- Strategy 4: Implement Local Feedback for Planning and Accountability

Pieces of this framework exist within the current system. For example, the Office of Analytics within the Department of Health and Human Services has access to a wide variety of data systems that permit the matching and analysis of data from healthcare claims data, disease registries, vital records, child welfare, and the criminal history repository. While there is a large amount of available data the system needs to continue to mature in order to provide comprehensive cost reporting to manage the healthcare system as well as reporting that evaluates the health outcomes and provides system transparency to improve decision making.

While the state is the largest purchaser of healthcare services, they are purchased in isolation of each other and without the opportunity for other non-profit organizations to join with the state in the purchase of shared services or pharmaceuticals. This is a wasted opportunity and an inefficient use of state resources. The pieces to improve coordination and reduce costs do currently exist, however separate they might currently be.

The regulation of healthcare also exists within the system, but there are significant gaps and it is fragmented. For example, there are currently no protections for consumers against surprise billing. The regulation of healthcare facilities lives within the Department of Health and Human Services Division of Public and Behavioral Health. Regulation related to network adequacy is governed separately by the Division of Healthcare Finance and Policy for Medicaid and for the individual market (8% of the insurance market) in the Division of Insurance. This does not provide a seamless method for establishing network adequacy guidelines and many consumer complaints are often related to their inability to access coverage within their community and within a reasonable length of time.

Lastly, the method for local feedback of policy decisions is often relegated to formal public hearings or workshops that are inaccessible and badly advertised. They are also set up in a way that only provides the public to comment on policies that have been developed and does not provide a way for local communities to prioritize the system delivery or to provide feedback that shapes policy. The creation of Regional Behavioral Health Boards provided a method for this localized feedback to impact the system. While not perfect, the feedback from local communities was generally positive and the recommendations made the boards impacted requests in the upcoming budget and legislative session. This demonstrated that local communities clearly want to have more input and control over how services are prioritized and provided.

By utilizing the actions identified earlier (reduce conflicts, create efficiency, and replicate success) Nevada can take immediate actions to implement a new framework for healthcare. Many of the pieces already exist. Nevada has already demonstrated the ability to implement broad and lasting system change. Implementation of the framework is the next step in the evolution of the system. A more detailed implementation plan that contains the first steps is included in the appendix.

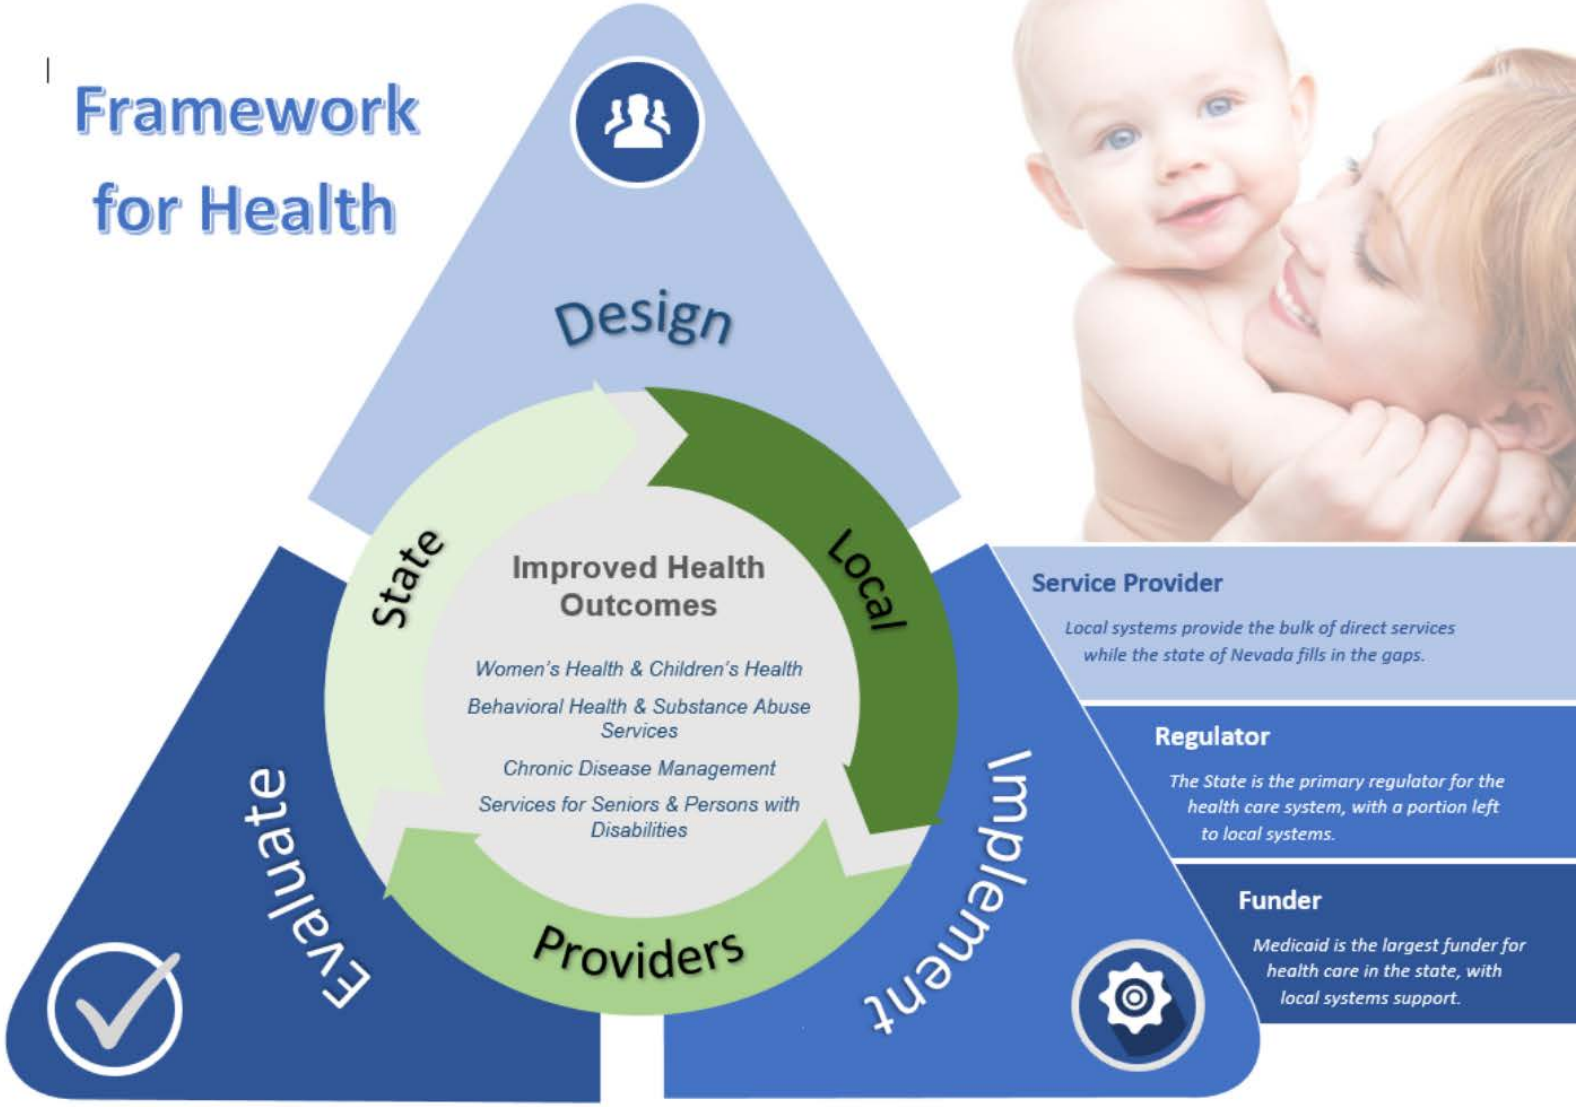
Framework for Health



This section provides a case study on diabetes to illustrate the importance of implementing data driven and health outcome-based decision making. It also illustrates the statewide costs and implications of not addressing critical healthcare needs. It provides an example of one strategy for how the top five priority areas referenced in this report can be addressed.

One lens to view the gains that can be made by implementation of the Framework is a case study on the burden of diabetes and how promoting drug transparency can lessen the burden. This topic area was selected because diabetes is a chronic disease that impacts thousands of Nevadans. The condition is complex and solutions to reduce costs, manage the disease effectively, and prevent future diagnoses requires multiple strategies. There is no one single solution for the state.

Diabetes in Nevada

Diabetes is a disease in which the body does not produce or properly use insulin. Insulin is a hormone that is needed to convert sugar, starches and other food into energy needed for daily life.

DRAFT

Diabetes often goes undiagnosed and complications can include increased risk of heart disease and stroke, kidney failure, and nervous system disease and lower limb amputations.[1]

There are two major types of diabetes. People with type 1 diabetes must take daily insulin injections to survive. Insulin is critical to the management of diabetes as it helps patients control their blood sugar levels. Abnormal levels of glucose in the blood stream over time can cause serious damage to organs, including the eyes and kidneys.[2]

Nine percent of Nevadans have diabetes and 19 percent have prediabetes.

[2] Congressional Diabetes Caucus Insulin Inquiry Whitepaper, 2018

One in four Nevadans with diabetes don't know they have it.

Approximately 10,000 new diabetes diagnoses are made in Nevada annually.

Diabetes Costs

Many patients struggle to afford this lifesaving drug. Insulin prices have increased by approximately 300% in the last decade. Some patients have resorted to rationing and skipping doses, sometimes with tragic consequences. One in four diabetes patients cut back on insulin due to the cost, seriously threatening their health.

The direct cost of diabetes in Nevada is $1.9 billion and the indirect cost is $542 million, totaling $2.42 billion.

Major sources of funding to cover costs associated with diabetes fall into three key areas:

- ✓ 37% is provided by government insurance (Medicaid, Medicare, and the military)
- ✓ 34% if provided by private insurance companies
- ✓ 11% is paid out-of-pocket
- ✓ In Nevada, federal and state combined spending through Medicaid related to diabetes totaled $3.36 billion.

Challenges

There are several challenges individuals face once they are diagnosed with diabetes. The high cost of drugs and testing supplies are one challenge. Consumers have very little control over what medication they can utilize. It is often controlled by their insurer or individual biology that more easily processes one drug over another similar medication. To add to the financial burden, they are also faced with managing a diet that requires higher cost food such as fresh vegetables that can be challenging to purchase on a limited budget.

DRAFT

From a healthcare system perspective, the best way to manage diabetes is to prevent it in the first place. However, people often do not stay with a single insurer for more than 2 years. This complicates the insurer's ability to invest in an individual consumer and manage or prevent the disease long term. Insurers also exercise only limited control over drug pricing. Often, their pricing is managed through a Pharmacy Benefit Manager that gains volume discounts from manufacturers. However, these discounts are not uniform across insurers or even plans within the same insurer.

Drug Transparency Legislation

In 2017, the Nevada Legislature passed Senate Bill 539. The bill allowed Nevada to collect and aggregate drug pricing, compensation, rebate, profit and other information providers by drug manufacturers, pharmacy benefit managers and pharmaceutical representatives.

The law required drug manufacturers to disclose costs, history of drug price increases, reasons for increases and to publicize customer assistance program information.

It also required that pharmacy benefit managers who negotiate rebates in accordance to the prices drug makers establish to disclose what rebates they negotiate with drug manufacturers and what rebates they keep.

The law requires sales representatives to registers with the state of Nevada and provide healthcare providers compensation and sample data.

Nonprofits organizations also were required to disclose funding received from drug companies, pharmacy benefit managers, and health insurers.

The law has assisted DHHS with research and analysis on increasing costs of various mediations used to treat diabetes, and the statewide costs and implications. By increasing transparency in the drug market related to diabetes, Nevada now has tools and data to identify policy changes needed and to protect consumers. It indicates how implementing the Framework on a larger scale can lead to greater gains statewide. For example, even with the limited data collected so far it is clear that volume discounts are critical for managing costs and access to insulin and other medications for treatment. This data helps to inform the policy decision of whether it makes sense for insurers to join with State insurance programs to utilize purchasing power in order to negotiate better pricing and a more complete formulary of drugs for all Nevadans.

Opportunities moving forward

Some opportunities exist at the federal level to change policies and enact reforms through the FDA. However there are some steps that states can take, such as Nevada's Drug Transparency Legislation to promote access to insulin by combatting upward price pressures. By applying the healthcare framework concepts of improving the management of cost, improving service delivery, and improving planning additional improvements can be made. They include:

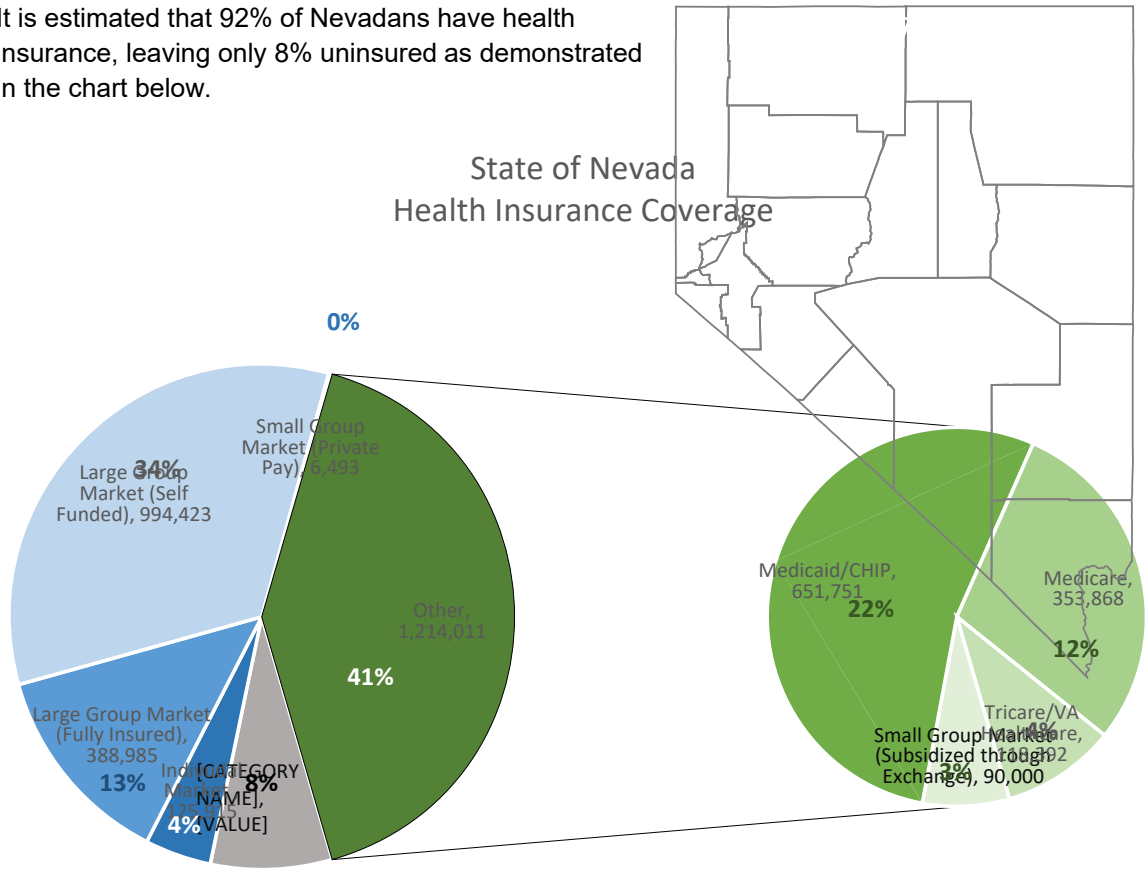
1. Encourage the development and use of purchasing power for lower-cost pharmaceuticals.
2. Expand access to community health workers who are able to work with individuals with diabetes to help them manage their disease and access needed resources.
3. Use data to identify consumers who are pre-diabetic or at-risk of developing diabetes to target interventions that are community based and culturally competent and reduce the disease burden.

State and County Profiles

Nevada State

The State of Nevada has a population of 2,959,801 with the majority of the population living in the metropolitan areas of Clark and Washoe Counties. Nevada covers 110,577 square miles, and is the seventh largest state in the U.S. Nevada saw a 2% increase in the population in 2017 according to U.S. Census data, making it the second fastest growing state in the country.

It is estimated that 92% of Nevadans have health insurance, leaving only 8% uninsured as demonstrated in the chart below.



The largest group for healthcare coverage is the government sponsored market covering 41% of Nevadans through products such as Medicaid/Chip, Medicare, Tricare/VA Healthcare and subsidized small group market coverage. 34% of Nevadans are covered through the self-funded large group market, making it the next highest group of healthcare coverage.

Framework Implementation Plan

Much of the components of these initiatives are coordinated through a Patient Protection Commission, created with Executive Order, to serve as the vehicle to create a state Health Authority. The creation of a Health Authority would be a fundamental reorganization and maturing of Nevada's healthcare system. The goal would be to create a system of care that combines localized guidance of statewide health policy, leveraging of purchasing power, and a greater focus on quality and accountability. The Commission would build off the regulatory authority of the current State Board of Health. Legislation could be passed to combine the State Board of Health and the Patient Protection Commission into a single governing body serving as Nevada's Health Authority.

The Health Authority, in general, combines the existing resources of public health planning and regulatory authority with the purchasing power of Medicaid. In this model, the policy and health outcomes in Medicaid are driven by the expertise and population-based health models in the state public health system. The purchasing power of Medicaid can be used to implement health policy initiatives in a broader section of the population and impact the policies of private insurance. Other components of healthcare such as the Exchange and Public Employees Benefit Program could also be included in the organization.

Improve the Management of Healthcare Costs

1. Cost Management
    a. Purchasing Power
        i. The Health Authority combines the purchasing of all healthcare into a single organizational body. The state is the largest purchaser of healthcare. Between Medicaid, Public Employees Benefit Program, Silver State Health Exchange, and Department of Corrections the state manages the healthcare of 30% of the population. The purchase of healthcare from the State of Nevada is currently fragmented. This volume of purchasing can be combined and harnessed to achieve better prices per member. A larger population is also a larger risk pool for insurers. They can use the same purchasing power to minimize their risk and keep premium costs lower. Volume purchasing could also be extended to nonprofit organizations, such as the Culinary Health Fund.
        ii. Create SilverState Scripts in order to create a concrete body by which to purchase pharmaceuticals and managed the formulary in order to maximize cost savings to participating publicly funded and non-profit organizations.
    b. Regulation of Pricing and Price Transparency
        i. The Health Authority provides the opportunity to expand the role of the Board of Health. States such as New York and Maryland have implemented regulatory authority or contract authority that establishes fair pricing for common treatments such as in-patient hospital care or tied to specific procedures like knee-replacement surgery. By establishing all-payer rates, for example, the state can use regulatory authority to establish a fair rate for providers, eliminate the individual negotiating with insurers and reduce the administrative burden. It creates certainty and consistency of payment for providers and insurers.
2. Consumer Protection:
    a. Prevention of Surprise Billing

i. Legislation could be passed to hold consumers harmless, but fair compensation between hospital and provider needs to have a rate benchmark and appeal process for the system to work effectively. A consumer protection bureau could be established under the Health Authority by restructuring the existing Office of Consumer Health Assistance and provide an appeal process that removes the consumer from the negotiation. Fair compensation could be benchmarked and regulated while overseen by the Health Authority.

b. Continuing the expansion of Medicaid
    i. Cost effectiveness and achieving improvement in health outcome can go a long way toward protecting the Medicaid expansion. The coverage needs to be comprehensive enough to improve health outcomes while being cost effective and affordable. Historically the focus for cost containment has been on restriction of utilization, but now the system needs to mature to focus on value-based purchasing and the achievement of specific health outcomes. By utilizing public health expertise and population-based approaches to shape Medicaid policy resources can then be redirected toward measuring health outcomes and holding the system of care accountable for achieving the outcomes and benchmarks.

Improve the Implementation of Services

1. Increasing Access in Underserved Communities
    a. Maximizing purchasing power to expand networks
        i. This is partly tied to purchasing power and leveraging the purchase of insurance into smaller rural areas. Medicaid currently operates within the managed care system in urban areas only. By expanding managed care coverage to smaller communities incrementally the managed care networks will also expand into underserved areas.
        ii. The regulatory power of the Health Authority could be created to permit better regulation of network adequacy. Network adequacy is how managed care networks are required to ensure that a certain amount and type of providers are available within their network of providers. When insurers receive a premium payment for that covered life, they have an obligation to serve them. Regulation of network adequacy ensures that obligation is met.
2. Reducing Coverage gaps:
    a. Implementing reinsurance or other strategies such as state subsidy to make insurance affordable
        i. Coverage in rural areas often results in a smaller risk pool and a greater risk for insurers. For that reason, premiums are often higher. Reinsurance or state-funded subsidies are both strategies to reduce the premium consumers would pay. These types of programs would be administered under the health authority as they would impact multiple parts of the healthcare system include the Exchange.

b. Implementing purchasing power to provide more comprehensive coverage
    i. Even when a specific service cannot be covered by Medicaid, value-added services can be included in managed care plans. The greater the purchasing pool, the better value-added services can be negotiated into the contract. The more purchasing power lowers the cost of healthcare the more local and state dollars can be redirected to pay for things that impact health but can't be funded as healthcare.
c. Implementing a product that is available and affordable based on public insurance options
    i. Federal and state legislators have attempted to pass bills that provide a buy-in option for Medicaid or a Medicaid-like product. The Health Authority would manage enough parts of the healthcare system that it could craft a look-a-like product that could be affordable by leveraging rate regulation/stabilization, purchasing power, and system efficiencies (building on the systems that already sell and process health insurance now).

3. Addressing Mental Health and Substance Abuse Services/:
    a. Maximizing the use of waivers and other state resources to narrow the gaps for mental health and substance abuse treatment
        i. With the federal matching power of Medicaid, state waivers can be implemented that broadens the services provided for mental health and substance abuse treatment. Currently local and state resources are inefficiently tapped to cobble together a fragmented system. Medicaid provides structure and reimbursable payments for specific services that could free up funding to provide for services such as housing costs that Medicaid doesn't cover.
4. Fix Shortage of Medical Professionals through:
    a. Expanded loan repayment
        i. Loan repayment programs in Nevada are contingent solely upon federal funding and limited to professional groups that provide direct service. State investment in supporting expanded programs can target money to additional professional groups that support healthcare, particularly if they are in sync with identified career pathways.
    b. Comprehensive Career pathways
        i. Build on the existing success of the APRN career pathway that guides people from a certificate level of training to advanced degrees. This provides more access to higher paying careers in healthcare without having to decide at the start of your education what your long-term plan is. It also allows people to enter and exit work and education at points in time that make sense to them while gaining experience in the field.
    c. Improved Professional Licensing
        i. Consolidate board functions and place greater oversight over smaller professional boards under larger organizations like the Board of Health. This provides for more consistent regulation as well as a body to appeal to for concerns. Without more oversight and administrative ease, professional boards will continue to provide unnecessary barriers to licensure reciprocity.

5. Implement healthcare innovations through:
    a. Telehealth
        i. The effectiveness of telehealth is often limited by bandwidth in rural areas. The state should improve efforts to utilize commercial fiber rather than outdated technologies to better support rural access to telehealth.

Improve Healthcare Planning

1. Use Data to Drive Innovation:
    a. Increase Resources for Data Analytics
        i. The Health Authority is guided by local health advisory groups that use data to establish priorities and identify outcomes based on local data and local priorities.
        ii. Increase the investment in whole system analytics at the state by continuing to connect data extracts together to follow people through systems. Build on the existing system within health and human services that already connects health databases, public health databases, and other systems like the criminal history repository to examine the long-term health outcomes of interventions made in the healthcare system.
        iii. Build out the capacity to monitor expenditures and health outcomes and their use in policy decision making and for use by local communities in identifying priorities and guiding local healthcare.
2. Consumer Protection:
    a. Ensuring the ACA protections such as pre-existing conditions are enshrined in state law
        i. Legislation could be drafted and passed to incorporate some of the ACA protections into NRS. In the 2017 session, protections related to birth control were successfully passed and signed into law.
3. Increase Access to Preventive Care:
    a. Maximize existing resources to focus on preventative whole population healthcare that improves the long-term health of Nevadans.
        i. In the Health Authority model public health programs guide the provision of preventive care and chronic disease management. Existing grant funding from public health is typically guided toward a disease condition and can be used to test innovations that, if successful in managing disease, can become reimbursable under Medicaid. This truly maximizes grant funding as a testing site for innovation with a built-in sustainability plan.
4. Improve Health Outcomes for Pregnant Women and Newborns:
    a. Increased focus on pre-natal care
        i. Utilize reimbursement and incentives within Medicaid to hold insurers to better access to pre-natal care for women who are pregnant, better outreach to determine when women are pregnant, and better network adequacy to ensure women can get into the doctor as soon as possible in their pregnancy. This requires a combination of financial incentives and monitoring of network adequacy.

b. Increased focus on Family Planning and Neonatal abstinence syndrome
    i. Maximize the use of grant funds to provide both treatment of children born with neonatal abstinence syndrome while also moving upstream to provide birth control to prevent pregnancy for women who are substance users or in treatment.
c. Increased focus on family and infant support after birth

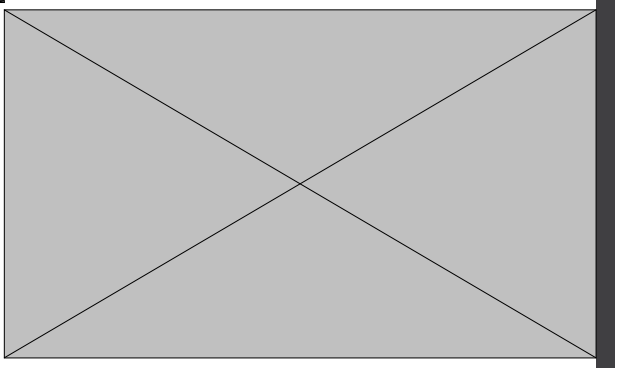
Making The Rounds With Founding Dean Dr. Barbara Atkinson

Issue 53 - July 12, 2016

Making the Rounds with Founding Dean Dr. Barbara Atkinson

Friends and Colleagues,



I'm often asked what it takes to start a brand new medical school. The answer: experience, enthusiasm, focus and a lot of community input to ensure the school fulfills the needs of the community.

Over the course of my career I've been a medical student, faculty and Dean at six different medical schools. I have seen many different curricula and talked to hundreds of faculty and students about what works and what doesn't work. I came to UNLV with a lot of background knowledge, and I recruited faculty members who had years of experience in all aspects of medical education, including academic affairs, admissions, curriculum design, and more.

Just as important was the six months I spent in the community when I first arrived in Las Vegas. I met with local residents, community leaders, physicians, health care professionals, legislators, hospitals, etc. to learn about the health care challenges, needs, and priorities of the community. I visited people at their offices so I saw many physicians' practices, community agencies, governmental sites, hospitals, and educational facilities. During this time I discovered a lot about Southern Nevada's health care landscape. From these interactions I found that the biggest need was for more physicians of all types.

I then used the following questions as my guidepost in thinking about the school: "What does a doctor need to know if she/he is going to be practicing medicine for the next 50 years?" The subsidiary questions I asked, "what needs to be taught, how is it most effectively taught, and how will we know if we've been successful?" Also how can we select students who will become the compassionate and caring doctor that you might want for your own personal physician?

Building the curriculum

I knew our curriculum had to prepare students to be excellent diagnosticians and resourceful problem solvers. The science of medicine advances quickly. Unless physicians keep up with the medical literature, medicine is unrecognizable to a doctor who went to medical school 50 years ago. All the drugs I learned about while in medical school are obsolete today -- except aspirin.

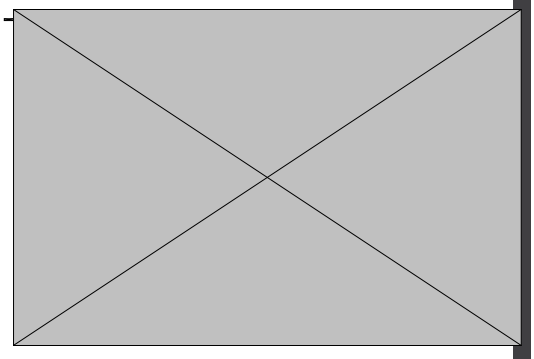
Our goal was to graduate medical students who would have these qualities:

- Excellent communication skills
- Exceptional ability to take a history and complete a physical examination
- Ability to work with and value the health care team
- Capable of finding the most current and best information in medical literature while treating patients
- Curious and highly skilled using the most advanced technology
- Deep understanding of community needs and the desire to help solve them
- Strong moral and ethical compass

To achieve these teaching goals we developed a curriculum that would produce well-rounded, high skilled, and culturally competent physicians. Here are some of the educational elements:

Emergency Medical Technicians

(EMT's): Students will begin their medical school experience by becoming certified as EMTs. They will learn how to work in teams, evaluate patients quickly, and administer treatments while gaining valuable insights into our community's culture and health care needs.



Problem-based curriculum: During the first phase of the curriculum, students will focus on biomedicine and basic sciences working in small groups to solve medical cases based on real patients. They will learn how to use today's research technologies and their doctoring skills to decipher a patient's symptoms and develop treatment plans. Faculty will work with the students, but instead of teaching the content, they will guide the students by ensuring students ask each other the right questions and encouraging them to probe deeper into the science. Read more.

Doctoring: Students will learn how to take a patient history and complete a physical examination. During this phase students will learn excellent communication skills and how to have conversations with patients on difficult subjects by practicing on standardized patients, actors who have been trained to present a disease or problem to medical students. This allows students to practice their communication skills before they begin to see "real" patients. Read more.

State of the art learning: Students will learn anatomy using virtual anatomy instead of gross anatomy dissection. Virtual anatomy teaches by using images as they are seen in patient x-rays, CT scans and MRI's. Virtual anatomy also will give students an appreciation for new technologies and how to use them. Students also will learn how to use hand-held ultrasound devices that are becoming more common in outpatient practices.

Longitudinal integrated clerkship: Students will have a full year of outpatient, integrated clerkships. They will experience firsthand the specialties of family medicine, internal medicine, neurology, obstetrics and gynecology, pediatrics, psychiatry, and surgery in a medical-home practice model with faculty and residents. Students will get to know their patients and community over time and develop important relationships with physicians, nurses, and other members of the health care team.

Community outreach: Students will learn about the social determinants of health and disease, and how local community agencies address these as part of the Nevada Community Service curriculum. Students will have the opportunity to volunteer at a community agency or program of their choice for a few hours each month, and by doing so, get directly involved with the local community and the challenges it faces. Read more.

I can't wait to meet our charter class of students and begin their education. It's going to be an exciting milestone for me personally and for the entire community.

Best wishes,

Barbara

More Than Medical Knowledge

By Ed Ort

A unique aspect of UNLV School of Medicine's curriculum gets students to focus on personal growth and professional enrichment.

Interspersed through the curriculum are eight weeklong "intersessions" for academic and personal enrichment. Each intersession will be organized around a theme and address topics such as bioethics, entrepreneurship, history of medicine, hospitality, humanism, global health, law, and nutrition.

Dr. Mark Guadagnoli, the School of Medicine's director of learning and performance, says, "The programs are designed as a celebration of personal and professional growth. The intention is to help our students become well-rounded, caring, and competent physicians who embrace the idea of constant improvement in all they do." Read more.

Hi Mayor! Two years ago (yes he kept the email!) Jon Ralston asked us about this whether you were considering returning the money he gave your campaign, and after talking with you we responded you were aware of the issue and would wait and see what the outcome of the investigation is,
Now that he has been indicted Jon wants to know whether you are planning to return the money he donated to your campaign.
Feel free to call me if you want to chat, I wanted to email you this so you had the PDF.

INVESTMENT COMPANY EXECUTIVES INDICTED FOR $1.5 BILLION PONZI SCHEME

WASHINGTON – The president and chief executive officer and two former Asia-based executives of a Las Vegas investment company were indicted today for their roles in an alleged $1.5 billion Ponzi scheme.

Assistant Attorney General Leslie R. Caldwell of the Justice Department's Criminal Division, U.S. Attorney Daniel G. Bogden of the District of Nevada and Special Agent in Charge Laura A. Bucheit of the FBI's Las Vegas Division made the announcement.

"The defendants allegedly preyed on thousands of unsuspecting Japanese victims to enrich themselves by operating a billion-plus dollar Ponzi scheme," said Assistant Attorney General Caldwell. "This prosecution shows that the Criminal Division will pursue not only those who victimize American citizens, but also those who use the U.S. as a home base to defraud victims abroad."

"Investment fraud and other financial fraud cases are a high priority for the U.S. Attorney's Office in Nevada," said U.S. Attorney Bogden. "These defendants are accused of using a Nevada corporation to conduct their $1.5 billion fraud scheme and falsely telling thousands of overseas victims that their investments would be safely held and managed by an independent, third-party escrow agent in Nevada. Fraudulent ruses and schemes perpetrated by Nevadans using Nevada corporations and entities will continue to be addressed by this office."

"These indictments are a reminder of the FBI's determination to identify, investigate and bring to justice those who are committing financial crimes against innocent consumers," said Special Agent in Charge Bucheit. "We are appreciative of the continued support we receive from our international, federal, state and local law enforcement partners."

Edwin Fujinaga, 68, of Las Vegas; Junzo Suzuki, 66, of Tokyo; and Paul Suzuki, 36, of Tokyo, were charged in an indictment with eight counts of mail fraud and nine counts of wire fraud. Fujinaga also is charged with three counts of money laundering. The indictment seeks from all three defendants forfeiture of the proceeds from the alleged crimes.

Fujinaga was the president and CEO of Las Vegas-based MRI International Inc. (MRI). Junzo Suzuki previously was MRI's executive vice president for Asia Pacific, and Paul Suzuki previously was the company's general manager for Japan operations. MRI purportedly specialized in "factoring," whereby the company purchased accounts receivable from medical providers at a discount, and then attempted to recover the entire amount, or at least more than the discounted amount, from the debtor.

According to allegations in the indictment, from at least 2009 to 2013, Fujinaga and the Suzukis fraudulently solicited investments from thousands of Japanese residents, and MRI currently owes investors over $1.5 billion. Specifically, the indictment alleges that Fujinaga and the Suzukis promised investors a series of interest payments that would accrue over the life of the investment and that would be paid out along with the face value of the investment at the conclusion of the investments' duration. The defendants allegedly solicited investments by, among other things, promising investors that their investments would be used only for the purchase of medical accounts receivable (MARS) and by representing that investors funds would be managed and safeguarded by an independent third-party escrow company.

The indictment further alleges that MRI operated as a Ponzi scheme, wherein the defendants used new investors' money to pay prior investors' maturing investments. According to the indictment, the defendants also allegedly used investors' funds for purposes other than the purchase of MARS, including paying themselves sales commissions, subsidizing gambling habits, funding personal travel by private jet, and other personal expenses.

The charges contained in an indictment are merely accusations. A defendant is presumed innocent until and unless proven guilty.

This case is being investigated by the FBI's Las Vegas Division. Significant assistance was provided by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, the Criminal Division's Office of International Affairs and Japanese authorities. This case is being prosecuted by Assistant Chief Albert B. Stieglitz Jr. and Trial Attorney Melissa Aoyagi of the Criminal Division's Fraud Section and First Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven W. Myhre of the District of Nevada.

R. Gil Kerlikowske is the former Commissioner of U.S. Customs and Border Protection (CBP), having been nominated by President Obama and confirmed by the Senate in March, 2014. When he left office in January 2017, he was the only confirmed CBP Commissioner during President Obama's administration. He is now currently an IOP Fellow at Harvard Kennedy School of Government.

CBP was formed as part of the Department of Homeland Security in 2003 as a result of the recommendations issued by the 9/11 Commission. Its dual responsibilities are to secure America's borders and facilitate lawful travel and trade. CBP is the second-largest contributor of funds to the U.S. Treasury, collecting $46 billion in Fiscal Year 2015. As the nation's largest law enforcement agency, CBP employs 60,000 people at and between 328 ports of entry nationwide as well as in 40 countries around the world, with an annual budget approaching $13 billion.

Before Mr. Kerlikowske was named CBP Commissioner, he served for five years as President Obama's drug policy advisor as Director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP), a Senate-confirmed cabinet level position. When he started at ONDCP in May 2009, the growing abuse of and addiction to prescription drugs was not widely known by the general public. Besides authoring the ONDCP's annual National Drug Control Strategy, he initiated the first Prescription Drug Strategy.

Mr. Kerlikowske served as Chief of Police for nine years in Seattle (2000-2009); during this period, crime decreased to its lowest level in 40 years, video cameras were installed in patrol vehicles, less lethal technology such as Tasers were issued, the department received national accreditation, and he implemented civilian management of Internal Affairs. He was elected twice as President of the Major Cities Chiefs Association, which represents the largest city/county law enforcement agencies in the United States and Canada.

Mr. Kerlikowske was Deputy Director of the Office of Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS) during the Clinton administration under Attorney General Janet Reno from 1998-2000. Please join us for this exciting talk!

Subject: High on transparency

Quote of the Day

“It’s still our goal to be able to provide that policy information so people can make good decisions. That’s really the goal of transparency… to lift that veil and say this is what actually appears to be contributing to the price of drugs or not so people can make choices about how we can move forward as a state.”

-- Division of Public and Behavioral Health Administrator Julie Kotchevar

TGIF, TDIers.

What a week as the new governor unveiled his first budget in his maiden State of the State speech. The reaction has been predictable, but what are they reacting to, exactly? Only one news outlet has a definitive breakdown of what's in the $8.8 billion spending plan. Click on the link below.

That's just the beginning -- not for Steve Sisolak (although it is) but for Team Indy in its legislative coverage. We will be unfurling the most comprehensive preview package ever done over the next two weeks. Look for it.

And don't forget our IndyTalks next week with the governor, where he will reveal details of the Cannabis Compliance Board and much, much more. Tickets and sponsorships are still available. Email natalie@thenvindy.com for more information if you want to be a sponsor.

Have a great weekend.

Medicare reform can no longer be ignored: Warnings from the 2019 Medicare trustees report

Joseph Antos and Robert Emmet Moffit | September 2019

The latest annual Medicare trustees report highlights the program's growing fiscal challenge and reflects policymakers' ongoing failure to prepare Medicare for the future. Program spending on a per-beneficiary basis rose sharply in 2018 and is anticipated to accelerate with the influx of baby boomers turning age 65 and rising health care costs. Medicare's Hospital Insurance (or Part A) trust fund becomes insolvent in 2026, but the program is already in trouble from a budget perspective. More than $300 billion in general tax revenue was needed in 2018 to help fund $740 billion in Medicare spending. Bipartisan legislation will be needed to put the program on a sound basis for future generations. One starting point could be proposals advanced in the president's budget and other reforms to improve the functioning of traditional fee-for-service Medicare. Adopting premium support, which converts the current uncapped subsidy to a defined contribution, would eliminate the fee-for-service incentives that drive up spending unnecessarily. Such a reform is controversial but less dramatic than many think.

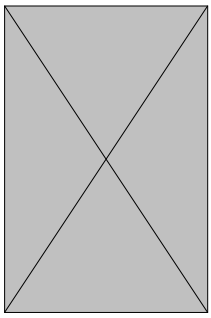
November & December Book Marks

November is a month of extremes. We enter it stuffing our faces with leftover Halloween candy and we exit it stuffed like a turkey. In the middle is Veteran's Day, a time to pause from work, school or life and think about patriotism and those who serve our country, no matter what your politics. To that end, I've included two books with a military theme.

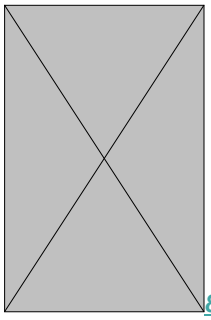
We transition to December with the warp speed of Black Friday. Online, in-person, malls and Holiday Markets, home made and home-baked, re-gifted and handed down... tis the season to give. And nothing makes a better gift than a good read. Whether it's a hard cover, gift certificate, audible, audio book or e-reader, give the gift of books this holiday season and forever after. In keeping with the spirit of Small Business Saturday on Nov 25th, I'm linking each book to Indiebound.org, a community of Independent Local Bookstores you can purchase from online. Put your feet up on Black Friday and avoid the crowds. It gives you more time to read!

Military Theme:



Craig & Fred - A Marine, A Stray Dog, and How They Rescued Each Other, Craig Grossi

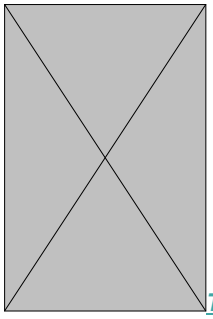
Another dog/buddy story, you ask? We've had "Marley and Me" and "A Dog's Purpose" and oh so many more, but the fact is we can't get enough of our four-legged friends. As I prepared to open what could have been a formulaic book, I was immediately sucked in. Toggling back and forth between a present day cross-country road trip and the war in Afghanistan, the story focuses on the author, who has returned home dealing with PTS and struggling to fit back into civilian life. Craig joined the military after 9/11 and while deployed, he breaks the rules and adopts a stray dog he names "Fred." The tale of that friendship, and the against-all-odds story of how Fred gets back to the states will warm the cockles of your heart and every other body part in between. Craig & Fred enjoy a huge fan following on instagram and for anyone who understands the power of animals to fill the empty places with unconditional love, you'll enjoy this book on every level.



8 Seconds of Courage-A Soldier's Story from Immigrant to the Medal of Honor, Flo Groberg with Tom Sileo

I'd be farting through silk if I had a dollar for every time someone threw around the word "hero." But this book is truly about an ordinary person who did something extraordinary, without thinking twice. Flo's story moves from his immigration to the United States to his honor at serving in the military to sacrifice and heroism. His dramatic injury and painstaking recovery culminate in receiving the Medal of Honor, the nation's highest military award for acts of valor. It's the stories about individuals that connect us as a people. And for those of us completely unconnected to the less than 1% of the population who volunteer to serve our country. Flo's story reminds us of what really does make America great.

Fiction:



The Paris Secret, Karen Swan

The title might suggest a destination romance novel complete with wine, cobblestoned streets and some croissants thrown in for good measure, but don't be fooled by the cover. This is a lively story based on the real life discovery of more than 100 paintings, found in a Paris apartment that were looted and hidden by Nazi sympathizers.

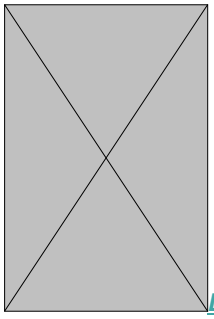
The protagonist isn't some lovesick gal with time-bomb ovaries but a serious art agent who gets swept up in the history and secrets of a powerful French family and in the process, uncovers the past. Maybe there's a little love along the way, but I'm not telling. It's worth the read and the twists and turns to lead to a very surprising payoff at the end.



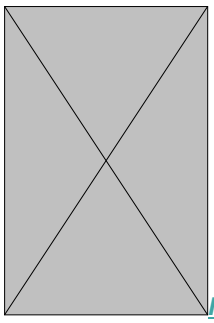
Little Fires Everywhere, Celeste Ng

Does giving birth make a mother, or is it love? This question lies at the heart of this wonderfully complex book, layered with parenthood's complexities and the connections between parent and child across generations and couples. Add to that the elements of race, love, rules, friendship, secrets and betrayals and you have a rich and enjoyable read.

Set in suburban Ohio, a bohemian mother and her daughter move into the manicured and law abiding town of Shaker Heights. The ascetic lifestyle of the artist mother chafes against the conventions of the landlady, who digs into the past and unearths some uncomfortable truths for everyone in the novel, giving rise to the title "little fires everywhere." Through a secondary character of an immigrant Chinese mother, Ng cleverly inserts race juxtaposed against privilege and prejudice.

The story both unwinds as it simultaneously builds to a crescendo and my thoughts returned to it many days after I finished it.

Fiction-Fantasy:

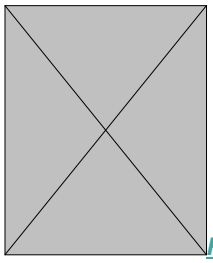


Hiddensee-A Tale of the Once and Future Nutcracker, Gregory Maguire

Just in time for the holidays, the famed author of "Wicked" and other fairytales takes his pen to the ancient roots of the beloved nutcracker story. The tale begins deep in a forest with an older couple and their adopted son. The writing is rhythmic and magical, in an "olde tyme" tongue that both lulled and transported me back to reading fairy tales as a child.

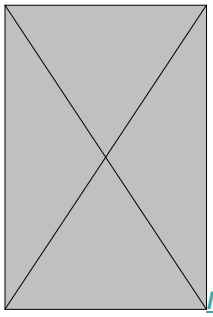
Planted in the soil of the 10th century German romanticism, the themes of death, afterlife and the fantastical are woven through the story. But more than anything, this tale is about the power of transporting someone to a magical realm.

Non Fiction:



Fifty Years of 60 Minutes, Jeff Fager

Full disclosure, Fager (everyone calls him by his last name) is a friend and a fellow alumnus of Colgate University. As Executive Producer of "60 Minutes" for more than 14 years, he stepped into the legendary Don Hewitt's shoes and made them his own. Fager's book feels as if you're strolling down the halls and editing rooms of this iconic news program, revealing the back stories, the inside scoop, the personalities and the simple secret to "60 Minutes" longevity (they look for stories that can be developed after the story.) It's hard to imagine that "back in the day" TV execs were skeptical that current events could be presented in a compelling and human way. Here we are, fifty years later, tuning in on Sunday night to the best story-telling on the airwaves. Hands down. Listening on audible, with the inclusion of audio news clips, makes it even more engrossing.



Member of the Family-My Story of Charles Manson, Life Inside His Cult and the Darkness that Ended the Sixties, Dianne Lake

With the recent passing of Charles Manson at 83 (of natural causes!) the world lost one more monster, and this book is even more of a timely read. The Manson murders were the first truly horrific news story I remember as a kid. It frightened a nation and effectively ended any semblance of hippie innocence and the summer of love.

I've always been intrigued by what must go so horribly wrong in childhood to allow a young woman to be programmed to kill on command. I remembered a passage in Manson's biography where the women allowed themselves to be lined up against trees while he practiced knife throwing. That repelled and fascinated me.

You can find all of those Daddy issues and more in Dianne Lake's honest and unvarnished memoir of her years with the Manson family. Her father's slow dissatisfaction with society and decision to sell everything and "drop out" is heart-breaking to read. As her parents turn to drugs and the commune-like culture, Dianne is cut loose, introduced to acid at age 14. The tale weaves from Minnesota to Malibu, through Laurel Canyon and San Francisco at the height of the hippie hey day, with poor Dianne looking for love in all the wrong places. Don't skip the part where Diane gets to bite the umbilical cord in half during one of the Manson family births.

In this season of gifting and packages, I've discovered a new product that can "thief-proof" packages and send delivery notifications when you aren't around and it makes me way more comfortable than having the Amazon guy let himself in my house, check this out..... https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=5lUIfaYtC2s and go to Packageguard.com.

What I Learned In My First Year: A Judge's Example

Law school taught me how to think like a lawyer, but the district court judge I clerked for my first year out of law school taught me how to be a lawyer. This was the gift she gave to all of her law clerks, in one form or another, says M.C. Sungaila of Haynes and Boone LLP. Read more »

From: Libertarian Party of Nevada
Sent: Tue 6/13/2017 4:00:24 PM
Subject: [Newsletter] [Marketing Mail] Missives from the Front: Armistice Day and the Treaty of Sine Die

[redacted]

Friend --

The 79th Session of the Nevada Legislature has finally ended! Armistice Day was Monday, June 5th, and I've been waiting to hear whether Governor Sandoval has chosen to sign or veto some of the most important bills we worked on. Overall, I'd say the 79th Session was a resounding victory for the Libertarian Party of Nevada. In Elliot Malin's words, "we made out like bandits" - though not without some scattered defeats.

Though the Democrats controlled the Legislature, we were able to find common ground and make concrete progress on criminal justice reform, marijuana reform, and LGBT+ issues. While we did rake in a lot of legislative victories, the biggest win this session comes from our increased visibility as a party and the alliances we were able to build. I can't count the number of legislators who told me, "the Libertarian Party has never had a presence like this at the Legislature that I can remember!" - or "I didn't know libertarians believed that!" - or, my personal favorite, "Wow! A reasonable libertarian!" Yes, Senators, Assemblypeople, and my fellow lobbyists, it turns out libertarians are reasonable people, after all!

We were also able to make constructive alliances with specific legislators and organizations like the ACLU, Americans for Prosperity, PLAN (Progressive Leadership Alliance of Nevada), and TAG (Transgender Allies Group). These connections, paired with the reputation and experience we earned during this session, put us in an excellent position for the next one. We plan to spend the time until 2019 preparing. The next phase is building and cultivating these relationships, writing BDRs (bill draft requests), and increasing membership and fundraising to leverage the power of your voice in the Legislature.

I hereby bestow the Order of the Golden Porcupine upon the following legislators and lobbyists for their valiant work this session. Some particular notables may appear under more than one heading, if their work merited it:

Criminal Justice Reform

Senator Donald Gustavson
Assemblyman James Ohrenschall
Assemblyman William McCurdy II
Assemblyman Steve Yeager
John Piro, Clark County Public Defender's Office
Sean Sullivan, Washoe County Public Defender's Office
Stacey Shinn, Progressive Leadership Alliance of Nevada
Holly Welborn, ACLU Policy Director

LGBT+ Issues

Senator David Parks

Assemblyman Nelson Araujo
Brooke Maylath, Transgender Allies Group
Sherrie Scaffidi, Transgender Allies Group
Stacey Shinn, Progressive Leadership Alliance of Nevada
Holly Welborn, ACLU Policy Director

Drug Policy

Senator David Parks
Senator Tick Segerblom
William Adler, Sierra Cannabis Coalition
Stacey Shinn, Progressive Leadership Alliance of Nevada
Holly Welborn, ACLU Policy Director

Economic Issues

Senator Ben Kieckhefer
Senator James Settelmeyer
Ashley Clift-Jennings
Elliot Malin, Americans for Prosperity
Marcos Lopez, Americans for Prosperity

I'd like to give my thanks to all these devoted, hard-working people - much of what we accomplished this session was done alongside them. And while many of them shared our goals on particular bills, a handful of them shared their time and experience. My most heartfelt thanks go to Elliot Malin, Holly Welborn, Stacey Shinn, Brooke Maylath, John Piro, and Sean Sullivan. We couldn't have done it without you.

Below is a list of the highlights of our work this session - victories, defeats, and draws - in that order, sorted by bill number.

AB33 - SIGNED!

This bill abolishes several bureaucratic organizations within the Nevada Revised Statutes, including the Garlic and Onion Grower's Advisory Board, the Alfalfa Seed Advisory Board and the Advisory Council for Organic Agricultural Products. To my surprise and pleasure, all of these boards were themselves in favor of AB33; their members are tired of the NRS-imposed requirement of travel to board meetings, and they're the ones wearing the yoke of bureaucracy. The Garlic & Onions Board has recognized what the LP has known for years - industry boards cartelize their industries, reducing competitiveness and increasing costs in the long run. And they're inconvenient for the members on whom the requirements are imposed. AB33's implementation has slashed at least one entire chapter (556) from the NRS. Amusingly, our very own Vice-Chair, David Colborne, promised to abolish the Onion & Garlic Growers' Board during his 2016 Senate campaign. Campaign promise: Fulfilled - and he didn't even have to get elected!

AB118 - SIGNED!

This bill allows CCW permits to be issued for active-duty and honorably discharged service members between ages 18-21. It's a simple expansion of Second Amendment rights to individuals who have already demonstrated responsibility with weapons.

AB135 - SIGNED!

This bill bans the use of urinalysis and blood tests to detect marijuana metabolites for the purposes of charging drivers with DUIs. The final measure was softened from the original bill, which struck the use of any detectable marijuana metabolites in urine or blood as grounds for charging an individual with a DUI. The final version still strikes their use in urine, and now specifies intoxicating metabolites (delta-9-tetrahydrocannabinol and 1-OH-tetrahydrocannabinol) which can be detected successfully through a blood test.

AB162 - SIGNED!

This bill renders permanent resident cards equivalent to driver's licenses for ID purposes, improving quality of life for immigrants in Nevada. If the card contains the same information as a driver's license and is also issued by the state, there's no reason it shouldn't be accepted the same way.

AB175 - DEAD!

This measure was Assemblyman McCurdy II's $15 minimum wage bill - and the very first measure I testified on this session (opposed, of course). It was amended and dramatically reduced in scope, instead requiring employers to offer certain health insurance benefits to minimum-wage employees. Even in its amended form, however, it would have been harmful to small businesses. We're pleased to see Sandoval veto this bill.

AB181 - SIGNED!

This is the session's major bill restoring civil rights for felons; the other was SB125. However, SB125 was dramatically altered via amendment into merely a record-sealing bill. Initially, we worried that this bill would die during the legislative process, but after SB125 was amended, Speaker Frierson (AB181's sponsor) pushed hard to restore this one to life - and it got through. Thanks to AB181, individuals convicted of category B felonies can vote after they have served their time or been discharged - and can serve on juries after two years. Given that 4% of Nevadans have been convicted of a felony (in part due to the War on Drugs, in part because the average American commits three felonies a day), we believe that giving people a second chance at civic life after they've served their time is both just and a guard against recidivism.

AB205 - SIGNED!

This bill, sponsored by Assemblyman Nelson Araujo, legalizes alkaline hydrolysis cremation in Nevada. This method of end-of-life disposal effectively dissolves in lye, rather than burning, remains. What's left is a white powder similar to that produced by traditional cremation, but without the concomitant air pollution. This simple measure legalizes a safe, environmentally-friendly procedure which is already legal in thirteen states and three Canadian provinces.

AB212 - DEAD!

This bill would have prevented achievement data from being used in public schools for teacher evaluation. While we recognize that achievement data is an imperfect measure, banning its use in teacher evaluation altogether is counterproductive and illogical. Why throw out a hammer just because it's not good at being a wrench? We were pleased to see this bill defeated.

AB229 - SIGNED!

This bill, also sponsored by Assemblyman Araujo, renders all marriage- and adoption-related provisions in the Nevada Revised Statutes gender-neutral ("two persons, regardless of gender"). While this may seem redundant given the Supreme Court's decision to legalize same-sex marriage nationwide in 2015, NRS would have needed to be fixed eventually, and the repair also acts as an important safeguard in the event of a more conservative Supreme Court overturning Obergefell v. Hodges.

AB269 - DEAD!

This bill would have taxed nicotine-containing vapor products equivalently with traditional cigarettes. More than 443,000 Americans die early from traditional smoking-related causes every year. If even half of traditional smokers switched to e-cigarettes, many of these lives could be saved. This tax would have removed an incentive for people to choose a harm-reduction technology - vapor products - over much more harmful traditional combustible tobacco products. We're very pleased to see AB269 defeated.

AB274 - DEAD!

Would have had Nevada join the National Popular Vote Compact. While we don't mind getting rid of the Electoral College, the NPV Compact is clunky and imperfect. Adopting it would also decrease Nevada's relative importance under the current system.

AB291 - SIGNED!

While this bill sponsored by William McCurdy II was defanged via amendment, I believe it's still an improvement over the status quo. It requires that information in presentence reports (PSIs) used by judges to determine the severity of a sentence must be sourced and shall only include criminal convictions, not any and all criminal records.

AB301 - SIGNED!

One of my favorite bills from this session, AB301 would provide confidentiality in peer counseling for first responders, including police officers - and it would protect them from charges of insubordination from their superior officers. Our support of this bill may seem counterintuitive, but we believe that incidents of excessive force can be minimized or eliminated by fighting the "warrior mentality" before it takes root. A happy, healthy police officer is much less likely to snap than one suffering from untreated mental or emotional strain. This bill makes it easier for police, firefighters, and paramedics to open up when they need to, and therefore easier for them to receive the treatment they need to be effective.

AB365 - SIGNED!

This bill creates a pathway for anyone to become a non-religious marriage officiant in Nevada. It also allows the state of Nevada to sell legally-meaningless but good-for-tourism vow renewal certificates. The first measure is good for individual freedom and the second is an effective way for the state to raise voluntary contributions; it's also likely to boost marriage tourism in Nevada, which is excellent for the economy.

AB384 - SIGNED!

This bill, better known as “Ban the Box,” will help the more than one in four Nevadans with criminal histories be able to find work. Essentially, it removes the initial “Have you ever been arrested?” or “Do you have a criminal history?” checkbox from job applications for state and county agencies. The goal is simply to give people with criminal or arrest records a chance to get in the door for an interview. As overbroad and abusive as the War on Drugs has been, nonviolent offenses are extremely common, and even unpaid parking tickets can result in arrests; neither should stop people from finding gainful employment. Many convicted offenders are even required to maintain gainful employment as a condition of their release, but find job access difficult or impossible due to that pesky checkbox. They find themselves trapped in a Catch-22 with no easy way out. States that have banned the box have seen recidivism rates decrease markedly. As it turns out, one of the best ways to stay out of prison is to build a job and a life outside of it. Nevada now proudly joins those states.

AB428 - SIGNED!

This bill makes Narcan, a drug used to treat opioid overdoses, available over-the-counter (with pharmacist consultation). This bill is a perfect example of how pharmaceutical deregulation can be a compassionate, life-saving measure.

AB461 - SIGNED!

This bill designates the week following Martin Luther King, Jr.’s birthday “Peace Week” in Nevada. The Libertarian Party has long been the party of peace, and we believe that practical and symbolic gestures encouraging a culture of peace and tolerance are more important now than ever. This bill is technically toothless, but encourages the people of Nevada to build bridges between polarized groups, engage in quiet reflection, and live compassionately in the spirit of peace. As Dr. King said, “Darkness cannot drive out darkness; only light can do that. Hate cannot drive out hate; only love can do that.”

SB110 - SIGNED!

This bill removes an onerous and expensive requirement for trans people to publish a name change in a newspaper for three weeks after the date of the change. The original intent of the law was to prevent individuals from escaping from their creditors via name changes, but with the internet, the requirement has become ineffective for that purpose. All that’s left is a handout to newspaper companies and an easy list of targets for the transphobic to hunt down. This bill’s passage is a victory for privacy, liberty, and people’s right to vote with their dollars.

SB125 - SIGNED!

This bill, sponsored by Senator Aaron Ford, allows ex-convicts who have served their time to petition to have their records sealed (with certain exceptions). This opportunity gives them a second chance at a normal life. While SB125 was originally a more expansive restoration of civil rights for felons, it was amended; AB181 filled that role instead, and was, happily, also passed.

SB176 - SIGNED!

This bill requires all on-duty law enforcement officers to wear and operate body cameras. Requiring law enforcement officers to record their encounters will protect Nevadans from police misconduct and law enforcement officers from false accusations, though we note that cameras are most effective when paired with training law enforcement officers in procedural justice and de-escalation whenever possible. I'm still delighted to see this bill signed - it will keep officers (and citizens) on their best behavior.

SB199 - SIGNED!

This bill creates a new class of craft distilleries in Nevada ("estate" distilleries, specializing in high-end liquor created from local ingredients). Sponsored by Senator Settelmeyer, we believe the distilleries allowed by this bill will spur both economic development and good spirits in Nevada.

SB201 - SIGNED!

This is another of my proudest moments from this session. SB201 bans the use of so-called "conversion" or "reparative" therapy on minors in Nevada. We believe that sexual orientation is naturally diverse and that people should never have their minds or bodies violated simply because of who they love. No one should be coerced into believing that their gender or sexual identities are wrong - least of all children.

SB396 - SIGNED!

This bill legalizes the growth of (and research into) industrial hemp in Nevada. Expanding the industrial hemp industry would be a massive victory for economic growth and personal freedom in Nevada. Hemp grows well in this state and requires substantially less water than cotton, making it a good fit for Nevadan agriculture. It's always better to legalize and regulate than to ban outright, especially with a harmless industrial product with a long history of American production like this one.

SB398 - SIGNED!

This bill sets boundaries to protect the blockchain from government interference in Nevada. Ensuring free and open access to blockchain technology will stimulate economic growth and cement northern Nevada's role as a burgeoning center for high-tech innovation. Government can never keep pace with technological change, and when it tries, inevitably slows the rate of innovation. We're therefore very pleased to see this promising new technology protected from the state's ham-fisted interventionism.

SB399 - SIGNED!

As with AB162, this bill renders another government-issued ID - this time, Tribal ID cards - equivalency with Nevada driver's licenses for purposes of identification. If the card contains the same information as a driver's license and is also issued by the state, there's no reason it shouldn't be accepted the same way.

SB402 - SIGNED!

This bill reduces the use of solitary confinement in Nevada's prisons. Holly Welborn of the ACLU worked ceaselessly to get it passed, and though it was made less full-throated in the final version, it's still a marked improvement over the status quo. Solitary confinement is cruel and unusual, and we believe the state has no right to punitively isolate inmates - sometimes for years. We're therefore very pleased to see Governor Sandoval sign SB402 into law.

SB415 - SIGNED!

This bill renders female hygiene products tax-exempt. Feminine hygiene products are a necessity, and taxing them is fundamentally gender-biased, as women are the disproportionate purchasers. These taxes are a relic of a patriarchal system that punishes women for their biology. The increased cost makes them especially difficult to access for the most disadvantaged and vulnerable in our society, meaning that this is an economic justice issue as well as a social justice issue. Taxation of these products is theft from every person who buys them - so I'm more than happy to see that tax removed.

SB426 - DEAD!

This bill would have mandated that moped riders wear helmets at all times. Though helmet laws do empirically reduce deaths (and I would encourage all riders of two-wheeled vehicles to wear helmets), I believe the choice is ultimately the individual's. I was the only person in either hearing who testified in opposition - and, after the second hearing in the Assembly, stuck around to talk with Assemblywoman Bilbray-Axelrod and Assemblyman Fumo about my concerns. I believe they listened, as the bill never made it to that committee's work session.

AJR2 - SENT TO SECRETARY OF STATE!

This resolution, sponsored by Assemblyman Nelson Araujo, parallels AB229, which renders the marriage provisions in NRS unisex ("two people, regardless of gender"). AJR2, however, alters the Nevada Constitution. We were happy to support it for the same reasons we supported AB229.

AJR10 - SENT TO SECRETARY OF STATE!

This resolution expresses opposition to the development of a repository for spent nuclear fuel and high-level radioactive waste at Yucca Mountain in the State of Nevada. While our preferred solution would be the legalization of nuclear waste reprocessing (avoiding the necessity for sites like Yucca Mountain entirely), we believe that the people of Nevada have the right not to be forced by the federal government to store hazardous nuclear waste here. We're happy to see AJR10 passed on to the Secretary of State.

Defeats

AB132 - SIGNED!

This bill enhances penalties for committing assault or battery against certain civilian employees and volunteers of law enforcement agencies. While we respect and appreciate the work these employees and volunteers do, we see no reason why striking these individuals is worse than striking a regular person on the street. Is it the role of the government to decide that some lives are more valuable than others? We don't believe so.

AB226 - DEAD!

This bill, sponsored by Assemblyman Ira Hansen, would have skipped the primary elections if both candidates were from the same major party and sent them directly to the general election. As Assemblywoman Lisa Krasner got elected in the primary and had no challenger in the general election, Nevadans in her district didn't get the choice that others did. We were sad to see this bill die.

AB237 - DEAD!

This is one of my greatest regrets from this session. Sponsored by Assemblyman Ohrenschall, AB237 would have abolished the death penalty in Nevada. Banning the death penalty is an economical choice - capital cases are uniformly more expensive than life imprisonment. However, our strongest objection to capital punishment is not the monetary cost, but the human one. The death penalty is irreversible, and wrongful convictions do occur. Since 1973, one hundred and fifty-seven people in the United States have been executed for crimes for which they were later exonerated. Decades of research have indicated a pattern of racial bias in capital cases, as well, making the abolition of the death penalty an urgent issue of racial and social justice. No state should have the power to violate its people's most fundamental right - the right to exist.

AB303 - DEAD!

This bill would have banned future state contracts with private prisons in Nevada. While the Libertarian Party generally prefers free-market solutions, we see an exception for private prisons due to the web of perverse incentives created by a public-private partnership. The incentive for a private prison is not to serve the inmate, but to decrease per-inmate costs and increase per-inmate revenue as much as possible. They're also incentivized to maximize the number of inmates, decreasing the focus on rehabilitation or potential early release. For private prisons, the client is not the inmate; the state itself is - and they aren't focused on the taxpayer's bottom line, but their own. These well-connected corporatist entities choose to cut corners at the cost of inmates' rights, liberties, and well-being. We're disappointed but unsurprised that Governor Sandoval chose to veto this bill.

AB383 - DEAD!

This bill, also sponsored by Assemblyman Ohrenschall, would have required police officers to be trained in the constitutional and lawful use of force. No one should be above the law, especially not the agents responsible for enforcing it. Nevadans should be assured that law enforcement officers are guardians of their safety - but when concerns about excessive force become common, fear is rational. One of the best possible ways to address this fear is to train police officers to limit their use of force and de-escalate situations whenever possible. The people of Nevada should be able to trust agents of the state to operate within the bounds the state itself has set, and it's a shame that this bill will not help ensure that goal

SB358 - DEAD!

This bill, sponsored by Senator Donald Gustavson, would have effectively banned civil forfeiture in Nevada, but lobbyists from various police departments worked strenuously against it. Unfortunately, it died without even receiving a work session in its first house. The practice of civil forfeiture will continue in Nevada for the time being.

SB261 - DEAD!

This bill, better known as "Death with Dignity" or "Physician Aid in Dying," would have legalized the prescription of life-ending drugs to terminal patients in Nevada. It was modeled after Oregon's existing program. While any form of assisted suicide will be controversial, this bill was carefully written to prevent coercion or abuse. It would simply have given terminal patients the choice to die on their own terms - an increase in freedom for everyone, and a logical consequence of individual bodily autonomy. As Senator Parks, the bill's sponsor, asked specifically for our support on this issue, we're very sad to see his measure fail.

SB236 - DEAD!

Under current law, recreational use of marijuana in Nevada is legal, but only in an individual's private residence. Tourists have no legal place to smoke or vape, and locals are restricted to their homes. This bill would have created a class of special use permits to businesses and festivals for public marijuana usage. Ignoring the problem doesn't fix it - now that recreational use is legal in Nevada, both residents and tourists will use it outside their private homes. This bill would also have created remarkable business opportunities for marijuana cafes, lounges, nightclubs, and more. Allowing businesses and festivals to create special designated areas would have helped resolve the issue, and we're sorry to see the problem (and opportunity) go unaddressed this session.

SB159 - SIGNED!

This bill bans the sale of dextromethorphan to minors. As with most drug restrictions, this one is counterproductive. It will end up disproportionately hurting honest consumers and creating a more dangerous black market for those who do insist on using it recreationally. As libertarians know, prohibition doesn't work, and people get hurt in the process.

SJR4 - SENT TO SECRETARY OF STATE!

This resolution would urge the federal government to adopt a Constitutional amendment regulating "political contributions and expenditures by corporations, unions and individuals." Unfortunately, it passed, though Elliot Malin and I lobbied extensively against it, meeting with Assemblyperson after Assemblyperson. We did convince Assemblyman Ohrenschall and Assemblywoman Shannon Bilbray-Axelrod to go on the record voicing concerns about its potential unintended consequences, but the measure went through regardless.

Draws

ESAs may be dead, but Opportunity Scholarships got $20 million they didn't have before - according to Elliot Malin of Americans for Prosperity, who worked tirelessly on ESAs this session, even this outcome is a victory. It's a net increase for school choice funding, and if he's happy with it, I'll trust his judgment.

AB160 - SIGNED!

This was the second bill I testified on this session. Sponsored by Assemblywoman Heidi Swank, the original version of this bill would have required a study of cost-effective alternatives and special permission to replace any broken window in a state building. However, due to our careful reading and testimony (we were the only group to oppose the bill), it was amended to (1) apply only to historical buildings, and (2) allow replacement of broken windows without delay. It's not an outright victory, but I believe its harm was mitigated by our work.

AB346 - SIGNED!

The original version of this bill would have mandated that providers of small-scale child care (not more than four children) register with the Division of Public and Behavioral Health of the Department of Health and Human Services, submit certain information to the Division, and make their places of business (often their homes) available for constant inspection to DHHS employees. The amended version simply allows providers of small-scale child care to undergo a background check and register with DHHS - nothing is mandated, but small-scale providers who want to undergo an additional certification can choose to. I opposed this when it was first introduced, spoke extensively with the lobbyist behind it, and believe that it was at least partially due to our work that it was so dramatically reduced in scope.

SB368 - SIGNED!

Originally, this bill was a measure designed to protect the 4th Amendment in Nevada from the Supreme Court's decision in Utah v. Strieff. That decision allows police to use any evidence they may discover during an illegal search if they find afterwards that the suspect has a warrant out for their arrest. We strongly supported SB368 when it was a bill designed to keep "fruit of the poisonous tree" out of the hands of Nevada's police, but it was radically amended at the last minute. The entire bill text was erased and replaced with a cost-of-living pay raise for state employees. While I take no position on pay raises for state employees, SB368's journey is a perfect illustration of how strangely shadowy, and bureaucratic the halls of the Legislature can sometimes be.

So that's Nevada's 2017 Legislative Session! Working on your behalf has been a dream come true for me, and I hope to return to the post in 2019. Showing the world what libertarianism looks like in practice can't happen overnight - it's slow, granular, and requires visibility and good-faith contact with non-libertarians. But though the Legislative Session is wrapping up, I still have the time and passion to keep working for the cause of liberty in Nevada. I'm honored and excited to serve as your new At-Large Representative. My priority is growing the Party by reaching out in understanding and good faith to new, untapped portions of the electorate, then working with them wherever I can (as I have at the Legislature) to achieve stepwise victories for human freedom.

My inbox is always open. If you ever have questions, concerns, or ideas, please don't hesitate to reach out.

Subject: Senior Corps & AmeriCorps Respond to the Opioid Epidemic in all 50 states

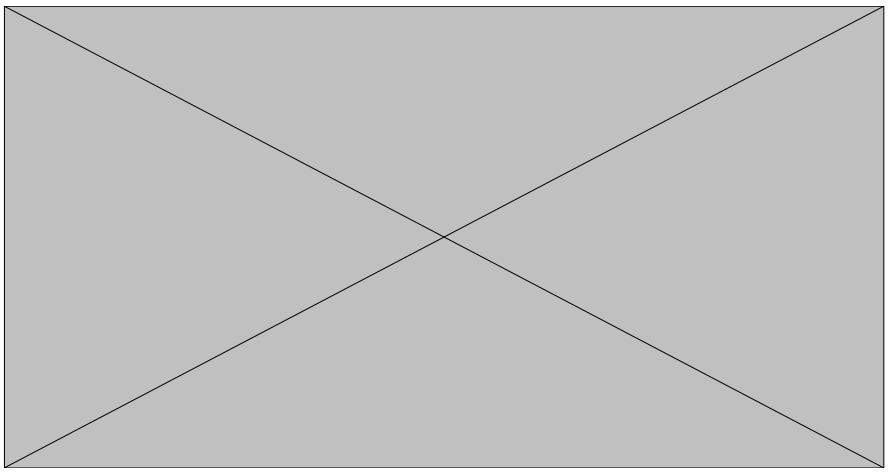
National Service Responds to Opioid Crisis



Our nation is in the midst of an unprecedented prescription drug and opioid abuse epidemic. More than 72,000 Americans died from a drug overdose last year and 2.4 million Americans currently struggle with opioid addiction. This crisis is causing devastating effects on families, workplaces, the health care system, states, and communities. October is National Substance Abuse Prevention Month, but the battle is year-round.

The Corporation for National and Community Service (CNCS) is committed to the fight. In the past two years, CNCS has invested more than $14.9 million in AmeriCorps and Senior Corps projects dedicated to reducing prescription drug and opioid abuse. This investment has supported more than 1,800 AmeriCorps members and Senior Corps volunteers across all 50 states. In return for serving their country, CNCS is investing $5.8 million in education awards for AmeriCorps members combating the epidemic. AmeriCorps alumni can use these awards to pay for college, vocational training, or to pay back student loans.

AmeriCorps members and Senior Corps volunteers provide prescription drug and opioid abuse education, serve as recovery coaches, build capacity for anti-drug organizations, and help prevent relapse and recidivism.

National Prescription Drug Take Back Day
Saturday, October 27th

CNCS has teamed up with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration to support National Prescription Drug Take Back Day on Saturday, October 27th. This is a day for Americans across the country to do their part to fight the opioid crisis simply by safely disposing of unwanted prescription medications. Take Back Day is one of many ways CNCS is working to combat the opioid epidemic.

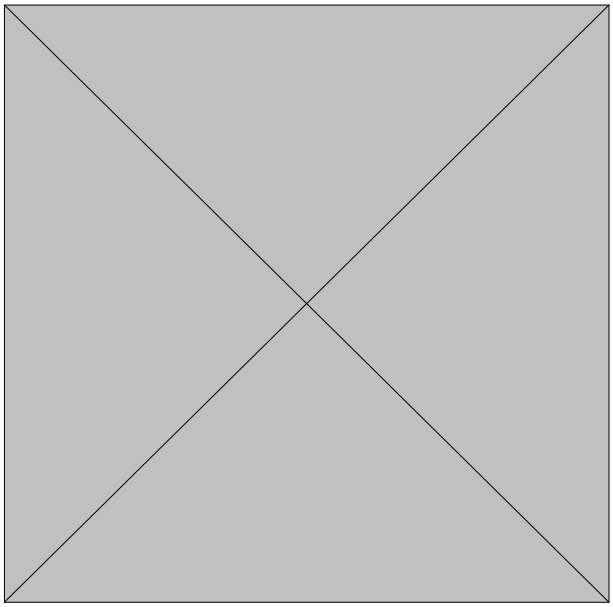
Harris Cosponsors Landmark Bill to End Federal Prohibition of Marijuana

Marijuana Justice Act seeks to reverse decades of policy that has disproportionately impacted communities of color, low-income communities



Watch Senator Harris on NowThis

WASHINGTON, D.C. – U.S. Senator Kamala Harris (D-CA) today became the fourth U.S. senator to cosponsor Senator Cory Booker's (D-NJ) landmark bill to end the federal prohibition on marijuana. The Marijuana Justice Act would remove marijuana from the list of controlled substances, making it legal at the federal level. Harris announced her support of the bill in a video.

"Right now in this country people are being arrested, being prosecuted, and end up spending time in jail or prison all because of their use of a drug that otherwise should be considered legal," Senator Harris said. "Making marijuana legal at the federal level is the smart thing to do, it's the right thing to do. I know this as a former prosecutor and I know it as a senator."

In addition to removing marijuana from the list of controlled substances, the bill would incentivize states through federal funds to change their marijuana laws if those laws were shown to have a disproportionate effect on low-income individuals and/or people of color. The bill is retroactive and would apply to those already serving time behind bars for marijuana-related offenses, providing for a judge's review of marijuana sentences.

Specifically, the Marijuana Justice Act will:

- Remove marijuana from the list of controlled substances, making it legal at the federal level;

- Incentivize states through federal funds to change their marijuana laws if marijuana in the state is illegal and the state disproportionately arrests or incarcerates low-income individuals or people of color for marijuana-related offenses;

- Automatically expunge federal marijuana use and possession crimes;

- Allow an individual currently serving time in federal prison for marijuana use or possession crimes to petition a court for a resentencing;

- Create a community reinvestment fund to reinvest in communities most impacted by the failed War on Drugs and allow those funds to be invested in the following programs:

    - Job training;
    - Reentry services;
    - Expenses related to the expungement of convictions;
    - Public libraries;
    - Community centers;
    - Programs and opportunities dedicated to youth; and
    - Health education

State Minimum Wage Proposals Could Spike Under Trump

EXPERT ANALYSIS

Employment Law Possibilities Under President Trump

President-Elect Donald Trump offered little specifics about employment law policies on the campaign trail, but he painted enough broad brush strokes to offer some possibilities. He also energized whites, a demographic group not emphasized since George Wallace’s failed candidacy. That reality points all of us in a starkly new direction for employment law, says Michael LeRoy, a professor of law at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

Foreign Affairs Outlook For Trump Presidency, 115th Congress

In assessing how domestic and foreign affairs issues may play out during President-elect Trump’s term, it’s important to keep in mind that not everything a presidential candidate says during an election campaign is predictive of exactly how he will act as president. This is particularly the case for Mr. Trump, who, more than most presidential candidates, relied on general foreign policy prescriptions without providing many details, say Andrew Zausner and Alan Slomowitz of Greenberg Traurig LLP.

The U.S. Department of Labor’s final rule on overtime could qualify many more journalists, photographers and other creative professionals for overtime pay under the Fair Labor Standards Act. And, a look at why the prison reform bill is a bad start at fixing our criminal justice system.

Civil Rights Groups Criticize Congress' Tepid Prison Reform Bill

New legislation that moved through the House Judiciary Committee this week makes some small changes to poor prison conditions, but is being criticized by the Brennan Center and other civil rights groups for not doing anything to change the sentencing laws that put people behind bars unnecessarily. Former Attorney General Eric Holder called the bill — known as the FIRST STEP Act — a poor starting point that does little to repair the country's broken justice system.

"This narrow 'prison reform' bill won't deliver the transformative change we need," said Holder. "The only way to achieve that is by passing strong, bipartisan, comprehensive sentencing reform."

Inimai Chettiar called the bill a "distraction" from more those comprehensive fixes, which are supported by a bipartisan coalition of advocates and lawmakers.

Meek Mill s Story Highlights How Progressive Prosecutors Can Reform Probation & Parole

James Cullen and Ty Parks

In and out of prison for the last decade, songwriter and recording artist Meek Mill is out on bail after being detained last year on probation violations. His case is ongoing, and there's no assurance that he won't wind up back behind bars.

Like millions of people — particularly young men of color — Mill has been swept up in the cycle of incarceration. Despite the fanfare, his story is tragically ordinary. But it suggests that major reforms to the way we implement probation and parole may keep many Americans from being unnecessarily incarcerated.

Reviving the War on Drugs is Exactly the Wrong Response to the Opioid Crisis

Ames Grawert and Jay Cullen

Lawmakers met on Capitol Hill last month to discuss a bill that would impose draconian mandatory minimum sentences on even minor crimes involving the synthetic opioid fentanyl. The legislation is reflective of the logic of mass incarceration - the drive to demand the harshest punishment possible. Ali Watkins

Federal prosecutors are more aggressively prosecuting low-level gun possession cases, writes Ali Watkins in The New York Times. Recently-released data from the Bureau of Justice Statistics shows that the country's incarceration rate in 2016 was the lowest it's been in 20 years, writes German Lopez for VOX. While detailing steps that'll continue to drop the prison population, he notes that "incarceration is a pretty inefficient way to keep the public safe," adding that research by the Brennan Center has shown it's responsible for approximately 0 to 7 percent of the crime decline since the 1990s.

While in Las Vegas for the night My family decided to slip over to Balley's from Ellis Island for a late dinner. Thanks to the poor quality of the sidewalk my wife caught her foot on an uplift in front of a souvenir stand and fell face first in to the sidewalk. She commented it would be a nice story, except she had not been drinking.
(4136 Koval Lane, Las Vegas, NV 89169)

The result was a badly bruised wrist and a dusty dignity.

So, after leaving them at Balley's for dinner I trudged over to Walgreen's across from the Mirage Hotel. Amazed at the huge crowd so late on a Sunday night I decided to capture a short video clip to share while I plowed through the crowd. ~07/17/16, 9:27 PM UTC-7

Over the next 15 minutes or so I experienced several alerts on my phone related to access to the hot spot feature and networking on my phone. It repeatedly resulted in changing the phone into airplane mode a total of 5 times, with me rebooting the phone every time.

The only conclusion I can make is that there were repeated attempts to hack into the phone as this has not happened before, nor has it happened in the following 45 hours. Nor did it happen once I had crossed the street to the Mirage Hotel.

Thank you. Please do something about investigating the hacking attempt.

And please fix that sidewalk... Now that we are home we will be visiting to doctor to be sure the injury is only a bit of bruising.

From: Libertarian Party of Nevada
Sent: Wed 4/12/2017 2:05:07 PM
Subject: [Newsletter] [Marketing Mail] Missives from the Front: The LP going over the top for your freedom!

[redacted]

Friend --

Though my time at the Legislature was cut short last week due to a family bereavement, the Libertarian Party of Nevada still managed to testify or otherwise comment on many important bills.

Before I tell you what we were busy with this week, though, you should know what's coming up! To share your opinion on any of these bills with the legislators and committees reviewing them, go here and type in the relevant bill number. It'll send your message directly to the sponsors and co-sponsors. As some bills have more than ten sponsors, this is a great time-saver.

AB384 is a "ban the box" bill that would help the more than one in four Nevadans with criminal histories be able to find work. Essentially, it would remove the initial "Have you ever been arrested?" or "Do you have a criminal history?" checkbox from job applications for state and county agencies. The goal is simply to give people with criminal or arrest records a chance to get in the door for an interview. As overbroad and abusive as the War on Drugs has been, nonviolent offenses are extremely common; they shouldn't stop people from finding gainful employment. Many offenders are even required to maintain gainful employment as a condition of their release, but the criminal history checkbox creates a Catch-22. They find themselves trapped. States that have banned the box have seen recidivism rates decrease markedly. As it turns out, one of the best ways to stay out of prison is to build a job and a life outside of it.

SB261 would legalize the prescription of life-ending drugs "if the patient: (1) is at least 18 years of age; (2) has been diagnosed with a terminal condition by at least two physicians; (3) is a resident of this State; (4) has made an informed and voluntary decision to end his or her own life; and (5) is competent." We believe that individual autonomy extends to the right to end your own life, as well. If you own yourself, you can choose to end your life. Suicide should never be a crime. Moreover, this bill will protect physicians who only wish to help people suffering from terminal diseases. No one should be forced by law to linger indefinitely in a living hell. However, I'll be unable to testify personally on this bill, so we really need your help getting it passed. Please go here and show your legislators that you support SB261.

AB461 would, if passed, make the week following Martin Luther King, Jr.'s birthday "Peace Week" in Nevada. The Libertarian Party has long been the party of peace, and we believe that practical and symbolic gestures encouraging a culture of peace and tolerance are more important now than ever. This bill is technically toothless, but would encourage the people of Nevada to build bridges between polarized groups, engage in quiet reflection, and live compassionately in the spirit of peace. As Dr. King said, "Darkness cannot drive out darkness; only light can do that. Hate cannot drive out hate; only love can do that." We are happy to support this bill.

Under existing law, opioid antagonists can only be administered by a physician, physician's assistant, or advanced practice registered nurse with a prescription. AB428 would allow pharmacists and school nurses to dispense opioid antagonists to those at risk of an overdose or those in a position to assist them without a prescription. The opioid epidemic is incredibly deadly: Drug overdoses killed more than 560,000 Americans between 1999 and 2015. But we can prevent some of these overdoses by reducing prescription drug controls around the antagonists that are used to treat them.

AB353, sponsored by Americans For Prosperity, would insert a provision to require the Sunset Subcommittee of the Legislative Commission to review the qualifications required to obtain an occupational license. Its goal would be to determine whether the personal qualifications are (1) the least restrictive regulation possible, and (2) demonstrably necessary and carefully tailored to fulfill legitimate public health, safety, or welfare objectives. Should the Sunset Subcommittee find the personal qualifications in the occupational regulations do not fulfill these objectives, it will recommend the repeal or amendment of those qualification requirements. Essentially, this bill would set up the long-term reduction of occupational licensing requirements in Nevada. Ideologically, this bill is excellent, enshrining some libertarian principles into Nevada law: "The Legislature declares that it is the policy of this State that: (a) The right of a natural person to pursue an occupation is a fundamental right; [and] (b) Occupational regulations shall be construed and applied to increase economic opportunities, promote competition, and encourage innovation." While we don't agree with AFP on everything, this is a bill where we're happy to join hands with them.

AB418 ensures that "a voter may not be compelled to reveal under oath how he or she voted at any election." It also extends the same confidentiality protections to "records printed on paper of ballots voted by using a mechanical recording device" that are currently extended to all other paper ballots - they are not subject to inspection by anyone, except in cases of a contested election, and then only by the judge, body or board before whom the election is being contested. We believe Sections 1 and 2 of this bill are excellent privacy measures. Additionally, under current law, any recount requires an initial recount of a representative 5% of ballots cast - after which a full recount is done if the initial recount shows a serious discrepancy. Section 3 of this bill removes the initial recount step and provides instead that all recounts must include a count and inspection of all ballots. While fully establishing the legitimacy of our elections is important, this provision has the potential to be expensive, though some counties already require all ballots to be recounted by hand. The individual requesting the recount is the one who bears the cost, unless the recount changes the result of the election - so eliminating the 5% step may dissuade individuals from requesting recounts in the first place. I'm split on this bill - the privacy protections in Sections 1 and 2 are excellent, but Section 3 may result in increased financial costs for the parties requesting recounts.

AB463 would revamp current marijuana taxes via alteration of the Nevada Constitution. It's fairly complicated, but would, overall, result in substantially lower taxes on medical marijuana sales and slightly higher taxes on recreational marijuana sales. It would eliminate the excise taxes on wholesale sales by facilities producing edibles or marijuana-infused products and on retail sales by a medical marijuana dispensaries. However, it would impose an excise tax on marijuana cultivation facilities. Most notably, it would impose caps on business license fees for medical marijuana dispensaries at 5%. Las Vegas currently imposes a 7% business license fee, for example, so this cap is an excellent idea. It's a bit of a trade-off, but the overall goal of this bill is to simplify the tax structure of medical and recreational marijuana sales, which currently diverges quite a bit. From the discussion during the hearing, I think it's likely this bill will be heavily workshopped, or potentially folded into one of the other active marijuana measures this session.

SJR14 would alter the Nevada Constitution to reset depreciation on real estate for the purpose of property taxes at the point of sale, resulting in increased property taxes for buyers upon the purchase of the property. It does not raise property taxes on those who currently own homes. During the hearing, NAOC referred repeatedly to the "Constitutional impediment" to this measure. Good! I don't like it either. They're already excitedly planning "new ways to spend some of this extra property tax revenue." Don't they already thieve enough money from our pockets?

Last week, we worked on the following bills:

AB402 is very similar to SB415, but includes diapers in the category of items to be rendered tax-exempt. We reject sales taxes generally, and we will support most legislation rendering products tax-exempt. Feminine hygiene products are a necessity, and taxing them is fundamentally gender-biased. And while every infant needs diapers, the act of purchasing them still falls disproportionately on women - which means the taxes do, too. When the Sales and Use Tax Act of 1955 was approved by referendum, the world was a very different place. Women's rights have come a long way since then, and we believe that this tax is a relic of a bygone era.

SB368 is Senator Aaron Ford's answer to Utah v. Strieff, a Supreme Court case from last year which allows police officers to use any evidence they find during an illegal arrest or search if they find that there's an unrelated warrant out for your arrest. Even something as innocuous as an unpaid parking ticket could allow the police to use illegally-obtained evidence. Before Utah v. Strieff, this evidence would have been considered "fruit of the poisonous tree" - but now, if there's a warrant out for your arrest for any reason, they can. Utah v. Strieff fundamentally altered police officers' incentives - they now have no reason not to search anyone in dehumanizing - and frequently racially motivated - fishing expeditions. The State has no right to strip its citizens of dignity and bodily autonomy without probable cause, and implicit bias and racial profiling do not qualify. What SB368 does is reverse Utah v. Strieff in the State of Nevada - making this bill a vital defense of Nevadans' Fourth Amendment rights. I was proud to support it.

SB402 would ban the use of solitary confinement in Nevada's prisons. All research indicates that solitary confinement is inhumane and psychologically damaging to the individuals who are subjected to it. The Libertarian Party of Nevada believes that the state has no right to lock you in a tiny room, alone, losing yourself in the darkness. Not only is the practice used in Nevada, inmates are sometimes exposed to extreme isolation for years. This is cruel and unusual punishment. We strongly agree with Senator Spearman and the ACLU: The state has no right to punitively isolate inmates.

AB326 and AB291 - which I sent statements in for the week before last - was rescheduled for a hearing last week instead, and I made sure to be there. These bills would require the Division of Parole and Probation and the Division of Public Safety to substantiate and provide sources for information related to the defendant's offense in presentence reports, which are used by judges to decide the weight of a defendant's sentence after conviction. Given the weight that these reports carry in determining the course of a defendant's life, justice requires that they be unimpeachably accurate. Hearsay or unsourced allegations would not be sufficient in a court of law and should not be sufficient in a report which determines a person's fate.

AB365 creates a pathway for officiants who are neither ministers nor notaries to become registered to perform marriages in Nevada. It also creates a new class of certificate that the State can sell for $25, a "Vow Renewal." As Nevada is one of the United States' largest destinations for marriage tourism, selling legally-meaningless "Vow Renewals" is an excellent way for the state to accumulate voluntary revenue - and is likely to be excellent for Nevada's economy.

SB329 and SB378 are enormous marijuana omnibus bills. While I think it's unlikely either of these monster bills will make it through unmodified, they contain multiple excellent provisions that were worth supporting. Section 16 of SB329 allows medical marijuana to be prescribed for PTSD and other chronic conditions. This bill also expands how and where Nevadans can grow and use their own marijuana with its Patients' Bill of Rights concerning home-grow provisions regarding live plants and seeds. SB329 is also beneficial for Nevada's economy, legalizing medical marijuana research and broadening industrial hemp-growing - both fields where Nevada has a strong opportunity to become a national innovator. Hemp grows very well in this state and requires substantially less water than cotton, making it a good fit for Nevadan agriculture. After all, George Washington cultivated hemp at Mount Vernon for industrial uses throughout his lifetime. There is nothing more quintessentially American than growing industrial hemp.

We also appreciate the compassionate, common-sense liberalizations of medical marijuana regulations provided by SB378. We particularly appreciate Sections 12 and 13 of this bill, which would allow those on the medical marijuana registry to have CCW permits, as important defenses of the Second Amendment. Veterans and many others find relief from the use of medical marijuana. Preventing them from possessing CCW permits on the grounds of using a "controlled substance" - when the only reason they need to is the service they gave our country - is coldhearted. We also believe that Section 22 of this bill, which stipulates that the odor of marijuana is insufficient probable cause for a search, is an essential defense of the Fourth Amendment.

AB356 and AB376 both require the State to disclose any exculpatory evidence they may hold against a defendant. Due process requires full transparency; a jury cannot make a fair decision without a complete picture of the evidence before them, and any failure to disclose exculpatory evidence undermines the quality of their work and our justice system. The battle between defense and prosecution isn't a game in which to score points - these are people's lives, and truth matters.

That's all for now! Meetings this week are constantly being scheduled, re-scheduled, un-scheduled, and scheduled again. If anything else comes up, don't worry - you'll find out next week! After the bill deadline on April 14th, things should slow down a little. Bills will start repeating, and I'll be telling you about what measures move forward or die.

Until next time,

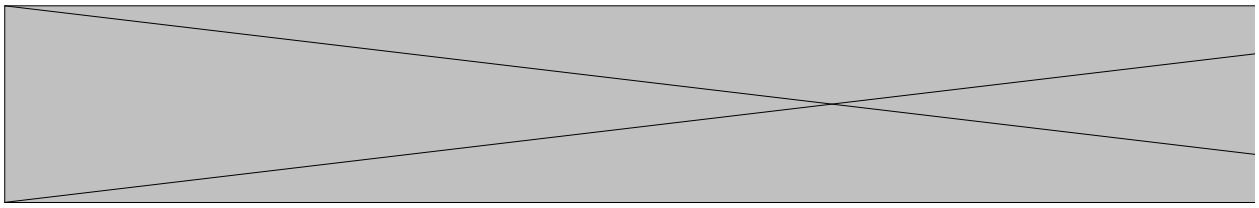
Hot Off the Presses – Our Analysis of the President's Budget



Analysis of the President's FY 2020 Budget

March 11, 2019

Read the paper.

The Trump Administration released its Fiscal Year (FY) 2020 budget proposal today, outlining the Preside spending priorities over the next decade. By the budget's own estimates, it would put debt on a downward pat economy after 2022 and balance the budget within 15 years.

We support the President's goal of reducing debt relative to GDP and are pleased he offers a reasonable t eventual balance. We also welcome the budget's thoughtful proposals to slow health care cost growth and r spending programs.

However, the budget is riddled with gimmicks and unrealistic assumptions. In particular, it hides the cost of ex in its baseline, circumvents budget caps in order to extend recent defense hikes through a war spending acc on incredibly rosy economic growth assumptions.

In this paper, we analyze the budget. Our main findings include:

- According to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB), debt under the President's budget woul percent of Gross Domestic Product (GDP) today to 71 percent of GDP by 2029. Using more realistic a economic growth, we estimate debt would rise to roughly 87 percent of GDP.
- The budget claims $2.8 trillion of net deficit reduction over a decade. However, incorporating the $1. extending tax cuts and excluding assumed reductions in war spending, actual savings in the budget w trillion.
- Discretionary proposals in the budget are both misleading and unrealistic. The President proposed defense hikes, using a special war spending designation to circumvent spending caps in 2020 and 202 also calls for $1.1 trillion of largely unspecified non-defense cuts, reducing spending to about 60 perc (inflation-adjusted) levels by 2029.
- The President's budget puts forward a number of thoughtful mandatory spending changes (and a fe increase receipts) – especially reforms to Medicare which would reduce costs of beneficiaries and
- Projections in the President's budget are heavily influenced by extremely rosy economic assumptions. average real GDP growth of nearly 3 percent per year, while most forecasters project less than 2 pe growth.

While we are encouraged that the President's budget includes a reasonable fiscal goal and thoughtful defi policies, in reality the budget would fail to meet even the goal of stabilizing the debt. The budget relies far t unrealistic assumptions, back-door tax cuts, and defense spending increases.

Spending, Revenue, Deficits, and Debt in the President's Budget

According to its own estimates, the President's budget would substantially slow the growth of debt – th Administration's rosy economic assumptions already suggest roughly stable debt levels absent the budget. S would grow from $16.2 trillion today to $24.8 trillion by 2029 under the President's budget, compared to $27. OMB's baseline.

As a share of GDP, under the President's budget, debt would increase from 78 percent in 2018 to 82 percent declining to 71 percent of GDP by 2029. By comparison, debt under OMB's baseline will remain relatively s

Removing OMB's rosy economic assumptions, the Congressional Budget Office's (CBO) baseline estimates 93 percent of GDP by 2029. Based on those same assumptions, we estimate debt under the President's budg roughly 87 percent of GDP by 2029.

Under the President's budget projections, annual deficits would increase in the near term but fall over the rest
Specifically, the deficit would increase from $779 billion in 2018 to $1.1 trillion in 2020 before falling to $202 bi a share of GDP, deficits would increase from 3.8 percent in 2018 to 5.1 percent in 2019 before falling to 0.6 p
By comparison, OMB's baseline projects a deficit of 2.7 percent of GDP ($927 billion) in 2029. Again, realis assumptions would result in higher deficits both under the baseline and under the President's budget. Using assumptions, we estimate the deficit in 2029 would still be more than 3 percent of GDP.

Based on the budget's numbers, revenue would fall as a share of GDP in the near term but ultimately grow historical average, while spending as a share of GDP would fall over time. Specifically, spending would fall fro of GDP in 2018 to 18.7 percent by 2029, while revenue would shrink from 16.5 percent of GDP in 2018 to 16 2019 before growing to 18.1 percent by 2029. By contrast, revenue and spending in the OMB baseline wou percent and 20.7 percent, respectively, in 2029.

Spending decreases relative to GDP are largely driven by assumptions of a rapidly growing economy as well defense discretionary programs. Reductions in the growth of Medicaid, Medicare, welfare-related program mandatory programs also help spending levels to decline relative to GDP.

The near-term decline in revenue under the budget is driven by tax cuts in effect as a result of the 2017 tax la of rapid economic growth, along with certain elements of the tax cuts that raise more or lose less over time, la growth in revenue over the next decade.

Proposals in the President's Budget

The President's budget estimates it would achieve about $2.8 trillion in deficit reduction over a decade. Ho estimates do not include the costs of extending parts of the 2017 tax law (embedded in OMB's baseline), an zeroing out of war funding in future years as a budgetary savings.

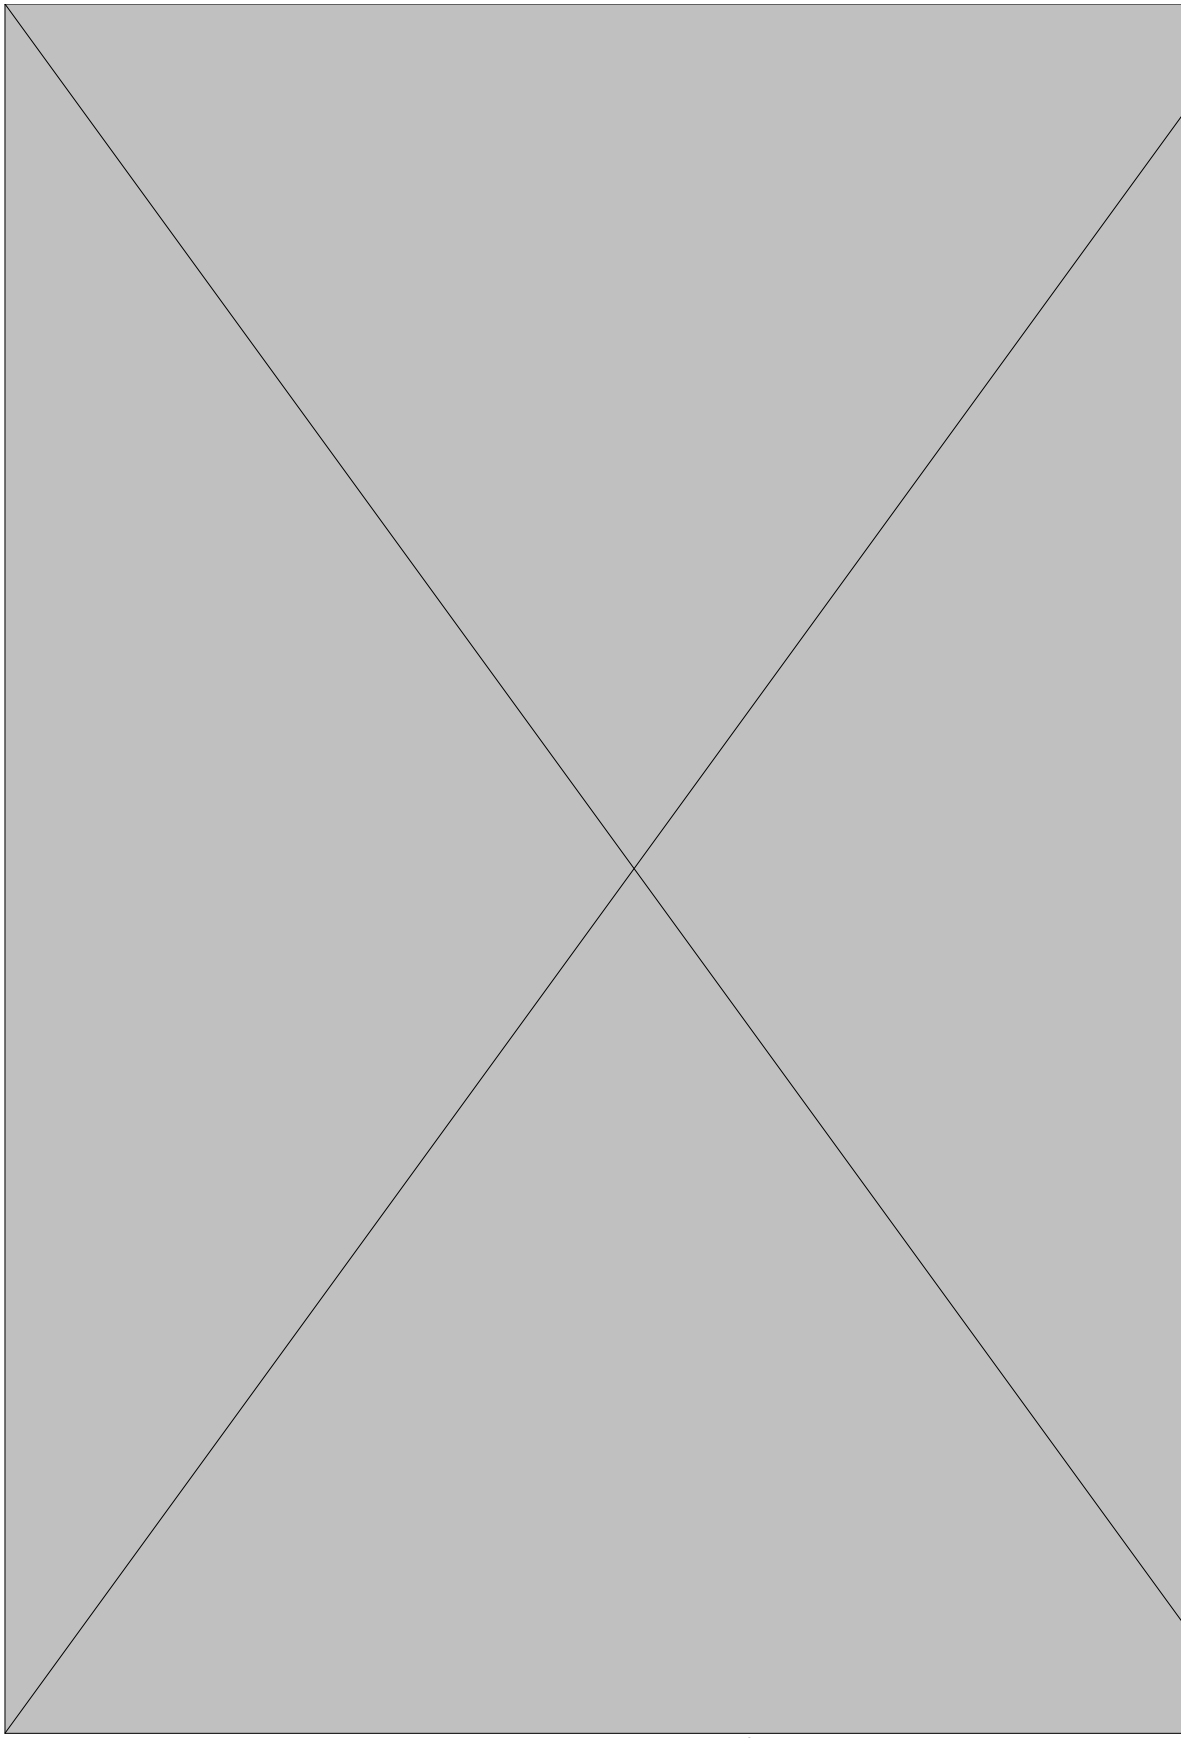
Adjusting for these assumptions results in $1.2 trillion in net deficit reduction from policies, including $1.1 trill to non-defense discretionary spending, $1.3 trillion in health savings, $1.2 trillion in other deficit reduction, an interest savings – partially offset by $430 billion of spending and tax breaks for new initiatives, $1 trillion in def and $1.1 trillion of tax cuts embedded in the baseline.

Extend the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act ($1.1 trillion) – The President's budget assumes that tax provisions for are otherwise set to expire after 2025 under the 2017 tax law would instead be extended. Because this assu into the President's baseline, it does not appear as a new initiative in the budget itself. However, it would s increase deficits relative to current law or what was projected after the tax law's passage.

Increase Defense Spending, Initially Through the OCO Gimmick ($1 trillion) – Under current law, defen scheduled to fall by 11 percent next year as recent spending increases are replaced with sequester-level President's budget calls for avoiding these cuts and instead increasing defense spending by 5 percent this yea amounts over the next decade. To avoid raising the 2020 discretionary cap on defense spending, the budget f defense increase through the Overseas Contingency Operations (OCO) account, which is designated for wa not subject to the caps. This blatant gimmick is repeated for 2021, after which the Administration proposes to defense spending through the ordinary budget category.

Enact New Initiatives ($430 billion) – The President's budget proposes roughly $430 billion of spending an new initiatives. Most significantly, the budget includes a $200 billion infrastructure proposal. The budget als spend $20 billion of spending and tax breaks to provide for paid parental leave, $45 billion for a new sch scholarship program, $40 billion to allow more health insurance plans to offer Health Savings Accounts, and fully fund the VA MISSION Act of 2018 outside of the discretionary budget.

Restore Sequester and Reduce Non-Defense Discretionary (NDD) Spending with the Two-Penny Pla $1.1 trillion) – The President's budget would allow non-defense discretionary spending to return to the seq 2020, a 9 percent reduction from 2019 levels. Beyond that, the Administration calls for a further 2 percent per (the "two-penny plan"), even as inflation rises by a similar amount. These cuts would result in total NDD a reductions of $1.1 trillion over ten years and a $235 billion cut in 2029 – about 30 percent below baseline a percent below 2019 inflation-adjusted levels.



Repeal and Replace the Affordable Care Act and Cap Medicaid (-$660 billion) – The President's budge repeal and replace the Affordable Care Act (ACA or "Obamacare") in a similar manner as the Graham-Ca Johnson proposal. This would replace the ACA's premium subsidies and Medicaid expansion with either a fle grant or per-capita cap while also capping the growth of base Medicaid. Growth of both the block grant/cap would be limited to inflation. The Administration estimates this would save $660 billion over a decade afte interactions.

Enact Health Reforms (-$645 billion) – The budget also proposes $645 billion in health care savings largely and reducing Medicare provider payments. Specifically, the budget would equalize payments for similar serv hospitals and physician's offices, slow the growth of post-acute care payments, and reduce compensation to h debts. In addition, the President's budget proposes to remove payments for medical residents (graduate med and uncompensated care (disproportionate share hospital payments) out of Medicare and into their own pro capping their growth. (Note this proposal has led some to wrongly assume nearly $850 billion of Medicare cut by counting as savings spending that would be moved from Medicare to another program). The President's proposes a number of policies designed to reduce spending on prescription drugs by about $70 billon. In addi includes about $75 billion of assorted Medicaid savings (outside of caps and ACA changes) and estimates abo savings from enacting medical malpractice reform. Importantly, these changes would significantly reduce spending both for the federal government and for Medicare beneficiaries.

Reform Welfare Programs (-$260 billion) – The President's budget would pare back and reform severa programs. It would reduce the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP or "food stamps") by $220 home-delivered food boxes, eligibility limitations, and program integrity improvements. The budget would sav billion through other means-tested programs, including by eliminating Social Services Block Grants and cutti Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) block grants.

Reduce Other Mandatory Spending (-$625 billion) – The President's budget includes a variety of other cut to other mandatory spending. As with last year's budget, it includes more than $200 billion of savings on high consolidating the multiple income-driven loan repayment programs into a single plan with a higher cap o repayments, eliminating the in-school interest subsidy, and ending public service loan forgiveness. The budg around $100 billion from modifying federal employee health and retirement benefits, $100 billion from reform service, $50 billion from reducing farm subsidies, and $45 billion from other savings. In addition, the budg thoughtful reforms to the Social Security Disability Insurance (SSDI) and Supplemental Security Income (S programs; of the $75 billion in claimed savings, two-thirds come from optimistic assumptions of the effectiven work programs while the other third comes from measurable savings.

Increase Revenue and Receipts (-$275 billion) – Additional deficit reduction in the budget comes from i government receipts and, in some cases, increases in tax revenue. For example, the budget would increase $45 billion from funding the IRS to conduct audits, and by another $100 billion from requiring Social Security n to collect tax credits, requiring states to raise their unemployment taxes to finance paid family leave, and end breaks for renewable energy. The budget also generates nearly $30 billion from new user fees on immigration food inspection, among other things. It also raises premiums related to the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp Government-Sponsored Enterprises like Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac. Finally, the budget also generates add selling or leasing various government assets, including wireless spectrum.

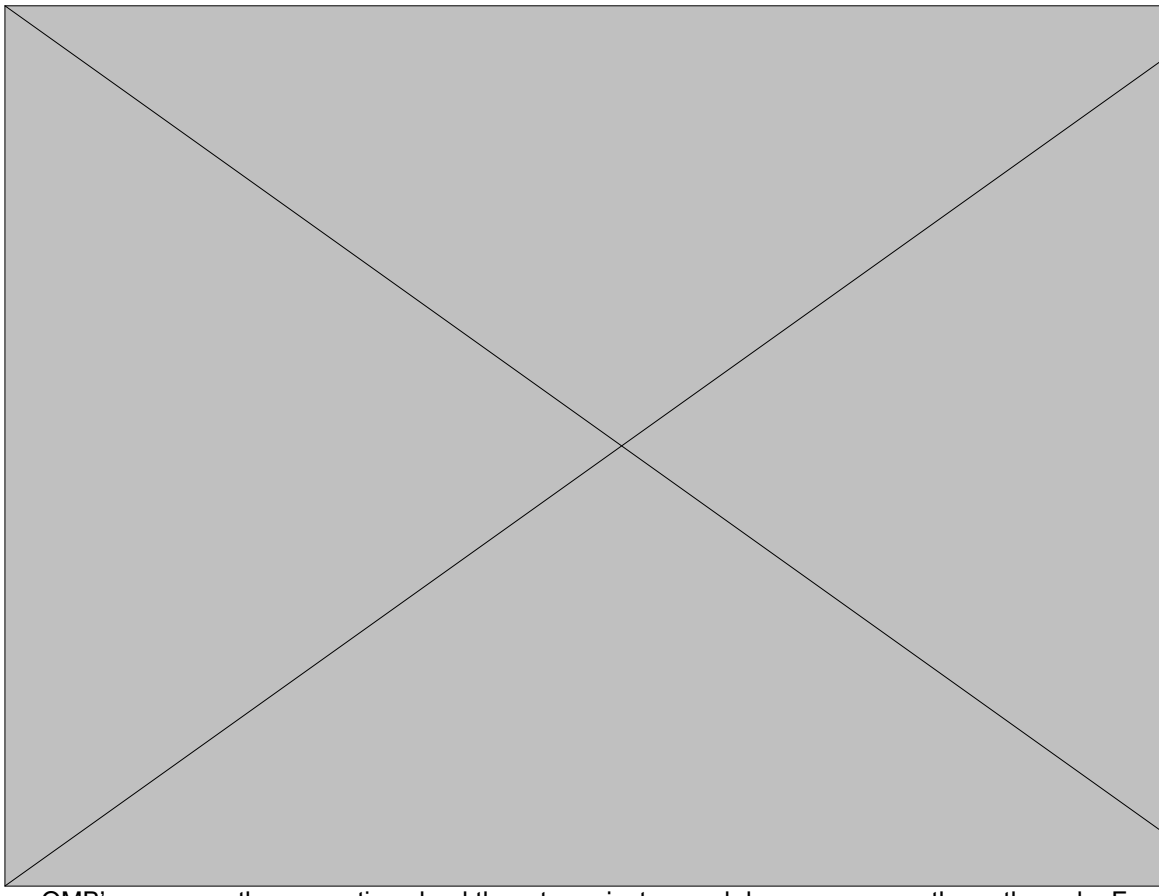
Economic Assumptions

A budget's economic assumptions underlie every single estimate it makes. The assumptions in this President' the past two budgets – are overly optimistic and far outside of mainstream forecasts. While it is certainly rea budget assumes its policies have an effect on the economy, this budget's growth assumptions, which aver percent over a decade, are unlikely to reflect reality.

OMB projects real (inflation adjusted) GDP growth of 3.2 percent in 2019 and 3.1 percent growth for 2020, eve down to 2.8 percent in 2026 and beyond.

The economic projections in this budget are much more optimistic than other forecasters, especially over the long term. Despite decade-high 2.9 percent growth in 2018, much of that growth will likely prove to be tempo stimulative effects of recent tax cuts and spending increases. Absent this stimulus, the aging population sug rates will be closer to, and possibly below, 2 percent per year.

CBO, for example, expects growth to fall to 2.7 percent in 2019 and 1.9 percent in 2020 before leveling off ar percent for the rest of the decade. Likewise, the Federal Reserve projects long-term sustained growth of 1.9 p and the Blue Chip average for sustained growth is only slightly higher.



Over time, OMB's rosy growth assumptions lead them to project a much larger economy than others do. For estimates GDP would total nearly $35 trillion in 2029 – a full 12 percent above CBO's $31 trillion proj

These differences allow OMB to assume much smaller levels of debt. If we used CBO's economic assumptio estimate (very roughly) that debt would reach 87 percent of GDP by 2029, rather than falling to 71 pe

OMB's excess GDP assumptions are especially curious given that their interest rate assumptions are sim estimates. Typically, a percent of faster growth would lead to about a percent increase in interest rates – thu some of the fiscal feedback from faster growth (since it would mean higher interest payments). Yet OMB pro percentage point more of growth than CBO, despite estimating that three-month and ten-year Treasuries wou percent and 3.7 percent, respectively – in line with CBO's estimates of 2.8 and 3.7 percent.

The other economic indicators in the President's budget are also roughly in line with other forecasts. OMB unemployment rate to average 3.6 percent in 2020, which is the same as the Federal Reserve's estimate. An unemployment rate to increase to 4.2 percent in 2025 and remain there through 2029, which may be a little c still in line with other forecasts.

OMB projects inflation as measured by the GDP deflator to remain basically flat at 2 percent, similar to projec other forecasters.

Conclusion

We are encouraged that the President's budget sets a reasonable fiscal goal that, according to its estimates, on a downward path relative to the economy. The President's budget deserves praise for putting forward a thoughtful policies to reduce spending growth. The Medicare policies in the President's budget, in particular, costs and improve value of care for beneficiaries while also slowing the growth of the second largest and fa program in the budget.

Unfortunately, the budget relies on a series of gimmicks to cut taxes and increase defense spending by over $ the former by hiding the cost in the baseline and the latter by abusing the OCO designation meant to cover
These gimmicks not only produce bad fiscal outcomes but also perpetuate bad budget processe

Equally troubling, the budget relies on extremely rosy economic growth projections to mask large deficits. Usir growth assumptions, debt would rise to roughly 87 percent of GDP rather than falling to 71 perce

Substantial new revenue and spending cuts are still needed to address our rising debt, even if the President' enacted in its entirety.

With recent discretionary spending cap increases slated to expire and as the debt ceiling returns, we worry th be for more deficits, not less.

The Administration has an opportunity to lead on fiscal issues this year to assure that cap increases are offs reduction is considered.

But leadership means putting all parts of the budget and tax code on the table to find savings and new revenu over the problem with gimmicks, gains, and fantasy growth.

Policymakers Should Work Together to Reduce Drug Costs

May 11, 2018

For Immediate Release

President Trump outlined several proposals to reduce prescription drug prices in a speech Friday. The fo statement from Maya MacGuineas, president of the Committee for a Responsible Federal Budge

Rising prescription drug costs are a significant driver of growing Medicare costs, and growing health car of the biggest drivers of the nation's long-term budget challenges.

We welcome efforts from the President to work at controlling these costs. The package he outlined toc the proposals in his budget, represent a good start. There are many other ideas out there to reduce pr costs, and we encourage those with alternative or additional ideas to put them forward.

Reducing the costs of prescription drugs is an area where there is significant agreement between the p several of the policies in President Trump's budget to reduce health costs, including for prescription dru to those made by President Obama. We hope the parties work together to develop and pass legislatic growth of prescription drug spending and federal health spending more broadly.

From Dean Dan

Our wonderful colleague Professor Chris Blakesley is a nationally and internationally recognized scholar in international and comparative law. In honor of his retirement at the end of this year, the law school is hosting a symposium called Reconsidering the International Legal Order in Changing Times on Friday, April 7 in the Thomas & Mack Moot Courtroom.

The symposium will include discussion of emerging trends and challenges in international law and human rights law; cybercrime and cyberterrorism; global issues in criminal law; prosecution and alternatives in international criminal law; comparative criminal law and criminal procedure; international and comparative family law; and terrorism and the Constitution.

Professor Blakesley has been recognized by UNLV as a Barrick Distinguished Scholar, and he holds the Cobeaga Law Firm Professorship at Boyd. He is the author of a dozen books on topics ranging from terrorism to family law. He is also a member of the American Law Institute as well as the boards of editors and boards of advisors of many international publications, institutes, and research centers.

To honor Professor Blakesley's years of service to the law school, we have created a scholarship in his name. If you would like to contribute, please visit https://netcommunity.unlv.edu/givetolaw, select "Professor Chris Blakesley Fund" from the drop down menu, and under tribute information, type "Chris Blakesley." Thank you, Chris, for all you have done for Boyd and our students.

Also, we hope to see you tonight at the 18th Annual Public Interest Law Association Auction from 6:00 – 9:00 p.m. at the Smith Center for the Performing Arts. We hope you will join us to support this great cause and help PILA raise funds to finance summer internship grants for Boyd students working in public interest.

Lastly, I encourage you to join thousands of Nevadans today by taking part in Nevada's Big Give. Faculty Spotlight: Jennifer Gross

Head of Collections at the Wiener-Rogers Law Library and Associate Professor

What's the most important thing you are working on right now?

My primary responsibilities focus on my role as Head of Collections for the library and my work in providing research support to other faculty members. On the research side, I am currently working with Professors Rapaport, Sternlight, and Griffin. These projects range from researching promotion and tenure guidelines at other universities to collecting resources on attorneys and jurists and materials that address doctor-patient communications.

Undertaking substantive research for law faculty involves both being able to track down hard-to-find materials and intuit what materials will be most useful for the faculty member; faculty themselves are often trying to determine what's out there before narrowing the scope of the subject on which they will write. In addition, keeping track of three different projects simultaneously can be challenging.

One of my favorite duties as Head of Collections is reviewing new books that are available and selecting those that the library will purchase – basically, I get to spend a lot of time shopping (for books, but it's still shopping). Because the library's collections support the research and teaching at Boyd, I have to know what topics our faculty and students are interested in and writing about and what new curricular offerings are in the mix. This means I am always trying to keep tabs on what is going on at the school; it lets me be a bit of a busybody and satisfy my intellectual curiosity at the same time.

What is the most significant issue facing your field and how should it be addressed?

Many in librarianship are currently focused on information literacy. I started in this profession before the internet existed and just as Lexis and Westlaw were becoming widely available. At that time, we were intent on teaching law students how to find enough information and especially how to make sure that the authorities they found were still good law. Now our focus is on how manage too much information, and how to separate the useful sources from the superfluous ones. We are still learning how to effectively teach students to separate relevant and valid information from an overwhelming background of static.

Which of your recent books or articles should I read?

I edited and partially authored a reference book titled Nevada Legal Research Manual. I don't believe I would encourage anyone to read it cover to cover. However, if you or anyone you know has a question about Nevada legal research, I would love it if you remembered that there is a book that can answer your question.

Student Spotlight: Chelsea Finnegan

Tell us about how you were able to live your dream to be a Nebraska Husker athlete?

Training was a full-time job in high school, so it was an honor to play for such an accomplished college tennis team. Representing Nebraska on court and in the community was challenging and exciting. And while waking up for 6 a.m. training was not always fun, I made lifelong friends and acquired skills that I transferred to law school, like time management, dedication, and teamwork.

Last summer you were a legal intern for the United States Army JAG Corps in Virginia. What did that experience teach you?

Working for the Army was a highlight of my law school career. I drafted appellate briefs and practiced oral arguments for the Army's highest court. The experience taught me a lot about responsibility; they do not take excuses, so there were high expectations of my work product, physical training, and attitude.

What's been your proudest accomplishment as a law student at Boyd?

My proudest accomplishment is currently happening. As a student attorney for the Family Justice Clinic, it is rewarding to already help people with their legal needs. Tackling my 1L oral argument was also huge for me. Most people don't know I am terrified of public speaking! I'd like to think I have come a long way since then.

You graduate in May and take the bar in July. Then what?

In the fall, I will enter the U.S. Army JAG Corps. After training, I will go to my first assignment which could be anywhere in the world. On my first day of law school, I told my Torts class I wanted to be a JAG, so I am excited for this adventure and very thankful to the law school for helping me achieve my goals.

Alumni Spotlight: Trevor Waite 14

Associate at Alverson Taylor Mortensen & Sanders, Member of the Alumni Leadership Circle at

the Boyd School of Law

Tell me about your decision to attend Boyd Law.

My decision to attend Boyd Law was easily made for several reasons. First, I am a Las Vegas native and completed my education from elementary through undergraduate here. Attending Boyd meant that I would complete all my schooling in my hometown, which is something not many people I know can say. Second, in the years leading up to my attendance, Boyd was consistently ranked in the top 100 law schools in the nation. This was extremely important in my decision because it was an indication of the caliber of students attending Boyd, as well as a reflection on the caliber of professors teaching at Boyd. Finally, when compared with other top 100 law schools, Boyd's tuition was reasonable and (at the time) almost half of what some top 100 law schools cost. Vegas + Top 100 + Reasonable Tuition = No Brainer!

You're a member of the Alumni Leadership Circle. Why do you feel it is important to donate to the law school?

I have been very blessed in both my education and business endeavors and therefore have always tried to live in accordance with the concept of gratitude and giving back embodied in one of my favorite quotes by Elder Neal A. Maxwell, a prominent figure in the LDS church: "We should certainly count our blessings, but we should also make our blessings count." Donating to the school allows me to give back to the community that has given me so much and is a way for me to help the next generation prepare for their future in the same way I was helped when I attended Boyd.

What's the best business advice you ever received?

My father, Dan Waite, gave me this advice after swearing me in to the Nevada State Bar: "As an attorney you are endowed with power and trust over the lives and business of your clients. Remember that your most valuable asset is your integrity and if you lose that, you lose everything."

Community Member Spotlight: Bo Bernhard

Executive Director of UNLV's International Gaming Institute, Member of the Gaming Law Advisory Board at the Boyd School of Law

Tell me about your decision to serve on the Gaming Law Advisory Board and what makes Boyd Law's mission meaningful to you.

I serve as Executive Director of UNLV's International Gaming Institute, and my history here at UNLV dates back twenty years now (longer, if you count summer camps I attended on campus as a kid growing up in Las Vegas). I have been deeply impressed by the law school's growth since it was launched here at UNLV, and I jumped at the chance to get involved. In fact, I would say I am as proud of my affiliation with Boyd as I am of any that I have in my academic career. As a partner with Boyd in our new International Center for Gaming Regulation, I am convinced the collaborative work that our International Gaming Institute and Boyd Law does together is unmatched globally.

What was your first or most memorable job?

I worked out in the cart barn at a golf course -- and as soon as the golf pros went home, we would race the carts, backwards, down the fairways. Probably not a smart thing to admit to an audience of attorneys, but there it is.

What advice would you give to current Boyd Law students?

The same advice that I give all of my students: the days of linear 30-year careers are long gone. As such, the key today is to work hard, do great, and then marvel as fantastic things "fall into your lap."

The secret, though: you have to train your brain to scan for those positive opportunities, as positive psychology researchers note that we often do the opposite, scanning the world for adverse circumstances, via a "negativity bias" that long served humans well from an evolutionary perspective.

Today, though, that thinking does us no good. Scan for good -- that's the lesson.

Tell me about something you've read that's made a real difference to you.

I'm an academic, which means that my career can be tracked through a long line of great books, so this question is hard. Most recently, I've become enamored with the new "positive psychology" research literature that has emerged over the past ten years or so, studying those who manage to remain resilient and flourish.

Researchers also found that drug use among pregnant teens was nearly 50 percent lower in homes where parents set limits and were actively involved.

EXPERT ANALYSIS

Expect Enforcement Continuity At FTC After Brill Leaves

Commissioner Julie Brill's departure from the Federal Trade Commission, which leaves the FTC with only three commissioners, will likely not affect the outcome of votes on antitrust or consumer protection enforcement actions in most major cases, but it may have an impact at the margins, in particular with regard to the relief demanded by the commission in consent decrees, say attorneys with Arnold & Porter LLP.

Without Compromise, ACA Contraceptive Row May End In Tie

Though a relatively small percentage of employers will be affected by the U.S. Supreme Court's decision in Zubik v. Burwell, the stakes are high for those it will reach. How Employers Can Successfully Challenge Agency Guidance

In terms of employer requirements, many agency interpretations follow the applicable statute or regulation closely. However, several recent cases demonstrate that an agency's interpretation can be successfully challenged, especially when it has recently changed a previous interpretation or has rendered an interpretation of a new issue, says Daniel Davis, a special labor and employment law counsel at Proskauer Rose LLP.

INVESTMENT COMPANY EXECUTIVES INDICTED FOR $1.5 BILLION PONZI SCHEME

WASHINGTON – The president and chief executive officer and two former Asia-based executives of a Las Vegas investment company were indicted today for their roles in an alleged $1.5 billion Ponzi scheme.

Assistant Attorney General Leslie R. Caldwell of the Justice Department's Criminal Division, U.S. Attorney Daniel G. Bogden of the District of Nevada and Special Agent in Charge Laura A. Bucheit of the FBI's Las Vegas Division made the announcement.

"The defendants allegedly preyed on thousands of unsuspecting Japanese victims to enrich themselves by operating a billion-plus dollar Ponzi scheme," said Assistant Attorney General Caldwell. "This prosecution shows that the Criminal Division will pursue not only those who victimize American citizens, but also those who use the U.S. as a home base to defraud victims abroad."

"Investment fraud and other financial fraud cases are a high priority for the U.S. Attorney's Office in Nevada," said U.S. Attorney Bogden. "These defendants are accused of using a Nevada corporation to conduct their $1.5 billion fraud scheme and falsely telling thousands of overseas victims that their investments would be safely held and managed by an independent, third-party escrow agent in Nevada. Fraudulent ruses and schemes perpetrated by Nevadans using Nevada corporations and entities will continue to be addressed by this office."

"These indictments are a reminder of the FBI's determination to identify, investigate and bring to justice those who are committing financial crimes against innocent consumers," said Special Agent in Charge Bucheit. "We are appreciative of the continued support we receive from our international, federal, state and local law enforcement partners."

Edwin Fujinaga, 68, of Las Vegas; Junzo Suzuki, 66, of Tokyo; and Paul Suzuki, 36, of Tokyo, were charged in an indictment with eight counts of mail fraud and nine counts of wire fraud. Fujinaga also is charged with three counts of money laundering. The indictment seeks from all three defendants forfeiture of the proceeds from the alleged crimes.

Fujinaga was the president and CEO of Las Vegas-based MRI International Inc. (MRI). Junzo Suzuki previously was MRI's executive vice president for Asia Pacific, and Paul Suzuki previously was the company's general manager for Japan operations. MRI purportedly specialized in "factoring," whereby the company purchased accounts receivable from medical providers at a discount, and then attempted to recover the entire amount, or at least more than the discounted amount, from the debtor.

According to allegations in the indictment, from at least 2009 to 2013, Fujinaga and the Suzukis fraudulently solicited investments from thousands of Japanese residents, and MRI currently owes investors over $1.5 billion. Specifically, the indictment alleges that Fujinaga and the Suzukis promised investors a series of interest payments that would accrue over the life of the investment and that would be paid out along with the face value of the investment at the conclusion of the investments' duration. The defendants allegedly solicited investments by, among other things, promising investors that their investments would be used only for the purchase of medical accounts receivable (MARS) and by representing that investors funds would be managed and safeguarded by an independent third-party escrow company.

The indictment further alleges that MRI operated as a Ponzi scheme, wherein the defendants used new investors' money to pay prior investors' maturing investments. According to the indictment, the defendants also allegedly used investors' funds for purposes other than the purchase of MARS, including paying themselves sales commissions, subsidizing gambling habits, funding personal travel by private jet, and other personal expenses.

The charges contained in an indictment are merely accusations. A defendant is presumed innocent until and unless proven guilty.

This case is being investigated by the FBI's Las Vegas Division. Significant assistance was provided by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, the Criminal Division's Office of International Affairs and Japanese authorities. This case is being prosecuted by Assistant Chief Albert B. Stieglitz Jr. and Trial Attorney Melissa Aoyagi of the Criminal Division's Fraud Section and First Assistant U.S. Attorney Steven W. Myhre of the District of Nevada.

Defendants.

CRIMINAL INDICTMENT

2:15-cr-198

VIOLATIONS:

Title 18, United States Code, Section 1341—Mail Fraud (Counts One through Eight) (as to all defendants);

Title 18, United States Code, Section 1343—Wire Fraud (Counts Nine through Seventeen) (as to all defendants);

Title 18, United States Code, Section 1957—Engaging in Money Transactions in Property Derived from Specified Unlawful Activity (Counts Eighteen through Twenty) (as to defendant FUJINAGA); Title 18, United States Code, Section 2—Aiding and Abetting (Counts One through Twenty as to defendant FUJINAGA, Counts One through Seventeen as to defendants JUNZO SUZUKI and PAUL SUZUKI).

CLV001788

The Grand Jury Charges that at all times relevant to the Indictment:

BACKGROUND

1. Defendant Edwin FUJINAGA was a United States citizen, residing in Las Vegas, Nevada.

2. Defendant Junzo SUZUKI ("J. SUZUKI") was a Japanese citizen, residing in Tokyo, Japan.

3. Defendant Paul SUZUKI ("P. SUZUKI") was a Japanese and United States citizen, residing in Tokyo, Japan.

4. MRI International Inc. ("MRI") was a Nevada Limited Liability Corporation located and operated in Las Vegas, Nevada. Defendant FUJINAGA owned and controlled MRI as its President and CEO. MRI operated a Service Center located in Tokyo, Japan. Defendant J. SUZUKI was at various times MRI's Executive Vice President (Asia Pacific), and Defendant P. SUZUKI was at various times General Manager of MRI's Japan operations.

THE SCHEME AND ARTIFICE TO DEFRAUD

5. From at least 2009 and continuing until at least in or about April 2013, FUJINAGA, J. SUZUKI and P. SUZUKI, and others known and unknown to the Grand Jury, aided and abetted by each other, made, and caused to be made, numerous material misrepresentations and omissions designed to fraudulently induce investors to transmit money to MRI.

6. As part of the scheme and artifice, the defendants represented, among other things, that MRI was engaged in the business of purchasing medical accounts receivable

CLV001789

("MARS"), that is, debts owed by recipients of medical services or products to the individuals or entities that provided those services. MRI purported to purchase the accounts from providers at a discounted rate and then collect on the accounts from the patients owing money. MRI's profit from this activity, according to the defendants, was generated from the difference between the price at which MRI purchased the MARS and the amount MRI collected on them due to MRI's purportedly superior collections capability.

7. As a further part of the scheme and artifice, the defendants, and others working with them, solicited investments in MRI by offering Certificates of Investment (hereinafter "Certificates"), claiming to provide investors with consistent, predictable returns resulting from its superior collections ability. The defendants marketed and sold the Certificates primarily, if not exclusively, to Japanese citizens through MRI's Service Center in Tokyo. Bearing a face value equal to the amount of the initial investment, the Certificates promised a series of interest payments which would accrue and be paid, along with the principal, when the Certificates reached a specified maturity date. When the Certificates reached maturity, investors were given the option to reinvest the total amount due and owing into a new Certificate instead of receiving a "liquidation," or cash payment of the amount they were due.

8. As a further part of the scheme and artifice, the defendants fraudulently induced investments by knowingly publishing, mailing, distributing, and transmitting promotional materials that falsely represented that MRI would use any money invested in the Certificates exclusively to purchase MARS, the purported profitable business of MRI. The defendants also falsely represented to investors that investment money would be held and managed by an independent, third-party escrow agent in Nevada using a "lock box" method that prevented MRI, or anyone else, from expending investment money for any purpose other than the purchase of MARS. Based on these and other false and fraudulent representations and promises, the defendants induced thousands of investors to invest a total of over $1.5 billion in MRI Certificates.

9. As a further part of the scheme and artifice, and contrary to all representations the defendants made to investors, MRI functioned almost entirely as a Ponzi scheme, that is, money solicited from new investors was used to pay prior investors' maturing investments.

10. As a further part of the scheme and artifice, and contrary to all representations the defendants made to investors, the defendants regularly expended investor money for things other than purchasing MARS, including paying themselves sales commissions, subsidizing gambling habits, paying for personal travel by private jet, and other personal expenses.

11. As a further part of the scheme and artifice, the defendants made such other false, fraudulent, deceptive, and deceitful representations as necessary to advance their fraudulent scheme, conceal their fraudulent activities from others, avoid detection, enrich themselves, and cause devastating losses to their victims.

Good morning, everyone. Today marks 10 months that The Indy has been in existence, and I continue to be thankful for my marvelous team and for the miracle of caffeine. (Scotch has been helpful, too.) We have become the go-to, credible source of political, government and public policy news, and we continue to evolve. (New features coming soon!) This nonprofit model is hard, and I am still adjusting to my role as editor/chief fundraiser/Riley Snyder straight man. (And these millennials do not respect my emoji ban at all!) I truly appreciate all of you who have either donated to our endeavor, given me advice or just been readers. Thank you.

There will be no premium content this weekend. Deal with it.

DANCES WITH WOLFSON

A lot of the attention, and rightly so, has been focused on Attorney General Adam Laxalt's bizarre I-want-to-abstain-but-I-can't-so-I'll-vote-no behavior in the case of a pardon for an obviously innocent man. Ray Hagar got Steve Sisolak to unload this week. The facile "Adam's tough on crime and followed what law enforcement's lead" is just embarrassing, defensive and false. (He tried to abstain!)

But what about Clark County District Attorney Steve Wolfson? And the two prosecutors who used to work in the DA's office who are now judges?

We have been trying to get some questions answered from Wolfson, whose office sent a letter to the Pardons Board trying to squelch a pardon for an innocent man. Why?

I sent a series of questions to Wolfson this week:

Could you please answer the following questions:

Do you stand by every word in the letter your office sent to the pardons board, including that Steese pled guilty twice to the murder?

Do you believe the prosecutors conducted themselves with rectictude during the prosecution of Steese?

If Steese was guilty of murder, why agree to let him out of prison?

I assume your position seeking re-election is that Steese is not worthy of a pardon?

Indeed, we have reached out multiple times to Wolfson's office for comment, with no response. I wonder why. Isn't he proud of his office? He's running unopposed so far, too.

Why the silence, Mr. DA?

TRIVIA QUESTION OF THE DAY

This is the 12th anniversary of the closing of a Las Vegas Strip property that now sits on the edge of another shuttered project. What place closed and what dormant site is it on?

Thursday's winner: Henderson's David Cherry

The question: "You don't have to shout to prove you love America." What Nevadan said this on this date in history as he was elevated to a powerful position and what was the position?

The answer: Harry Reid, Dem leader

Subject: ONDCP Designates Alaska HIDTA- First regional designation since 2001

Dear Friends,

I am happy to announce the designation of the areas surrounding Anchorage, Fairbanks, and Juneau as High Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas (HIDTA). With this designation, the Office of National Drug Control Policy (ONDCP) is establishing the first new regional HIDTA program since 2001. This decision enables Alaska to receive Federal resources to further the coordination and development of drug control efforts among Federal, State, and local law enforcement officers, and allow local agencies to benefit from ongoing HIDTA initiatives that are working to reduce drug trafficking across the United States.

This historic designation brings the HIDTA program full circle, and they will now be located in all 50 states. The HIDTA program plays a vital role in the United States by keeping dangerous drugs off of our streets. We look forward to working with the local, tribal, state and Federal partners in Alaska to connect them with the resources they need to address the unique challenges they face.

The HIDTA program was created by Congress in 1988 and serves as a catalyst for coordination among Federal, state, local, and tribal law enforcement agencies operating in areas determined to be critical drug trafficking regions of the United States. Law enforcement organizations working within HIDTAs assess drug-trafficking problems and design specific initiatives to decrease the production, transportation, and distribution of drugs. Some HIDTAs across the country also work closely with local partners to reduce the demand for drugs, including public health officials that work to connect drug users to treatment, especially after an overdose. With the designation of portions of Alaska, there are 29 HIDTAs located in 50 states, as well as in Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, and the District of Columbia.

Additionally, Alaska currently has three Drug Free Community (DFC) support funded community coalitions located in Sitka, the Ketchikan, and Mat-Su Valley.

Thank you for the work you are doing to keep your communities safe, healthy, and drug free,

- James W. Carroll
Deputy Director, National Drug Control Policy

Subject: Barking dogs/Animal Control Help

To Whom It May Concern:

My name is Kimberly Snyder. I live at [redacted]. I am the homeowner.

Ever since I purchased my home in 2015, I have been dealing with barking dogs. Specifically, my adjacent neighbor leaves his dog outside almost all day, if not the entire day. It barks all of the time, especially if I am in my own backyard, trying to enjoy my pool. I understand that it needs to be outside to use the restroom; however, this dog is left outside for hours, and therefore barks for hours. I know you probably think I am exaggerating but I am not.

I have notified my neighbor several times regarding this issue via face-to-face conversation and texts. He thinks that "dogs will be dogs" and that he is not doing anything wrong. So the problem persists to this day. (I have never complained when the dog was kept INSIDE!)

As you are aware, Clark County Code of Ordinances Section 10.36.010 entitled "Noise annoyance" CLEARLY states that dogs must not be kept so that their barking "causes annoyance to...any person in the vicinity." My neighbor is in OBVIOUS VIOLATION of this ordinance.l

So here is the problem. I reached out to Clark County Animal Control regarding this issue. I was emailed the following response:

You

Clark County Animal Control still does not accept anonymous noise complaints. Please be advised that a post card will be mailed to the residence of the offending party and both parties will received a letter from the Neighborhood Justice Center for a request for mediation to resolve the complaint. This process is intended to provide for quick resolution. The Neighborhood Justice Center letter should arrive a few days after the postcard is received. Should mediation fail to resolve the problem you will need to contact our office to be provided with a District Attorney's packet in order for the case to be screened for potential prosecution. This process also requires the corroboration of two additional neighbors to process the criminal complaint. All witnesses will need to agree to testify in court.

Thank you,

Madeline-1034

Clark County Animal Control
2901 E. Sunset Rd
Las Vegas NV, 89120
Phone: 702-455-7710
Fax: 702-455-8102

As you have read:

1. Animal Control no longer responds to noise complaints. I was told from Commissioner Sisolak's office that this is because

Animal Control is short staffed (and cannot respond to the thousands of complaints called in yearly). So obviously this is a huge problem throughout Las Vegas, and the county's response is to cut funding for it?

2. Court ordered mediation is the first step now, then the DA's office. However, the DA's office needs TWO NEIGHBORS to be WILLING TO TESTIFY IN COURT. So proving obvious guilt is contingent upon me finding two neighbors willing to go to court? What other violation (=crime) requires two independent neighbor witnesses? Especially when such issue could be substantiated with one visit from Animal Control!

I implore you to please look at this failing system for barking dogs. I beg of you to please do something about this. Or please direct me to someone who can truly make a difference and help me.

Thank you so much,
Kim Snyder

Please record our comments for the Reecommending Meeting on July 15 and City Council Meeting on July 17

For most of the first 18 years that we lived in Queensridge, we had a wonderful green space in the Badlands Golf Course. When we drove in the gate to Queensridge, we saw an expanse of green lawns and lush trees. We saw ponds filled with ducks and geese who used the ponds for themselves and their babies as a refuge until they flew each winter to a warmer climate, returning in the Spring. Although the golf course was always busy with golfers, we could stroll along the course's roads at any time. We live several blocks from the golf course, but it was always a source of enjoyment and restoration for us and was a symbol of the heart of Queensridge.

Since the development of Badlands began, the area has changed dramatically. The ponds have been drained and the birds have left. The grass has not been watered and has dried to brown, and the remaining dirt has converted to dust, desert shrubs, and hard dried ground. Many of the trees have been cut down to stumps. Now, when we enter the gate or walk on the road outside the golf course, we are confronted with huge signs warning in large red letters about no trespassing and no dumping with threats of prosecution..

Even if the developer was allowed to build, we have been told that he could build on the golf course land for at least 20 years, so that the disruption in the community from the construction could continue for decades. At the end of the process we would have lost our open green space, to be replaced by houses and apartments.

The only hope we have to restore any kind of normalcy is that the Open Space Ordinance remain in place. Now we are told that the City Council is considering repealing the ordinance. This will affect not just us in Queensridge, but other communities as well.

When the City Council is considering whether or not to repeal the Open Space Ordinance, please do not allow this disruption and ugliness to continue here or be inflicted on other areas of the Las Vegas community. If you are trying to improve the quality of life in Las Vegas to maintain a world class community, your planning must consider the restorative open green spaces and the emotional, cognitive, and physical health that nature provides to all of us. These green spaces should not just be limited to parks we can visit, but should be included within each development where ever possible.

Thank you for your consideration of this very serious matter.

TEXAS

Texas Justices' Reversal Of Atty Fee Ruling Hinges On Comma

The Texas Supreme Court on Friday held that a free-speech law that puts plaintiffs on the hook for a defendant's legal fees if the case is thrown out mandates "reasonable" attorneys' fees that cannot be reduced on the basis of “justice and equity,” basing its decision on the absence of a punctuation mark in the statute.

Fla. Justices Say Agency Must Pay For Records Act Violations

The Florida Supreme Court has resolved an appeals court split by ruling that a prevailing party is entitled to statutory attorneys' fees when it is found that a public agency violated the state's Public Records Act, regardless of intent by the agency.

EXPERT ANALYSIS

In Congress: IRS, FAA, Puerto Rico

The Senate is aiming to wrap up consideration of the Federal Aviation Administration reauthorization bill this week and conclude work on the long-stalled comprehensive energy reform bill, while the House will be zeroing in on legislation to provide more oversight of the IRS. Richard Hertling and Kaitlyn McClure of Covington & Burling LLP share a snapshot of the week ahead.

The Brokaw Act's Long-Term Consequences For Activists

The proposed Brokaw Act — a set of amendments to the Section 13(d) disclosure rules ostensibly designed to address supposed “short-termism” — reads like a corporate defense advocate’s wish list, designed to curb and possibly eliminate activist activity. But those who decry activists ignore the profound risk of increased management entrenchment if Congress hobbles the activist community, says Jason Soncini of Kleinberg Kaplan Wolff & Cohen PC.

FAA Reauthorization Bill Attempts National Drone Policy

The Federal Aviation Administration Reauthorization Act of 2016, which was recently introduced in the U.S. Senate, specifically addresses federal preemption in the area of drone operations. It is a bold and important proposal because only two other instances of express preemption exist regarding aviation, say Mark Connot and Jason Zummo of Fox Rothschild LLP.

New Debt-Equity Rules May Have Gone Too Far

Recently proposed regulations under Section 385 of the Internal Revenue Code, which relate to characterization of interests in corporations as stock or indebtedness, would overturn the long-standing treatment of certain intercompany debt arrangements and could have far-reaching effects on U.S. and foreign companies, say attorneys with Mayer Brown LLP.

NHTSA Overreached By Claiming To Regulate Apps

In a recent bulletin, the National Highway and Traffic Safety Administration claimed that its jurisdiction extended beyond motor vehicle parts to software. But apps are a different kind of animal than anything the NHTSA has regulated in the past, and this unsupported pronouncement may end up stifling innovation, effectively hindering the development of emerging motor vehicle technology, say attorneys at K&L Gates LLP.

Subject: Your Email to Mayor Goodman

Good Afternoon, Mr. Rothberg,

Thank you for contacting Mayor Carolyn G. Goodman. Have you called the Legal Aid Center to help you? This organization provides a free service that may be able to assist in this legal dispute. The number is 702-386-1070, and you may tell them Mayor Goodman suggested you call. While we're happy to hear your health has improved, we respectfully suggest you stay focused on the legal matter at hand—that you returned the furniture but continued to be charged for it even after you were told you would not be.

We are also copying in Mr. Ortiz, the aide to your Las Vegas City Councilman, Bob Coffin, who may be more familiar with the particular property since it is in his ward. Should you wish to call him, his number is 702-229-6405. He may also have some suggestions as to other properties in the immediate area that meet your criteria.

Again, thank you for taking the time to write. We're pleased to know you enjoy living in the Fremont East area and hope this matter will be satisfactorily resolved.

Sincerely,

Lora Kalkman

Mayor Goodman,

An issue has come into my life at the most inopportune time. I do not know who to turn to. I need the correct help. I need it quick

I will share back story and events leading up to the pressing issue at hand

I am a 59 year old male. In 2005 I was diagnosed with severe [redacted]. From that day forward my life was no longer my own. By end 2006 I was no longer able to work. A couple difficult years later I qualified for federal disability benefits. After nearly 7 years in a "walking coma" from disease, opiates, benzodiazepines, neuro drugs, psych drugs, ambien, antiseizure, and more drugs, tests and treatments, in late 2013 I told my doctor I wanted off all the chemical drugs. A rough three months later I was off all chemical medicines and have been ever since. I began a natural approach to my wellness focusing on food as medicine. My health began to improve while still the New York weather was still causing me much pain and flares of symptoms-conditions. In August 2014 I accepted invitation to leave Millbrook, New York to try the hot, dry deserts of Phoenix for my conditions. I felt improvements in days. Opportunity arose to move to Las Vegas early 2015. I moved to Vegas in April 2015. I love it here. I do not to ever want to leave. In October 2015 I became a Nevada medical marijuana patient. By end of November 2015 I began treating myself with cannabis protocol. In days my wellness improved and has improved ever since. One year later I am in the best physical condition in a decade. I am in the amazing spiritual-mental state we are Blessed to after looking death straight in the eyes, take him on in a battle to the death, and win. I am ready to give a go at becoming a working member of society again. I want to work at getting off the disability and become a productive member of the Las Vegas community. Over this past year I have met many people in our medical marijuana establishments. Being someone who has healed himself using full plant cannabis medicine I have much to offer our growing Nevada medical marijuana industries. I am enrolled in Trim Ready dispensary class 11/20/2016. I am enrolled in both the Cultivation Class and Edibles manufacturing classes on 11/27. When I complete dispensary certification on November 20th I will ask Brenda Gunsallus, owner of Sahara Wellness, my favorite person in the business, to sponsor my MME Agent card. I am just a few short weeks away from being a vetted member of the Las Vegas medical marijuana industry and onto a new life. I am Blessed to be the real deal success story that when you do not give up, regardless the odds against, fight hard fearlessly, you can win over anything. I am proof that for me cannabis changed my life from dark shadows of disease to a bright sunny new future in the city of lights I want to share my experience, skills, and knowledge, with others. I am once again looking forward to the future.

Here is my pressing issue.

I have lived in this same apartment at Ogden Villas, [redacted] for 18 months (702-818-5109). I rented furniture from Ogden Villas for $40 per month on top of my $425 month rent as I arrived in Las Vegas with just backpack and suitcase . By September 2015 I had acquired my own furniture. I put in a written request with Ogden Villas to have the rental furniture removed. The complex removed the furniture before September was over. When I paid my November 2015 rent for $425 I was told by office manager Jody Blackley I must continue paying $425 rent plus the $40 the furniture they took back or be evicted. I replied that is ridiculous. She replied it is the way it is. Jodie was moved to another site. Manager Liz, the manager who originally signed me into Ogden Villas, replaced Jodie. I brought attention to Liz that I am still being made to pay for furniture I returned. Liz said paying for furniture I returned makes no sense, she will look into it, and I must still pay the $40 for furniture I returned until it is figured out or be evicted. Liz moved to another a site. Manager Patty put a notation in my file I am still being charged for furniture I do not have. After thirteen months of being told by every floating manager that I must continue paying for products & services I do not receive under threat of eviction I receive notice my rent is being increased $40 to $505 (copy attached). They are raising my rent forty dollars each month on top of my already being overcharged $40 each month for furniture I do not have. I see this as a common sense opportunity to clear the slate by me accepting not paying November 2016 rent $465 for the $520 Ogden owes me for furniture and start the year off with this long overdue issue sorted and done. I write up a proposal (copy attached), give a copy to manager Patty to give to Jody, and mailed a copy to Plenty of Places corporate offices. On Thursday November 3rd I received email from Plenty of Places stating I can no longer access my online plenty of places account. Thursday November 10th I found an eviction notice attached to my door (copies attached).

I am a model tenant who has done nothing to cause any trouble here nor anyone anywhere.

I have paid my rent on time every month since I have been here. I have not once been a bother to anyone. All my neighbors like me. I keep to myself and do not get involved with the dramas of other residents. My apartment is clean without ever a problem with insects.

While Ogden wants to charge me $505 a month rent there are other tenants on disability benefits who were residents who were here before me that are paying $425 per month

I had three important stipulations to making the move to Vegas. 1 Tile floor, 2 second floor, 3 near a store

1. My decade of wicked battles against an invisible illness no one understands is brought to me by a tiny insect bite I did not know I received. Carpet grosses me out in a sense. Like indoor grass. For someone disabled with cans-joint related conditions with chronic pain maintaining carpet is an added chore. This apartment is all ceramic tile and is ideal for my needs

2. To have the stairs as a forced form of exercise. I prefer the less noise and traffic. I have trees outside my window. One year past a walk down Fremont to The Experience was an accomplishment. Today, most days, I walk over a mile around the neighborhood enjoying the Las Vegas sunrise with coffee. I commonly walk to our senior center on bonanza, library right up N LV Blvd., anywhere I want to go. I am truly Blessed beyond belief in all aspects of life

3. Store for access to necessary supplies close by when physically unable to make it to proper markets. The owners and crew at 7-Eleven Fremont & 15th all know me. After 18 months we get along quite well.

My requirements were met with this apartment and I moved here. I love my apartment home here in Downtown Fremont.

I have no money to move nor anyplace to move to. No friends nor family to help. I lost everything to battle with disease including nearly all my past family and friends. Thinking my offer so common sense and in favor of Ogden Villas they will accept I spent the $465 skipped November rent on renewing my medical cannabis card and enrolling in the three Nevada mme certification courses. If I am evicted over this lack of action by this company who admittedly owes me but is unable to reach a solution other than evicting their debt (me) I will be put out homeless on the street with the little I can carry. My two cats I rescued from shelter over one year ago will go back to the shelter. The few belongings I have been able to accumulate over this past 18 months into the dumpsters. Ten years battle against invisible illness to get into the position to once again have an on the grid life shattered. All of this because a manager Jody Blakley, who's agents lead me on for 13 month, refuses to see the common sense and right in not evicting a disabled, good tenant, who offers to accept $465 to clear up the $520 it is her cause the company she works for owes me

Friday morning, November 11th, I spoke with Fatima from Plenty of Places corporate offices. We spoke in length about Ogden Villas and this situation. Fatima assured me she will speak with her manager and get back to me by end of day. Fatima did not get back to me

Monday morning, November 13th at 11:15 am I called Fatima at Plenty of Places corporate offices to see what progress she has made on this issue (562) 989-9932). Fatima told me her and Jody Blakley have been speaking about this situation but have yet to come up with a resolution. Fatima assured me she will speak with her manager and get back to me by day's end. Fatima did not get back to me.

I am concerned Fatima is stretching this out as Jody has done with the furniture overpayments, and before they get back with a resolution the police will be at my door evicting me to the street

Is there anything you can do to help Plenty of Places see the wrong in kicking out a good tenant who just wants the fair deal of not paying for products-services not provided, with the slate clean for what they have overcharged me? I agree to pay the $40 increase on top my $425 true rent for $465 per month beginning December 03, 2016

Please feel free to check me out. I am one of the good guys. I have had a life Blessed with many jobs, careers, experiences, knowledge, and skills, in a variety of industries that I am looking forward to putting to use after not being able to work at all for over ten long years. I am here to help.

What I am looking for exactly:

1. November Rent Receipt showing rent paid
2. Notice in change of terms of tenancy showing my monthly rent $465.00 due by 3rd of each month
3. Letter from mgr Jody Blakley's supervisor stating there will be no discrimination, retribution, nor actions, against me by Jody Blakley over this issue

Thank you for your time, considerations, and continued service

Sincerely,

Jon Andrew Rothberg
